

occasionally by the people protesting against the exportation of rice, show a disturbance of a serious nature. The governor reports there is evidence that a general revolt of the peasantry was planned. Democrats attacked the railroad officials, declaring that no more rice should leave Vitoria, and severely beat a Jewish grain dealer who was blamed for the whole trouble. The peasantry also plundered the rice levees of the grain dealers and finally combined in an attack upon the railroad station. The railroad officials sent for the assistance of the military and the latter tried to dislodge the rioters. The rioters resisted stubbornly, and their supporters outside the railroad station made a fierce attack upon the soldiers. Finally the officer in command of the troops, after repeatedly threatening the crowds, gave the order to fire on the rioters. The soldiers then fired a volley, killing three peasants and wounding a number of others. The rioters soon dispersed. Other and somewhat similar disturbances are reported from Durban, Vint and other places, but no details have yet been made public.

PROBABLE SUICIDE.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—J. S. Freeman, a traveling salesman for a tailoring firm of this city, who started for Montana last Tuesday, has either carried out his threats by committing suicide or succeeded in concealing himself from his employees and friends. A letter has been received dated Sacramento, August 29, in which he stated that he had been robbed of all his money there, that he married for the second time on the 8th day of May, his first wife being still alive, and that he intended drowning himself in the Sacramento river. Freeman's employees believe that he committed suicide, as indicated in the letter, while suffering from despondency, as he was very melancholy when he started out. Freeman was formerly in business in Ellensburg, Wash., where his father lives.

The Great Benefit.
Which people in run down state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength, but Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up in a perfectly natural way all the weak parts, purifies the blood, and assists to healthy action those important organs, the kidneys and liver.

BALMACEDA WHIPPED.

The Insurgents Capture Valparaiso.

A HORRIBLE CASE.

Pine Nut Mine, United in Death, Prairie Fire, A Fratricide, The Grangers, Fell Through a Floor, Cruise of the Mermaid, Great R. R. Scheme, State and Foreign News, Etc.

NOW IT IS THE OTHERWAY.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Acting Secretary Wharton, of the state department, received the following cablegram last night from U. S. Consul McCreary, at Valparaiso: "A battle was fought near the city this morning. The government forces were badly beaten. Heavy loss on both sides. The city surrendered to the opposition, but in the hands of the admirals of the American, German, French and English fleets, for good order. No communication with Santiago. The position forces are now entering this city."

VALPARAISO CAPTURED.
NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The Herald yesterday devoted a page to Chili news. Its Valparaiso dispatch says that Balmaceda's power in Chili is broken, his army has been crushed after five hours hard fighting, and scattered beyond all hope of reorganization. The revolutionists have taken possession of Valparaiso with Balmaceda practically a fugitive without resources in men or money, with the principle supports in the hands of the congressionalists. With President-elect Vicuña a refugee on board a German war ship, and the country flocking in masses to the standard of the invaders, it is a matter of only a few days when the capital will fall into the hands of the revolutionary leaders. General Canto and his army won today's battle by superior generalship and hard fighting, assisted by good fortune in killing off Balmaceda's generals and the consequent demoralization of the army and desertion of entire regiments. Furthermore, there has not been harmony in the military councils of President Balmaceda, as both Barboa and Alzereca wanted the supreme command. This jealousy resulted in an almost open rupture, and these officers worked at cross purposes.

Balmaceda was in no condition to assume the offensive and Canto was in no hurry to move, partly because he was receiving constant accession to his ranks and partly because he had strongly entrenched his position. Early this morning, however, the booming of cannon announced to the people that a movement to the south of the city had begun, and the occasional loud reports of cannon soon swelled into a continuous roar. Canto's position was on the hills above the racetrack at Vina del Mar. He had absolute control of the railroad to Santiago and commanded the ordinary roads. Affairs had come to such a pass that it was necessary for Balmaceda to make some move. Accordingly, at daylight this morning word was given to take the position held by the revolutionists, and the government troops advanced under cover of a heavy fire from their batteries.

As soon as the approaching columns got within range a destructive fire was opened by the entrenched revolutionists. The government troops, however, advanced steadily. They were soon near enough to return the fire, but shot, shell, grape and canister tore through their ranks, until, despite the efforts of the officers, they broke and retired, almost in a panic. As soon as they got outside of the range of the deadly fire, the officers worked like bees to reform their column, and at last succeeded. Then came another attack. In steady ranks the government troops started on double-quick time up into the torrents of fire and lead which blazed from the insurgents' ranks. General Barboa was killed and the line wavered for an instant but then went on. A short distance farther on, General Alzereca fell from his horse wounded unto death. Again the line wavered and General Canto gave the order to charge, with a wild yell. The congressional army left their defenses and charged on the now retreating enemy. The artillery poured a deadly fire into the ranks of Balmaceda's troops. The loss of officers had left the latter without a head and all efforts of the subordinate officers to rally them were of no avail. The retreat became a rout and a panic and then utter demoralization. The government cavalry made a stand, but it was short. They were literally cut to pieces. Volley after volley was poured into the demoralized mob.

A whole regiment, which had not lost its regimental formation, went over to the victorious troops of Canto, and joined in the attack on their late comrades. These deserters were generally volunteers who had been impressed by Balmaceda since the beginning of the hostilities. Their sympathies all along had been with the insurgents and they grasped this first opportunity to go over to them. The fighting lasted less than five hours, and its desperate character may be judged by the fact that fully 5000 men were killed and wounded. The country for miles around is filled with men, many of them wounded, who were this morning the dependance of Balmaceda. The defeat of the government is absolute. There is no possibility of reorganization, and if Balmaceda does not succeed in making his escape through the mountain passes the chances are that he will be captured and shot. President-elect Vicuña early took the alarm when the stragglers began coming in from the battlefield. He went aboard the German flagship and asked protection of the admiral. It was granted. Then Vell sent a communication to Admiral Brown, of the United States navy, and commanding officers of other foreign fleets requesting them to send men ashore to protect their citizens, as the probabilities were there might be trouble.

A party of marines and blue jackets from the cruiser San Francisco quickly came ashore and took up positions about the American consulate. Other naval officers followed suit, and soon there were enough foreign sailors and marines on shore to protect the city against intruders. The streets of the city by 11 o'clock were filled with the disorganized Balmacedan soldiers. The executive officers of the officers had been ordered. In addition to General Barboa and Alzereca, nearly all the staff officers had been killed or wounded, and the fatalities among the line officers had also been great. To avoid bloodshed, which would probably have resulted from the victorious army entering the city, heated by the fire of battle, Vell sent a flag to General Canto with a proposition to surrender the city. It was accepted, and Senor Walker Martinez, the congressional leader, took possession of the city shortly after noon, the victorious army began to enter Valparaiso, led by General Canto, with his staff. The insurgent troops were greeted with the wildest enthusiasm. The people were wild with excitement and the streets resounded with the shouts "Viva Chile, Viva Canto," shortly after the army entered, Captain Fuentes, of the torpedo boat Almirante Lynch, was summoned to surrender. He attempted to steam out and opened fire with his machine guns. There was a sharp engagement, but Captain Fuentes finally hauled down his flag, and there was not an enemy to the revolution from Fort Valdivia to Vina del Mar.

During the afternoon such of the troops as were in the city delivered up their arms and were paroled. The city is quiet as could be expected. Nobody here has any knowledge of the whereabouts of Balmaceda, although the insurgent leaders are exceedingly anxious to find him. The general belief is that he is making his way out of the country, perhaps overland to Buenos Ayres.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 29.—The unexpected turn of affairs in Chili is the subject of paramount interest at the state and navy departments. No details of the capture of Valparaiso has yet been received. It is not believed Balmaceda has been completely defeated. As long as Balmaceda remains in possession of Santiago the capital of Chili and until the congressional party shall move set up a defacto government the department of state must continue to recognize Balmaceda as the president and Senor Lazo as minister to Chili.

THE NEWS CONFIRMED.
NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—W. R. Grace has received a dispatch this morning from their house in Valparaiso confirming the report of the complete victory of the insurgents and the fall of Valparaiso. The firm is of the opinion the result of the battle is equivalent to the overthrow of the Balmaceda government.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 29.—Up to noon today nothing in regard to yesterday's battle at Valparaiso was received at the headquarters of the Congressional party in this city. The envoys hardly expect any details of the fight by telegraph today. The insurgent leaders it is thought will immediately remove their headquarters from Iquique to Valparaiso.

THE GRANGERS.
WILLIAMS GROVE, Pa., Aug. 29.—Yesterday was the banner day of the week at the Patrons of Husbandry assembly. It is estimated that the crowd numbered fully 70,000 persons. Addresses were made in the morning by Dr. John Trimble, secretary of the National Grange, W. C. Gifford, master of the New York State Grange, and R. S. Downing, of the Pennsylvania State Grange; and in the afternoon by Mortimer Whitehead, of the National Grange; Rev. James Collier, of the Pennsylvania State Grange, and J. T. Allman, lecturer of the Pennsylvania State Grange. State Senator Loyd spoke at the meetings in the evening.

A FRATRICIDE.
GEORGETOWN, Del., Aug. 29.—George and William Walker, two brothers residing at Reynolds' mill, a few miles from here, became involved in a quarrel over some horse feed, when George Walker picked up a shovel which was near by, and struck his brother a terrible blow over the head, which felled him to the ground. His skull was fractured and he died yesterday. The assailant is still at large, and the Milton authorities say they will not touch the case until the family bring a charge against the assailant, which they are slow to do.

PRAMIE FIRE.
FAULKTON, S. D., Aug. 29.—All the northwestern part of Faulkton county was burned over last night by fire twenty miles wide and extending from Faulkton, fifty miles northwest. Farmers are ruined for a space of twenty miles no grass is left for stock. Damage cannot be estimated.

FELL THROUGH A FLOOR.
PORTLAND, Aug. 29.—At a few minutes before noon yesterday David McFadden, a carpenter employed on Goodenough's new building at the corner of Fifth and Yamhill streets, fell from the third to the second floor, a distance of over twelve feet, and sustained serious internal injuries.

UNTED IN DEATH.
GRAYLING, Mich., Aug. 29.—James Burns has been living on a farm near Red Oak for four years. He was 45 years old, apparently of considerable means and culture, and lived quietly with a handsome girl 18 years old, whom he said was his daughter Alice. Burns had not been seen for several days, but the neighbors paid no attention to the matter, as he was reserved, and seemed to care only for his daughter. Yesterday Herman Grosby went to the house, but could not get in. He found a famishing horse in the barn and then broke in the rear door of the house. A horrible stench nearly drove him back, but on going into a back room, he discovered Burns' body on a bed with the girl's body lying across it. A light cord around the girl's neck showed that she had died of strangulation. There were no signs of a struggle, and everything in the house was in order. The supposition is that Burns died a natural death or choked himself by poison, and that the girl, on discovering his death, strangled herself. Papers in the house showed that the girl was not Burns' daughter.

THE PINE NUT MINE.
CALSON, Nev., Aug. 29.—J. W. Haines, Nevada's World's fair commissioner, left Carson last night with many specimens of gold from Pine Nut for Chicago. Senator Haines visited the mines in company with C. C. Kellogg, the man who built the first quartz mill in Gold Hill years ago. Zira took both into a drift never before opened to anyone. Haines says: "The mine is simply wonderful. I have been in Nevada and California since '39, and during that time I have visited and been interested in every camp of importance including Virginia, Gold Hill, and Bodie, and I am prepared to say that this beats them all. I saw in one tunnel, by candlelight, chunks of gold sticking out of the quartz as long and full as a cigar. Bodie in its palmy days never was in such a good way. Nevada will be heard of again throughout the universe. It is the grandest mine I ever saw."

GREAT RAILROAD SCHEME.
CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 29.—A morning paper says: It is generally understood that Jay Gould has virtually relinquished control of the Union Pacific Railway that the stocks and bonds of the company have been placed in the hands of banking firm of Drexel, Morgan and Co. have acquired control of the Union Pacific in the interest of the Vanderbilts. They are the financial agents of Vanderbilts and are also in control of the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul. This indicates a close alliance between the Union Pacific and North Western and St. Paul roads when completed. Vanderbilts have long been anxious to secure a foot hold west of the Missouri river and gain an independent outlet for their system of roads to the Pacific coast. It is not likely they will be content with the Union Pacific alone but that they mean to acquire other important railway systems west of the Rocky mountains. If the Vanderbilts succeed in getting the Rio Grande, it is believed their next move will be to secure control of the Southern Pacific and there is no serious obstacles in the way of their getting it. Will this road in their control, the Vanderbilts will be able to dictate terms to all other lines so far as through traffic between the Atlantic and Pacific are concerned. Gould is probably interested in this scheme and has an understanding with the Van Derbilts and Drexel, Morgan & Co., whereby his railroad interest in the West will receive ample protection.

PESSIMISM.

As the sound of the sea breaking on a rocky coast.
At midnight, when the winds are up and the clouds
Terrible, rushing headlong on athwart the sky
Far as you can track them, a wild, tumultuous host,
So comes to me the sound of the surge of existence
In the deep hours of the night of my soul's sorrow;
I see with my eyes the clouds rushing on,
And no morrow
Respite shall bring from grief's ever gnawing persistence.

For what is lost is lost, and I never shall find it:
Cruel and unreturning are the cold and unshaken dead.
My grief is mine own, and unheeding of me
Still beats the storm, the wind ever driving behind it.
Then, sitting here beside me, listening on the sea shore,
Seem't to hear voices come to thee out of the night.
Do not see aught in the storm and the swirl of clouds' flight?
Is it eyes or a form that shall see, alas! no more?

It shall never come back to thee. 'Tis a wraith
From the storm, the wind ever driving behind it.
Tossed up from the tumbling waters broken on the shore;
The voices thou hearest are the wind and the surge
Speaking to thee alone, who mournest of love forlorn.
And thou, who hearest, thy breast and strident
Moaning thy fate and lifting thy hands to the sky,
Crying, 'Woe's me!' and snuffing deep drawn sighs,
What doest thou think that the weak shall have help from the strong?

And thou, with upturned eyes and arms on thy breast
As thou standest in patience that hopes in the pillowed storm,
What doest thou think that the weak shall have help from the strong?
Or all thy prayers bring back to thee what thou hast lost?

Only black night and winds in an ever storm
And the low wailing of the pounding of billows on the shore;
And the night that dreary and monotonous
As in the night to the night the night goes by.
—James Davis in London National Observer.

The Care of Brushes.
It is very common to find people who are dainty in all their surroundings and who consider themselves thoroughly neat, who yet are careless about drying their toilet brushes. To wet a brush and have it shut up in a close box insures its being moldy and rank in a short time. All toilet brushes that are used for the hands, mouth or teeth should be thoroughly rinsed and hung up where they will dry in a draft immediately after they are used. It is a good plan to rinse them and hang them in strong sunlight.

There are little racks which hang on the wall to hold the nail and the tooth brushes, and which serve the purpose of drying them better than any other contrivance which we have. If they are dried in an ordinary mug the water drips down and discolors the tip of an ivory handle. Above all things, the tooth brush should be kept scrupulously clean, and it cannot be done unless it is kept thoroughly dried after being used and occasionally exposed to the purifying effects of the sunlight.—New York Tribune.

Sold the Ticket.
An enterprising member of a popular cycling club in Rochester recently held a raffle of a valuable wheel. The tickets were two dollars each, and among the purchasers was a clerk in an up town store. The clerk was not present when the drawing occurred, but his ticket proved the winning number. Several hours later an acquaintance dropped into the store and casually asked the clerk what he would take for his ticket. He named three dollars as the price and the bargain was promptly completed. "That ticket is the winner," said the purchaser gleefully, holding up the cardboard. "I know it," was the response, "and I've just been down after the wheel."—Rochester Democrat.

There are two men at work at this stand, and it has an air of prosperity.—New York Sun.

A HORRIBLE CASE.
MONTREAL, Aug. 29.—A terrible case was brought to light here last night. Dr. O'Connor was called into the house kept by Mrs. Gallo-way to attend a dying baby. He found three women in a destitute condition, on the bed were six infants one of them dead while four others were dying. The unfortunate women told a harrowing tale. They are all employed as servants who had been betrayed and went to the house where found for refuge. The woman of the house who was supposed to look after them skipped out and the inmates were left in a destitute condition, all were at starvation point. All the infants with one exception will die.

A HARSHENED WRETCH.
PARIS, Aug. 29.—A youth named Ballet, who was convicted of committing several murders, was beheaded at Danard, near Lille, in the department of Danard, yesterday. The execution of this young criminal is remarkable from the fact that he exhibited the calmest demeanor, and seemed to have the most utter disregard for death. The young rascal positively refused to listen to the priest's comfortings and admonitions.

CRUISE OF THE MERMAID.
ANTWERP, Aug. 29.—Captain Andrews, of the dory Mermaid, says he had good weather until thirty-five days out from Boston, when a terrible storm came up. August 16 a huge wave filled the Mermaid with seven inches of water. Next a tremendous wave capsized the boat and Andrews thought he was lost. He was in the cabin but managed to open the hatch and, climbing the keel-tightened boat, he prayed to God, for the sake of his family, to give him another chance; he would stop this business. He then closed himself in the cabin again and passed two days and nights in the same way. The wind all this time blew with such force that when he opened the hatch the little wind he respired caused a sound like a big whistle. His lamp oil was exhausted, and, being too fatigued to keep watch, he lay on the bottom of the boat four days until picked up by the steamer Ekbruz. Andrews declares he will never attempt such a voyage again.

GOOD FOR AMERICA.

The use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Severe cases of scrofula, upon which other preparations have been powerless, yield to the peculiar curative powers of this medicine. Distinguishing cases of dyspepsia, excruciating complaints of the kidneys and liver, eczema, itching humors, and all other eruptions of the skin, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, and at the same time tones the stomach, creates an appetite, and gives strength to every function of the body. Give it a trial.

General Debility
For four years my wife suffered with large tumor on the glands under the throat, and general debility of the whole system. She became so poor in health that we were on the verge of despair regarding her recovery. Physicians did not seem to understand her case; at all events she never derived any benefit from their treatment. She finally concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The immediate effect was so marked and satisfactory that she continued to take it, and this is the result: She has gained in weight 25 lbs., and is now in the best of health. From 84 to 111 Pounds and is stronger and in better health than she has been for years. The tumor under her arm has diminished, and we believe Hood's Sarsaparilla will be too much for them in time.
