THE CAPITAL JOURNAL. HOFER BROTHERS, Editors. UNPUBLISHED DAILY, EXCEPT SUNDAY, BY THE Capital Journal Publishing Company. THE SALEM BOARD OF TRADE. All are agreed that the Salem board of trade should be reorganized. But who shall do the work? It would seem somewhat incumbent upon the management, which conducted its affairs so deplorably as to necessitate a reorganization, to get its scattered remains together again. The depression that for a year has rested upon the whole northwest Pacific coast has surely not weighted down Salem so as to make it impossible. Unless it is to be assumed that no one is concerned about a board of trade unless there is a cinch in connection therewith, there is no reason why it should not be revived. The cinch element itself is almost strong enough to run a board of trade if it could be organized. But its only element of existence is appetite and it therefore has no cohesive power. In all seriousness the Salem board of trade should be reorganized. This has been said the fortieth time and THE JOURNAL will say it over another fortieth time if need be, because it is convinced a board of trade can be made useful. It is one of those activities that tends to hold up a high-water mark of enterprise not elsewhere obtainable. It brings new people here—possibly some undesirable ones, but as there always were some of those the addition of a few more cannot harm. It tends to tear the fences down and let the outside world in on an equal footing. Without a board of trade Salem will lapse into the quiet humdrum of village ways in spite of the fact that she is a growing city. The growth of the past year was the result largely of people and capital brought here by the energetic work of the year before. Let that good work be renewed or people may be leaving here faster than they have come.

the sun—we see the white top wagons moving southward; we see Gen. Sherman in the prime of life, coolly watching his battalions as they pass by, and we see our beloved commander proudly riding at the head of his brigade. Whither we were going we knew not. We see the happy, smiling faces of the soldiers keeping step to the anthem, "John Brown's Soul Goes Marching On." We recall the long weary marches by day and the lonely vigils of the picket line by night; the panting of rivers; the wading of swamps; the constant marching by the side of the road to enable the artillery and wagon trains to occupy the road, and thus be close to us; the army of foragers sent out daily and returning at night loaded with the fat of the land; the petty annoyance given us occasionally by the Georgia militia, which necessitated putting forward a skirmish line to start them on the run; the vague and uncertain rumors that were daily passed along the line; "that we were going to Charleston, to Mobile, to New Orleans; Richmond had surrendered; Washington had been captured by Lee's army; Hood's army had crossed the Ohio into Indiana and would soon capture Chicago; the whole north was on the run; Sherman had cut himself loose without orders and was going to declare himself dictator; Lee's whole army was massing in our front; but notwithstanding all these reports, in the language of Gen. Belknap the marching went on just the same. All these incidents pass in panoramic view before our eyes tonight.

I have hastily reminded you of that great march of nearly 3,000 miles in the enemy's country, bushwhacked from every tree and stump along our pathway until we reached the capitol of our country we had fought to protect. General Belknap was our commander during this great pilgrimage—honored and loved by every one of us—a brave soldier, true friend, born to command men in battle and never faltered when the time came. Guiltless in life, tender as a child in his affection, immovable in his friendship—an honest man. He loved his brigade and we loved him. It was not his fate to die on the field of battle. It was not his fate to die surrounded by his loving companion and children and an army of devoted friends eager to catch the last words that dropped from his sweet lips, but could he have looked back and seen the great honor bestowed upon his memory—surely it would have made his great heart glad as it did all of ours.

THE NEW YORK SITUATION. The Democratic state convention in New York thus far has shown rather a monkey and parrot time rather than the cut and dried affairs that have been in order since Governor David B. Hill closed his grip on the state machine. The old New York city fight between Tammany and the county Democracy waged hotter than ever, but the former seems to stand in with the machine. It is still a question as to who will be the nominee for governor. This is the first time in the history of the state when the question of a leader was so utterly unanswered at the eleventh hour. Governor Hill absolutely controls the Democratic party in the state and can have the nomination himself or name the nominee, as he chooses. As usual, he has declined to indicate his desires or, rather, to dictate his orders, and the hosts of the unwashed are all at sea. Notwithstanding Governor Hill's political power, there are a good many Democrats in New York who do not favor this kind of treatment and some of them have not hesitated to declare themselves. With this indignation against Hill, joined to the open defection of Lieutenant Governor Erner, the old Hill-Cleveland fight, and the fight against Tammany in New York city, the brethren are not very well united to enter upon so close a contest as that now approaching.

On the other hand, the Republicans are entirely united and harmonious, more so than they have been for a dozen years. The candidate for governor, Mr. Fassett, is one of the strongest, ablest, cleanest and most popular men in the state. He is a personal friend of ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, the recognized Republican leader of the state, and is satisfactory to the various factions heretofore existing. The ticket which he heads is strong throughout. One of the closest of Warner Miller's friends, Mr. Vrooman, was nominated for lieutenant governor. Thus the strongest faction opposed to Platt is simply recognized, and a solid party front secured, for the first time in years. The platform is an excellent one and the party seems inspired with enthusiasm. The Republicans are united, while the Democratic factions are badly split. Cleveland's friends will not give his leading opponent their support, nor will Hill's friends warmly support any other man than the senator-governor. From all standpoints, the chances of Republican success seem better than they have since the days of Tilden. —TACOMA GLOBE.

The date of the preliminary hearing of the charges of smuggling against Neuberger, Reiss & Co., will be set at San Francisco Thursday. Editor E. L. Livermore, of the Livermore, Cal., Herald, was found guilty in a San Francisco court for masquerading in female attire. Judgment was taken in Harrisburg, Pa., in the case against Bardsley, the late treasurer of Philadelphia, for $394,000, being for the license tax. Latest reports from the Calispel country state the Indians are out in force and threatening the settlers. They are all well armed. Troops have been ordered to go from Spokane to the scene. Wong Chin Foo, born in China, but through a supposedly regular process of naturalization, regarding himself as a citizen of New York, went to United States Commissioner Shields Tuesday and asked for a passport. He wished to go abroad for a little trip and wanted something to show that he was a citizen of the United States. He told Commissioner Shields that he was 37 years old; that he came to this country when he was 14; that he had been in this country ever since, except for a three years' visit to China, and that he was naturalized in the circuit court at Grand Rapids, Mich., in April, 1874. When he asked for a passport Commissioner Shields refused him. Under instructions from the state department no Chinaman is entitled to a passport. Wong Chin Foo is anxious to know just how much of an American citizen he is. He has repeatedly voted at city, state and national elections, and having severed connection with China is, of course, cast off by that government. The state department at Washington declares that he is not entitled to full citizenship in America, and Wong finds himself in the desolate position of a man without a country. Among the immigrants who arrived at New York ten days ago, was Lina Dabbert, a comely young German. She was detained at the barge office, as she was likely to become a burden on the public. She named Carl van Hoff, of Milwaukee, Wis., as an old acquaintance, and one who might help her. A dispatch was sent to him and this morning Superintendent Oberine, of the Immigration office, received a response from Milwaukee as follows: "This is to certify that I, Carl van Hoff, am willing to marry Lina Dabbert, provided that I can do so by proxy, as I am too busy to spare time, and hereby authorize General J. R. Oberine to select some gentleman to act as my proxy." Accompanying this document was a communication from a notary requesting him to fix matters up for van Hoff, if in his opinion, the thing could take place as suggested. In the absence of legal authority the general decided that he could not safely become a party to the arrangement proposed. After a careful consideration of the facts Oberine decided to send the woman to Milwaukee on the strength of the proxy he had received.

THE GUATEMALA REVOLT. SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—General Reyna Barrios, who is most likely to succeed Barrillas as president of Guatemala, in case the choosing is fairly left to the people, was seen at the Occidental hotel General Barrios has been in this city for many weeks, but has been in constant communication with a number of the prominent men of Guatemala and is, accordingly, thoroughly posted on current affairs in the Central American republic. He read with the greatest interest the dispatches from the City of Mexico, and then said: "There cannot be any truth in the reports. It is impossible to keep news of such importance quiet so long. If there had been an outbreak in Guatemala September 15, as the dispatches say, we would have known it here within a few days later. My country has been opened to modern improvements. There are telegraph lines in many directions from the capital, and telephones as well. It is easy to communicate with San Salvador, and from there to send messages to this country. I must say that I do not believe anything that is contained in the dispatch, and would not even if the date did not make it ridiculous. I know my countrymen, and it is not like them to lose their heads and begin a revolt in such a way."
