Downing His Rival.

It was night, sweet, delicious night, the crisp, clear, moonlit October night of the temperate zone, one of those nights on which all the poetry in a man's and a woman's nature rises to the surface and on which there is naught but love and calm delight in the heart. It was therefore strange to behold a young couple facing each other and regarding each other with looks so cold and chilling that an iceberg would have seemed like a furnace in their vicinity. "I know why you wish me to leave you," he said in sharp and metallic tones,

Country Life in the Argentine. In a new country the traveler must not be particular, much less exacting; above all he must not expect to find refinement among the inhabitants, whose whole efforts barely suffice to sustain the combat against the elements. Still I cannot refrain from noting the impression of sadness and disgust procolonies of the pampa, and by a glimpse of the life that the inhabitants lead. Verily the majority live worse than brutes, for they have not even the cleanly instincts of the beasts of the field. Their houses are less agreeable to the eye than the Esquimau's but. The way they maltreat their animals is sickening to behold.

Rarely do you see the face of a man, woman or child that does not wear a ferocious expression. In the villages there are no clubs, no libraries, no churches, no priests, rarely even a school. The men and women work, eat and sleep. During my whole stay in the Argentine and in all the centers that I visited I was struck by the utter absence of moral restraint, and by the hard materiality of the faces of the people from the highest down to the lowest. -Theodore Child in Harper's.

What It Costs to Smoke.

Dr. F. B. Nofsinger, Kansas City's postmaster, does not snoke very much, but he has nevertheless sent a number of greenbacks up in clouds during the past thirty years. 'The doctor is a comfortable sort of man and likes to enjoy the good things going. He does not smoke more than five eigars a day-he thinks more might be injurious to his health. This makes a total of 150 per month, or 1,800 in a year, which number multiplied by thirty, the number. of years the doctor has been given to the weed, gives a grand total of 54,-

These cigars retail at ten cents apiece, but Dr. Nofsinger buys them by the hundred, and in that way the expense is but seven cents to the unit. At seven cents apiece the 54,000 cigars smoked in thirty years would cost $3,780. Had these been purchased at | ten cents apiece the expense would have been $5,400. And in consideration of the fact that the postmaster is a pretty good kind of fellow he must have given away about $1,000 worth. Rather a snug sum of money, the moderate smokers cigar bill for thirty years.—Kansas City Times.

THE HABIT OF BATHING.

Beneficial and Injurious Effects Considered by Medical Authority. No practice, however long established, has ever been allowed a permanent right to respect. Sooner or later its turn will come to be weighed in the critic's balance and its quality will duced by the eight of the towns and have to be proved. Let us quote, as an illustration, the habit of daily bath ing, the utility of which has of late, though not for the first time, been seriously questioned.

The reasonableness of doubt in such a matter and under ordinary circumstances, does not, we confess, commend itself to our judgment. Whether the opponents of ablution fear the shock of cold immersion, or whether they dread the elemening stimulation thus applied to the exercting skin surface, their objection must appear to most persons possessed of ordinary health and vigor to threaten impair ment of both by fostering uncleanliness. If, on the other hand, it is the too free application of heat by Turkish and other warm baths which appear objectionable, we will not deny that there is here a possible ground for complaint.

Let it not be supposed that we ignore the curative influence or the cleansing property of this method when used with judgment. It is true, however, that experience has often proved the mischievous effect of its misuse-in cases, for example, of cardiac weakness or general exhaustion. Cold bathing. in like manner, is not without its occasional risks. It is not suitable for persons enfeebled from any organic cause, though mere nervous languor is often braced and benefited by it. It has no proper place among the habits of those who are subject to chronic visceral congestions.

As regards one advantage derived from bathing-i. e., its cleansing property-there is no reasonable ground for difference of opinion. Less practiced by one people than another though it may be, there still is commonly recognizable a constant habit of ablution, and this in itself attests at least an almost universal belief in the necessity of washing. Nor can we find reason to doubt the general soundness of this belief.

In bathing temperature is, of course, a chief consideration. For the robust, cold immersion followed by rapid frie tion is a valuable tonic of nerve, skin and heart function. For less vigor ous constitutions—those, for example, which have been tried by disease and

A Clockwinding Snake-Dr. Willis in his "Land of the Lion and the Sun," recounts one of his own experiences in Persia In my first house in Shiraz, an old and handsome one, I was continually annoyed by a buzzing, as of the wind ing of elpe work. This I was told, proceeded from the snakes, but I sever anw one, though the buzzing was to be heard in all parts of the house One morning I was attracted by an unusual twittering of birds, and on looking out saw some thirty sparrows on the top of a wall, all jumping about in an excited manner, screaming, chattering and opening their beaks as if en inged.

At first I was at a loss to understand the cause of such a commotion, but presently I saw a pale yellow snake ad ganeing deliberately upon the birds from the wooden window frame, out of which he hung. They appeared to be all of them quite fascinated, and none of them attempted to fly away. The snake did not take the nearest, but de liberately chose one more to his liking. and swallowed it.

Glad to be rid of my buzzing annoy ances. I got my gun, and notwithstanding the entreaties of the servants, some of whom wept assuring me that the reptile was inhabited by the late master of the house, I gave him a dose of duck shot

He was a big snake about four feet long I cut him open and extracted the sparrow After some ten minutes' exposure to the sun the bird got up, and in half an hour more flew away apparently unhurt.

Shortly afterward a servant of my landlord came and took away the snake's body, and all my own servants sulked and looked black for a week. When I spoke to my landlord, however, an educated man, he laughed, and simply congratulated me, saying that the clockwinding snake had annoved him for years. I never heard the noise again.

How News Is Sometimes Given. The press makes many mistakes. The wonder is that in the rush of presenting an epitome of the world's daily doings at each breakfast table it does not make a thousand errors for one. It makes very few deliberately, and many of those statements concerning which loud mouthed and quibbling denials are often accepted are true in their essentials

Three examples will serve to throw light on this branch of the subject. Said a man of national fame who had commanded one of the Union armies, and had been the governor of his state and had served with distinction in congress, in furnishing some sensational but true statements for publication, "This is exact, but if you ever give me as an thority I will publicly deny your dispatch. Said a former dean of the diplomatic corps in presenting a story of deep in terest, "If you allow this to be traced to me I will promptly deny any connection with it over my official signature, and leave you in the lurch."

Said a senator of many years service, both in and out of congress, after talking at length for publication: "Yeswrite it up, and print it. But be careful. If I don't like it I will deny the whole of it."-General H. V. Boynton in Century.

A Builet's Freak. A curious shooting affair, which oc curred in Medora, N. D., is thus described by a traveler: I did not see the actual occurrence, but I saw both men immediately after ward, and I heard the shooting, which took place in a saloon on the bank, while I was swimming my horse across the river. I will not give the full names of the two contestants, as I am not certain what has become of them; though I was told that they had since been put in jail or hanged, I forget which.

One of them was a saloon keeper, familiarly called Welshy. The other man. Hay, had been bickering with him for some time. One day Hay entered the saloon and the quarrel became at once violent. Welshy suddenly whipped out his revolver and blazed away at Hay staggered slightly, shook himself, stretched out his hand and gave back to his would be slayer the ball, saying, "Here, man, here the bullet!" It had glanced along his breast bone, gone a roundabout course and come out at the point of the shoulder, when, being spent, it dropped down the sleeve into his hand.

The Copts of Egypt. There are between four and five hundred thousand copts in Egypt. They are the bookkeepers and scribes; they are also the jewelers and embroiderers. Their ancient tongue has fallen into disuse, and is practically a dead language. They now use Arabic, like all the rest of the nation; but the speech survives in their church service, a part of which is still given in the old tongue, though it is said that even the priests themseives do not always understand what they are saying, having merely learned the sentences by heart, so that they can repeat them as a matter of form. Copts have been converted to Protestantism during these later days by the American missionaries. - Con stance F. Woolson in Harper's. A Backbander.
