GILBERT & PATTERSON.

Dealers in Groceries, Crockery, Glassware, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Brushes, Windowglass, Etc. Sole Agents for Epicure Tea and Big Can Baking Powder.

R. H. Mathews' new dressmaking parlors Cattle Block. First class work—no delay, no stairs to climb, shirts made to order.

How DISPOSED OF.—The seven cases in Justice Batchelor's court Friday, growing out of the Piety Hill early Friday morning assault and battery on J. P. Veatch and son John Veatch, have been disposed of. The jury composed of James W. Watt, foreman; Isaac McCully, A. C. Phelps, E. M. Smith, and Sampson Jones, were out nearly two hours and brought in a verdict at 10 p. m. of guilty as charged against W. D. McGee. This morning the judge assessed fine $5.00 and costs of $44, which Mr. McGee paid. All the other cases are dismissed by consent. L. F. Conn appeared for the defense.

OVERDRIVING.—"I have seen horses driven to death in three years," said a liveryman to a JOURNAL reporter today, in speaking of abuse of those animals. "And they were pretty fair livery horses, too. I prosecuted one man and sent him to the penitentiary for overdriving a horse. I tracked him over his whole route of travel and found he had gone exactly one hundred and thirteen miles without taking down the check rein. No wonder the horse died, to go that distance without food and water. No one has any idea of the abuse livery horses have to take." Liverymen should be warm friends of the humane society.

HORSES FEEL.—Blacksmiths complain of having to treat an unusual number of horses for mil in the hoof. They attribute the trouble to burning boards, boxes and building refuse containing nails on the streets. A wheel passing over one end of a nail will sink that end in the ground causing it to stand upright ready to penetrate the first hoof that comes down squarely upon it. A JOURNAL reporter was shown a whole heap of nails where such a fire had been. The horses suffer from such disposition of rubbish.

GRISMER DAVIES TONIGHT.—The opera house will doubtless be crowded to hear the picturesque new play, which will be presented at the Reed tonight. "Beacon Lights" has had a great run throughout California, and the lovers of fine drama will have rare treat. Secure seats early. Prices tonight: $1.00, 75 cents and 50 cents. Good seats for 75 cents. Electric car will wait till the play is over.

HARKINS ON DECK.—After being laid up for a few days, Jack Harkins will be found at his forge Monday in charge of the horseshoeing department at Pohl's shop on State street. He makes a specialty of fine horseshoeing, and owners of valuable animals for speeding, driving, or any other purpose can be sure of first class work.

SOCIAL.—The Old Folks' Whist club met Friday evening at the residence of Major Williams. There was a large and enthusiastic attendance and the company was entertained in the usual hospitable style in vogue at the mansion near the state house. The next meeting will be held at Eugene Breymann's.

MUSHROOMS.—They are now being brought to some of the stores and retail for 12 cents a pound. There is a limited sale, tho' inquiries at the restaurants for this fungus are on the increase. It is stated upon authority as a scientific fact that the mushroom contains all the constituents of eggs and beef-steak combined.

PENMANSHIP.—Do you wish to make your services worth more to your employer? You can do this by improving your penmanship, or learning to keep a set of books, at the Capital Business College night school. Open Monday evening, Oct. 12th.

STATE FUNDS.—The state treasurer began this morning to stamp all warrants "not paid for want of funds." The state treasury will be replenished when the 1891 tax levy is collected. His warrants draw 8 per cent, and there will be $300,000 adroit before March 1st, 1912.

"The Best." FOR RENT.—Good office room on ground floor. Apply at JOURNAL office.

Wm. Luke, a one-eyed Italian, from Portland for larceny, John Brook for assault with intent to kill in Yamhill county, and George M. McCullough for burning a barn near Newberg, are late additions to the penitentiary.

ALL SORTS. The county jail contains almost any kind of nationality that can be called for, except a full-blooded aborigine. There is a colored man, a Chinese, an Irishman, a half-blood Indian, a Scotchman, a German, and a red-headed American. Frank Smith, a temporary visitor from Polk county, for carrying concealed weapons, is doing good work as assistant superintendent at the wood pile.

"The Monthly Social for September is of great interest to all who have friends or company to entertain at their homes, or any kind of social gathering in home or church. Published at Council Bluffs, Ia., 60 cents a year.

A divorce has been granted between Dr. M. H. Ellis and wife, before Judge Boise in the circuit court in Yamhill county, the charge being cruel and inhuman treatment. Mrs. Ellis left at once for the home of her relatives in the east. She was married to Dr. Ellis at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and it is probable that she went there.

President Whitaker, of Willamette, goes to Dallas to spend Sunday. He will preach there and wherever he goes he makes friends for the school of which he is at the head. He preaches all by his sermons and is undoubtedly one of the most vigorous, versatile and eloquent pulpits orators on the coast.

MEDICINE HAT'S GARDEN.

It Blossoms Like the Flowers of Spring in Canada's Ranch Country.

At nearly all the stations on the Canadian Pacific railroad through Manitoba there are large glass jars over the station entrance containing fine specimens of the various cereals raised in the country. One can see nowhere plumper wheat or finer rye or oats than the specimens he is able to inspect as he jumps from the train to take a turn on the station platform.

Further west another sort of exhibition is given at the stations. It is not necessary through Manitoba to have gardens alongside the railroad track to convince the traveler of the remarkable productivity of the soil. The great fields of grain along the road are sufficient evidence that he is in a country of abundant harvests. But when he reaches the western Astinblin or Alberta, where the country is dryer, there are very few wheat fields to gaze at through the window, and the Canadian Pacific road has started a number of gardens at the various stations. The garden at Medicine Hat is a particular fine example, and has been laid out and attended with special care, because all passenger trains stop at Medicine Hat a half hour, and passengers have plenty of time to wander through the grounds just across the track from the station.

Medicine Hat contains, perhaps, 400 people. It has a weekly newspaper, a neat little church, several good stores and public buildings, and an important station of the mounted police. It lies on the right bank of the South Saskatchewan. Many travelers climb the little knoll covered with graves behind the town to get a view of the surrounding country. The graves are covered with stones to prevent wild animals from digging out the bodies. Wooden head boards, on which are painted the names of the dead, stand over the graves, most of which are surrounded by picket fences.

Below the knoll extends the little village, with the swift river beyond, which is navigable for nearly 800 miles from this point almost to Lake Winnipeg. Far away on every side stretch the plains, but toward the north are a line of buttes, perhaps 400 feet high, which vary the monotony of the landscape with their grim, bare and perpendicular fronts. Beyond the river are farms where some grain is raised, but the chief industry of this country is stock raising. An ocean of grass covers the prairies, and cattle ranches are multiplying.

The company desires to prove that by means of irrigation good crops may be raised. Its garden at the station, therefore, is carefully watered, and it is as fine a garden as can be seen anywhere, except on the Pacific coast itself. Cabbages, potatoes, Indian corn, flowers in great profusion, and small trees are seen in a very flourishing condition. A number of apple trees are growing very well.

The garden is a most pleasing spectacle to tourists, weary perhaps by the unending prairie through which the train has been passing. It is not at all unlikely that some day considerable land in this region will be irrigated by means of the streams that flow through it, and the success of the Medicine Hat garden seems to show that nothing but water is needed to produce abundant crops.—New York Sun.

Why the Earthworm Thrives.

In this country the earthworm is perhaps the most abundant animal of any size; it would be difficult not to meet with worms by digging in almost any locality, and yet it is one of the most persecuted creatures that breathe. Not only do birds hunt it unceasingly, but the gardener, armed with a watering pot and solution of corrosive sublimate, slays his tens of thousands. When they seek for refuge deep down in the soil they are pursued by moles; centipedes and various insects attack them, and in fact every one's hand is against them. But, in spite of this general hostility on the part of animate creation, they thrive and multiply.

The first and principal reason for this is their great fertility; and the second is their great power of recovery after accidents which would rapidly terminate the existence of more highly organized creatures. An earthworm can lose a considerable portion of itself without suffering, apparently, even temporary inconvenience, and indeed some of the fresh water animals, which are near relations of the earthworm, voluntarily divide themselves into several pieces, each of which becomes a new worm.—Chambers' Journal.

Will the Earth's Motion Cease?

Is the motion of our earth and other planetary bodies perpetual? A superficial survey of the field would convey the impression that such motion will continue forever. The earth with its mass of 3,000,000,000,000,000 tons for a long time defied all attempts to detect its loss of speed, but, with the friction of the tides continually at work, it was shown that such loss must take place, and now it is pretty certain from calculations of Professor Adams and others that the earth loses about an hour every 16,000 years, and is slowly but surely coming to a standstill.

The experiments and investigations of modern scientists are proving what Sir Isaac Newton believed—that the motions of all bodies in space are suffering retardation, and that their velocity is becoming less and less and will ultimately cease altogether. Then the whole planetary system will fall through space everlasting.—St. Louis Republic.
