ART DECORATIONS.—They are the newest thing in modern catering establishment, in place of paper or fresco. The large dining room at Strong's has been ornamented with eight landscape, mountain and marine views in oil painting. On each side are large pictures, the sea view being "Moonlight on North Head," showing Golden Gate Lighthouse, California, and the other on the left is "Yosemite Valley." "The two panels at either side of the entrance are "Mt. Hood from Portland Heights," and "Morning Sun on American river Canyon." The other four panels are Beckwith Peak from Sugar Loaf Mountain, Cal.; Independence Lake, Sierra Nevada, Mts.; Falls on South Yuba River, and a sunset view over the coast mountains from the Sierra range, with the Marysville buttes and Sacramento Valley lying between. It is a great improvement on an already fine dining room, and looks still better at night under the electric light. Westacott & Irwin seem determined to leave nothing undone to make their establishment attractive. The paintings are the work of the artist in the firm of Cook Bros. & Voeth, and reflect great credit upon his skill with the brush.

A FREAK.—The wonders of vegetation do not cease. The Cascade mountains are especially fruitful of new ideas in nature. Travelers report all sorts of new products and lightning photography on leaves is not uncommon. On the road to Mehama there are several miles of dogwood trees coming into a second bloom and the foliage all variegated yellow and green. It is supposed this is the work of lightning flashed upon the masses of leaves.

ELECTRIC BAND CONCERT.—This evening the Second Regiment band will give a grand free open air concert at Electric Grove, Simpson's add. on the electric car line. Seats are provided for all and Simpson & Rogers will serve ice cream and refreshments. Come out and enjoy it.

BLOOD WILL TELL.—Tomorrow evening Dr. Ellis, scientific lecturer for J. C. Ayer & Co. will deliver an address on the above subject, also will give the young ladies of Salem a receipt, how to choose a husband. Go to your druggist and he will give you tickets, free to adults. A valuable book presented to all ladies. Reed's opera house.

BIGGEST YET.—Talk about your big wheat threshing records, here is one that beats all others so far. Thos. Bruce reports threshing 2800 bushels in one day and moved and set three times on the Oliver Beers place last Wednesday.

WAIVED EXAMINATION.—W. N. Carnahan, who was arrested at Ashland for passing a worthless check on H. S. Simon, appeared before Justice Applegate this morning and waived examination. His bail was fixed at $250, and he is bound over.

BASEBALL.—Jo Leveque is making fine progress and expects to be a spectator at Wednesday's game. Catcher Stanley of the Salems, was called to Portland to catch today and will be back to catch for Salem's tomorrow.

TWO INSANES.—Robert Christianson, a Danish seaman, 30 years of age was received today at the asylum.....Rodney Love also of Portland, was brought up Monday night. He is a young cigarmaker aged about 30, not lovesick, but heartily sick of love by this time.

FINE COLT.—Charles Gabrielson has brought his fine colt off pasture and it is a beauty. It is by Director Jr., full brother to Direct (by Director) the horse that recently paced in 2:09¼. The dam is also of good breeding.

DON'T GET CROSS.—No, don't, but if you want a superior steak, roast, boil or cold piece of meat or anything else in that line, don't fail to call at E. C. Cross' State or Court street markets.

AT ACTUAL COST.—The Capitol Adventure Co. are closing out fine clothing, hats, shoes and gent's underwear at actual cost to them. tf

THEY SAY—That Brannon has the finest watermelons in the city. See the cash grocer.

THE SPECIFICATIONS.

The Second City in Oregon to be First in Street Pavements.

The plans and specifications for grading, graveling, curbing and guttering twenty-five blocks, or over two miles of Commercial, Court and State streets are now completed and ready for the action of the council.

THE PLAN

in detail will result in a finished surface street. The curb on the business part of the streets will be placed 14 feet from the lot. On the residence parts the curbs will be at 20 feet, leaving about a 60 foot street to be paved including gutters. Where a solid foundation now exists there are to be 6 to 8 inches removed for a gravel roadway. All the coatings of gravel are to be rolled with a heavy iron roller. All fills of over 8 inches are to be made of material taken out of the streets, unless the citizens committee say other should be used. The courses of gravel consist of, 1st, a 3 to 5 inch layer of gravel 1 to 2 inches in size; 2d, 3 inches of fine gravel to cover this, both courses rolled seperately; 3d, sand to finish. The only tiling is a 4 inch tile under the gutter. The expense is roughly estimated at $4000 a block, or $5 a foot front for all abutting property, or about $100,000 for the 25 blocks.

The ordinance committee will present the perfected plans and specifications together with the bids on Sept. 15th. City Attorney Richardson says he will have everything in readiness for the council to look at tonight.

The defacto board of public works named in the specifications are Alderman J. C. Johnson, Bankers Breyman and England, Merchant John Hughes and Manufacturer H. Stapleton. The gentlemen named are Republicans and heavy property owners, together possessing a half million easy enough.

ROBBED.

The On-Lee Company Lose by an Early Morning Robbery.

All the money was in the cigar box. The cigar box was in the money drawer. Several early rising celestials got up at 5 a. m. to go hop picking and took the cigar box out of the money drawer and were just to take the silver change along with them. Three men who were just out side looked through the window on State street, saw the Chinese handling the money, and two walked in, took the box, emptied it of its contents and disappeared down the alley before the astonished mongols really knew what had happened to them. They were still so excited this forenoon that they could tell the police nothing definite as to the appearance of the highwaymen, and they have no clue to the crime.

A RAILROAD FIGHT.

Citizens Resisting the Attempt of Southern Pacific to go Down Front Street.

A petition is being circulated among property owners on Front street to be presented to the city council asking them to repeal a former ordinance granting the S. P. Co. certain rights from Trade to North Mill Creek along the city front. The effort of this move will be to shut out a railroad track down to the old Scotch mills on Front street. The citizens are bitterly opposed to giving up that street to the railroad company. The local railroad people say they do not particularly care to put a track down there as the mills will only ship by rail when they cannot use the river. The movement to get the track down there is believed to originate entirely with the milling company people, who declare they cannot operate the mills without a track to get wheat in and flour out.

These great remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. At Fry's Druggists.

PURSUING A NOISY PHANTOM.

Experience of a Daring Sailor in Hunting Down a Real Ghost.

A. S. Chatfield was in the United States navy several years and cruised in every sea.

"The experience that left the most lasting impression on me was one I had with ghosts," said he to the reporter. "Now I do not believe in ghosts for one minute, but the experience I had is one I am not able to explain away. There is hardly a day of my life that I do not think of it. We stopped at a Mexican port, and hadn't been there very long until we learned that the natives were much excited over a haunted house that stood off by itself in a lonely part of the town.

"All the brave men in the place had visited the house to hear the ghosts, and the experience was such that no one could be induced to go back a second time. The second mate of our ship and I decided to investigate the ghosts. We firmly believed that some one was slipping into the house and making the strange noises reported as being heard. The mate was a man who knew no fear, and we agreed that we would go prepared to kill the first ghost that made its appearance.

"We prepared for the expedition by cleaning and loading four good revolvers and by providing a dark lantern. In the afternoon we went to the house and examined it carefully for secret entrances. Every foot of floor and wall was examined, and we saw that the doors were all securely bolted on the inside, except the one to which we had a key. Soon after dark we went to the house and made a second examination, and found it as we had left it in the afternoon.

"We then took our seats in the front room, with our face toward an open door leading into another room. The house was quiet as death. The mate held the dark lantern, with the slide on, and we each held revolvers in our hands. After we had been there perhaps half an hour we heard a noise like one makes in slightly pulling a chair nearer a table.

"A moment later the chair in the room which we were facing seemed to be picked up and set down again. Then we heard footsteps, and pretty soon the room resounded with noises. The scant furniture, it seemed, was being thrown pell mell, and the racket became unearthly.

"'Now is our time,' said the mate in a whisper. At that he turned on the dark lantern and sprang into the room. The moment we entered it the noises ceased and it was vacant. More than that, the furniture stood just as we had left it. We examined the doors and windows, and they were as we had left them. The floor, too, was examined, and no opening was there. Before we had finished our examination noises began upstairs and in other rooms.

"A dozen men with heavy boots seemed to be running up and down the stairway. With our dark lantern we ran up stairs and through the several rooms, but could see nothing. Whenever we would enter a room the noises would seem to be in the next room—or all over the house for that matter, except in that one room. To make the story short, we remained in the house until daylight and the noises continued all night.

"We chased from one room to another until we were almost completely exhausted, and not once did we catch sight of any living object. We couldn't have been mistaken in the noises. It couldn't have been imagination, for neither of us was excited or frightened. Those noises were made in the house, but what by is the greatest mystery of my life."—Indianapolis News.

Japs Less Docile Than Chinese.

Whether Sir Edwin Arnold has not given us a just idea of the Japanese people or whether the American atmosphere has demoralized the guileless sons who have come from the "Flowery Kingdom" to the western coast it may be too soon to determine. But the experience of a vinegrower of Napa, Cal., who employed nearly two score Japanese in his orchard has brought with it the conviction that in industry, sobriety and discipline they cannot compete with the Chinese. This man says that his workmen one day refused to work. He discharged them and hired substitutes in their places, but they returned armed with knives and took possession of his house. From this intrenched position they were only ousted by a body of police.—Chicago Tribune.

To Measure the Sea Level.

An apparatus for measuring the mean level of the sea is announced. It is based on the principle that when a liquid wave traverses a capillary tube or a porous partition its amplitude diminishes, and it is retarded in its phases without the mean level of the wave changing. It consists of a glass tube, the lower end communicating by a flexible pipe with a plunger which is lowered beneath the lowest water level. There are two cells in the plunger, the lower being filled with sand and open to the sea, the result being that the column of water in the tube rises and falls very little with the tides, and the mean sea level can be read from a graduated scale.—New York Sun.

HOW TO CARE FOR A MAN'S CLOTHES.

Simple Rules That Everybody Knows, but That Are Worth Telling Over.

"It is not a very difficult task to take care of one's clothes," said a man who, though he has but moderate means, appears well dressed, "and it pays to do it. It is better to have a number of suits and to wear them off and on than to wear one suit continuously until you are ready to lay it aside for another. If you have say four suits, and change every day or two, they will retain their shape and freshness through a given period better than four suits each worn steadily during a quarter of that period.

"When clothes are worn constantly the creases in the coat sleeves and the bunches at the knees of the trousers become pronounced and confirmed, and they cannot be pressed out so that they will stay out. If clothes are hung up properly after wearing, their own weight and the elasticity of the cloth help to preserve their shape.

"A man should never hang up his coat by the loop made for that purpose if he can avoid it; if hung up in that way it will sooner or later sag out of shape. It is almost impossible to fold a coat so smoothly and loosely that it will not crease; it is certain to do so if it should be left for a few days, especially in damp weather. There is just one proper thing to do with a coat when it is not in use, and that is to hang it up carefully on a coat hanger.

"My house is small, and I have only one room to myself, and that room has no closet. I keep most of my clothes in a wardrobe. I put a walking stick in the middle row of hooks screwed into the under side of the shelf, and I hang the hooks of the coat hangers on the walking stick. When I hang up a coat I am of course careful that it and the coats on each side of it are left smooth. The coats hang pretty close together, but they are in an even row, and some part of each is visible. I don't have to pull them about to find the coat I want, and my coats are not so numerous but that I can identify each one at a glance.

"Of course, the best thing to do with trousers is to hang them on a hanger, but the next best thing is to fold them and lay them at full length. They must be folded true and smooth, so that the creases will come exactly right. I haven't room for the proper care of coats and trousers too, so I pile my trousers on the bottom of the wardrobe.

"The edges of each pair are in view and selection is easy. If I take any pair below the top I have to lift off those above and then put them back. This is a slight inconvenience, but it is far better to take that trouble than to hang your trousers up by the straps, which should never be done."—New York Sun.

A Blind Man Who Is a Marvel.

Remsen Hegeman, of Flatbush, goes about the town freely, and never makes a misstep or collides with anybody, although he is stone blind, not having seen the light since he was seven years old, when he was shot in the face, and he is now thirty-five. He does many odd jobs in the most satisfactory manner, taking a clock apart, for instance, cleaning it and putting it together again. He makes trips to Brooklyn alone, and never fails to get a Flatbush car.

On one occasion he went into a store where a number of persons were trying to adjust a double swing hinge to a door. They experienced some difficulty in accomplishing this, until Mr. Hegeman brought his talents to bear upon it, and the feat was accomplished. He was formerly the lamplighter of the village, and was regularly seen at dusk going about from one lamp to another, and never missing one. His memory is wonderful, and he never forgets a voice once heard, even after the lapse of years.—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

A Complicated Case.

"I've got a job for you," said the hardfaced woman to the young lawyer.

"Yes!"

"That's what. Damage suit. You see, my man he goes to a picnic not long ago and there was a b'loon ascension. Of course he had to be foolin around helpin hold the thing down, and when the feller hollers 'let go' Eleazar—that was my man—he kep er hangin on and was carried up nigh a quarter of a mile. Then it kinder occurred to Eleazar to let go. Down he comes, right on the railroad track. That is, he would a hit the track, I guess, if a train hadn't been a-rattlin along jist then, which knocked him into a old well that was keerlessly left open near by. Now, I want to know who I'm goin to git damages from—the b'loon man, the railroad, or the feller that owns that well?"—Chicago News.

Ice for Seasickness.

Still another has been added to the long list of remedies for seasickness. And this, like all the others, is said to be positively efficacious. It consists in the application to the spine of a rubber bag filled with ice or ice cold water. It is claimed that within a short time after the application the nausea and vomiting cease, and the victim of mal de mer falls asleep. Moreover, that he does not suffer from chilliness or other disagreeable sensations.—Boston Herald.
