French Sentiment.

However soon the Prenchwoman may exchange the memory of her dear husband for that of another still dearer she may be trusted to do the decent thing by his grave. In some of the small towns in France it is the custom for the widow to put the favorite plant of her husband upon the grave. A woman recently returned from France tells of seeing a grave in one cemetery bearing a small cherry tree upon it because that had been the favorite fruit of the departed bushand. In another corner she saw a grave that was a beautiful bed of rhubarb, and in still another a plot of cresses and another of of a tombstone to perpuate it to pos- cabbages.

The Brain of the Lunntle. If there is anything which has been taught to us by the most advanced stage of science as applied to the anatomy, the physiology and the pathology of the brain it is the fact that the utomy, the physicology of the brain it is the fact that the utmost degree of mental aberration may exist without there being the slightest change perceptible to our senses in the normal structure of the central organ normal structure of the central organ of the mind. Of course there is some alteration, such, for instance, as a pernicleus education may effect, such as may be induced by indulgence in ignoble emotions, degrading trains of thought or vicious practices; but it is so slight and perhaps so evanescent as to be entirely beyond the reach not only of our unaided senses, but of all the instruments of precision or of analytical processes that are at the present day at our disposal. The brain, therefore, of the most pronounced lunatic may not differ, so far as we can perceive, from that of one who during life had stood at the very summit of human mental development. At birth the two brains might have been identical, not only in all the elements that entered into their composition, but also in their tendencies and proclivities. One, however, started in the course of life under disadvantageous circumstances; the other had everything in its favor. One was left to its own guidance and to the influence of circumstances detrimental to its well being: the other, among beneficial surroundings, was carefully trained and developed. Would it be a matter of surprise if the possessor of the one should be an enemy of society and a perpetrator of acts of fraud and violence and the other a leader in all honorable and virtuous purposes?-Dr. W. A. Hammond in North American Re-

A Month's Vacation.

Once upon a time some years ago I made a great walk. I had a month on my hands, and I was young and eager, and I determined to go afoot from Devonshire into Scotland. Since then I have been here, there and everywhere Tilmon Ford, attorney at law, Salem, about the surface of our old earth—by about the surface of our old earth-by steamer, sailing ship, express train and slow train, on horseback, muleback and donkeyback; but I remember nothing with so much pleasure as I remember my daily courses through the different counties of England during this 500 or 500 mile walk.

livery morning I woke in a new village or a new market town. There has a different chambermand, with her risks m. sweet "If you please, sir, the hot water is at the door," and a different kind of booliace. I did not rush over the has street, General practice, special meaning of five and transfer attention given to discusse of Women and ground. Twenty or five-and-twenty miles a day contented me. Thus I could dine after a ten mile spin, and arrive each evening fresh and fit at the next "Red Lion" or "White Cow" inn, upon which I relied for a bed .- All the Year Round.

The Servant Question.

It is a curious fact that there is nothing which is so wholly unanimous as the desire that other people's daughters should be cooks and chambermaids. should be cooks and chambermaids. The whole difficulty of this relatives? The whole difficulty of this much vexed question seems to lie precisely there.—T. W. Higginson in Cisely there.—T. W. Higginson in the cisely Harpers' Bazar.

Politeness the Key to His Success.

There is a suave and popular gentle man in this town who owns two drug shops. He is a member of several social organizations, and is personally acquainted with every prominent politician and man about town in New York. Up to within a few years ago he was night clerk in a down town pharmaceutical dispensary. How did he get his feet on the upper rounds of the ladder of prosperity? Simply by being polite. During his long term of service as clerk he never let a customer depart without a pleasant inquiry as to the customer's health and the inexpensive courtesy of "Won't you have a drop of perfumery on your handkerchief?"-New York Times.

Hard on the Chairs. Among the ancestors of Wendell Phillips were several Puritan clergymen. Perhaps it was a push of heredity which made him at five years of age a preacher. His congregation was composed of circles of chairs arranged in his father's parlor, while a taller chair, with a Bible on it, served him for a pulpit. He would harangue these wooden auditors by the hour. "Wendell," said his father to him one day, "don't you get tired of this!" "No, papa," wittily replied the boy preacher, "I don't get tired, but it is rather hard on the chairs!"--Youth's Companion.

Story of a Tenderfoot.

A young man from the east was hired to plow a field near Madeira. One day he found himself surrounded by seven hungry coyotes. He left his team and broke in a swift run for the house, and quit work right there. The team was found all right by the owner, a woman, who told the tenderfoot to go back home to his mother, while she finished plowing. - San Francisco Call.
