COLONEL J. OLMSTED,
Liberty Street

AT THE TABERNACLE.

MR. TALMAGE PREACHES ON THE YEAR JUST CLOSED.

The first Sunday of the New Year is a fitting time to think on the Universal Year of Life—the Antediluvian Patriarchs—Danger All Around Us.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 3.—This morning the Tabernacle congregation, meeting for the first Sunday service of the year, found the pastor disposed to serious reflections on the flight of time. The opening hymn gave the keynote in the familiar words:

*My days are slipping swiftly by,
And I'm a pilgrim's stranger;
Would not detain them as they fly,
Those hours of toil and danger.*

Dr. Talmage read several passages relating to antediluvian longevity, making characteristic comments as he read, and then preached from the ominous words, Jeremiah xxvii, 10, "This year thou shalt die."

Jeremiah, accustomed to saying bold things, addresses Haniaah in these words. They prove true. In sixty days Haniaah had departed this life.

This is the first Sabbath of the year. It is a time for review and for anticipation. A man must be a genius at stupidity who does not think now. The old year died in giving birth to the new, as the life of Jane Seymour, the English queen, departed when that of her son, Edward VI, dawned. The old year was a queen. The new shall be a king. The grave of the one and the cradle of the other are side by side. We can hardly guess what the child will be. It is only two days old, but I prophesy for it an eventful future. Year of mirth and madness! Year of paganism and confagration! It will laugh; it will sing; it will groan; it will die.

Is it not a time for earnest thought? The congratulations have been given. The Christmas trees have been taken down, or have well nigh cast their fruit. The friends who came for the holidays are gone in the rail train. While we are looking forward to another twelve months of intense activities, the text breaks upon us like a bursting thunderhead, "This year thou shalt die."

The text will probably prove true of some of us. The probability is augmented by the fact that all of us who are over thirty-five years of age have gone beyond the average of human life. The note is more than due. It is only by surfeiting that it is not collected. We are like a debtor who is taking the "three days' grace" of the banks. Our race started with nine hundred years for a lifetime.

We read of but one antediluvian youth whose early death disappointed the hopes of his parents by his dying at seven hundred and seventy-seven years of age. The world then may have been ahead of what it is now, for men had so long a time in which to study and invent and plan. If an artist or a philosopher has forty years for work, he makes forty achievements; but what must the artists and philosophers have done who had nine hundred years before them!

In the nearly two thousand years before the flood, considering the longevity of the inhabitants, there may have been nearly as many people as there are now. The flood was not a freshet that washed a few people off a plank, but a disaster that have swept away a thousand millions. If the Atlantic ocean, by a sudden lurch of the earth tonight, should drown this hemisphere, and the Pacific ocean, by a sudden lurch of the earth, should drown the other hemisphere, leaving about as many beings as could be got in one or two ocean steamers, it would give you an idea of what the ancient flood was.

HOW LIFE WAS SHORTENED.

At that time God started the race with a shorter allowance of life. The nine hundred years were blown down, until, in the time of Vespaasian, a census was taken, and only one hundred and twenty-four persons were found one hundred years old and three or four persons one hundred and forty years old. Now a man who has come to one hundred years of age is a curiosity and we go miles to see him. The vast majority of the race passes off before twenty years. To every apple there are five blossoms that never get to be apples. In the country church the sexton rings the bell rapidly until almost through, and then tells it. For awhile the bell of our life rings right merrily, but with some of you the bell has begun to toll, and the adaptedness of the text to you is more and more probable, "This year thou shalt die."

The character of occupation adds to the probability. Those who are in the professions are undergoing a sapping of the brain and nerve foundations. Literary men in this country are driven with whip and spur to their utmost speed. Not one brain worker out of a hundred observes any moderation. There is something so stimulating in our climate that if John Brown, the essayist of Edinburgh, had lived here he would have broken down at thirty-five instead of fifty-five, and Charles Dickens would have dropped at forty. There is something in all our occupations which predisposes to disease—if we be stout, to disorders ranging from fever to apoplexy; if we be frail, to diseases ranging from consumption to paralysis.

Printers rarely reach fifty years.

Watchmakers, in marking the time for others, shorten their own. Chemists breathe the death in their laboratories and potters absorb paralysis. Painters fall under their own brush. Foundrymen take death in with the filings. Shoemakers pound away their own lives on the last. Over-driven merchants measure off their own lives with the yardstick. Millers grind their own lives with the grist. Masons dig their graves with the trowel. And in all our occupations and professions there are the elements of peril.

Rapid climatic changes threaten our lives. By reason of the violent fits of the thermometer, within two days we live both in the arctic and the tropic. The warm south wind finds us with our furs on. The wintry blast cuts through our thin apparel. The hoof, the wheel, the fire arms, the assassin wait their chance to put upon us their quietus. I announce it as an impossibility that three hundred and sixty-five days should pass and leave us all as we now are. In what direction to shoot the arrow I know not, and so I shoot it at a venture. "This year thou shalt die."

In view of this, I advise that you have your temporal matters adjusted. Do not leave your worldly affairs at the mercy of administrators. Have your receipts properly pasted and your letters filed and your books balanced. If you have "trust funds," see that they are rightly deposited and accounted for. Let no widow or orphan scratch on your tombstone. "This man wronged me of my inheritance." Many a man has died leaving a competency whose property has, through his own carelessness, afterward been divided between the administrators, the surrogate, the lawyers and the sheriff. I charge you, before many days have gone, as far as possible, have all your worldly matters made straight, for "This year thou shalt die."

POSSIBILITIES OF SABBATH WORK.

I advise also that you be busy in Christian work. How many Sabbaths in the year? Fifty-two. If the text be true of you it does not say at what time you may go, and therefore it is unsafe to count on all of the fifty-two Sundays. As you are as likely to go in the first half of the year as in the last half, I think we had better divide the fifty-two into halves and calculate only twenty-six Sabbaths. Come, Christian men, Christian women, what can you do in twenty-six Sabbaths?

Divide the three hundred and sixty-five days into two parts; what can you do in one hundred and eighty-two days? What by the way of saving your family, the church and the world? You will not, through all the ages of eternity in heaven, get over the dishonor and the outrage of going into glory, and having behind none up to the same place. It will be found that many a Sabbath school teacher has taken into heaven her whole class; that Daniel Baker, the evangelist, took thousands into heaven; that Doddridge has taken in hundreds of thousands; that Paul took in a hundred millions. How many will you take in!

If you get into heaven and find none there that you sent, and that there are none to come through your instrumentality, I beg of you to crawl under some seat in the back corner and never come out, lest the redeemed get their eyes on you and some one cry out: "That is the man who never lifted hand or voice for the redemption of his fellows! Look at him, all heaven!" Better be busy. Better put the plow in deep. Better say what you have to say quickly. Better cry the alarm. Better fall on your knees. Better lay hold with both hands. What you now leave undone for Christ will forever be undone. "This year thou shalt die."

In view of the probabilities mentioned I advise all the men and women on this earth for eternity to get ready. If the text be true, you have no time to talk about nonessentials, asking why God let sin come into the world, or whether the book of Jonah is inspired, or who Melchisedec was, or what about the eternal decrees. If you are as near eternity as some of you seem to be, there is no time for anything but the question, "What must I do to be saved!" The drowning man, when a plank is thrown him, stops not to ask what sawmill made it, or whether it is oak or cedar or who threw it. The moment it is thrown he clutches it.

If this year you are to die, there is no time for anything but immediate laying hold on God. It is high time to get out of your sins. You say, "I have committed no great transgressions." But are you not aware that your life has been sinful? The snow comes down on the Alps flake by flake, and it is so light that you may hold it on the tip of your finger without feeling any weight, but the flakes gather; they compact, until some day a traveler's foot starts the slide, and it goes down in an avalanche, crushing to death the village.

So the sins of your youth and the sins of your manhood and the sins of your womanhood may have seemed only slight inaccuracies or trifling divergences from the right—so slight that they are hardly worth mentioning; but they have been piling up and piling up, packing together and packing together, until they make a mountain of sin, and one more step of your foot in the wrong direction may slide down upon you an avalanche of ruin and condemnation.

A man crossing a desolate and lonely plateau, a hungry wolf took after him. He brought his gun to his shoulder and took aim, and the wolf howled with pain, and the cry woke up a pack of wolves and they came ravening out of the forest from all sides and horribly devoured him. Then art the man. Some one sin of your life summing on all the rest, they surround thy soul and make the night of thy sin terrible with the assault of their bloody nuzzles. Oh, the unpardoned, clamoring, ravening, all devouring sins of thy lifetime!

A maniac was found pacing along the road with a torch in one hand and a pail of water in the other, and some one asked him what he meant to do with them. He answered, "With this torch I mean to burn down heaven, and with this water I mean to put out the fires of hell." He was a maniac. He could do the one thing just as well as he could do the other. No time to lose if you want to escape your sins, for "This year thou shalt die."

Let me announce that Christ, the Lord, stands ready to save any man who wants to be saved. He waited for you all last year, and all the year before, and all your life. He has waited for you with blood on his brow, and tears in his eye, and two outstretched, mangled hands of love. You come home some night and find the mark of muddy feet on your floor steps. You hasten in, and find an excited group around your thin apparel. The hoof, the wheel, the fire arms, the assassin wait their chance to put upon us their quietus. I announce it as an impossibility that three hundred and sixty-five days should pass and leave us all as we now are. In what direction to shoot the arrow I know not, and so I shoot it at a venture. "This year thou shalt die."

In view of this, I advise that you have your temporal matters adjusted. Do not leave your worldly affairs at the mercy of administrators. Have your receipts properly pasted and your letters filed and your books balanced. If you have "trust funds," see that they are rightly deposited and accounted for. Let no widow or orphan scratch on your tombstone. "This man wronged me of my inheritance." Many a man has died leaving a competency whose property has, through his own carelessness, afterward been divided between the administrators, the surrogate, the lawyer and the sheriff. I charge you, before many days have gone, as far as possible, have all your worldly matters made straight, for "This year thou shalt die."

I wish you might know what a job Jesus undertook when he carried your case to Calvary. They crowded him to the wall. They struck him. They spat on him. They kicked him. They cuffed him. They scoffed at him. They scourged him. They murdered him. Blood! Blood! As he stoops down to lift you up the crimson drops upon you from his brow, from his side, from his hands. Do you not feel the warm current on your face? Oh, for then the hunger, the thirst, the thorn sting, the suffocation, the darkness, the groan, the sweat, the struggle, the death!

A great plague came in Marseilles. The doctors held a consultation, and decided that a corpse must be dissected or they would never know how to stop the plague. A Dr. Guyon said, "Tomorrow morning I will proceed to a dissection." He made his will, prepared for death, went into the hospital, dissected a body, wrote out the results of the dissection and died in twelve hours. Beautiful self-sacrifice, you say. Our Lord Jesus looked out from heaven and saw a plague stricken race. Sin must be dissected. He made his will, giving everything to his people. He comes down into the reeking hospital of earth. He lays his hand to the work. Under our plague he dies—the healthy for the sick, the pure for the polluted, the innocent for the guilty. Behold the love! Behold the sacrifice! Behold the rescue!

Decide, on this first Sabbath of the year, whether or not you will have Jesus. He will not stand forever begging for your love. With some here his plea ends right speedily. "This year thou shalt die."

SALVATION CANNOT BE BOUGHT.

This great salvation of the Gospel I now offer to every man, woman and child. You cannot buy it. You cannot earn it. A Scotch writer says that a poor woman, one cold winter's day, looked through the window of a king's conservatory and saw a bunch of grapes hanging against the glass. She said, "Oh, if I only had that bunch of grapes for my sick child at home!"

At her spinning wheel she earned a few shillings and went to buy the grapes. The king's gardener thrust her out very roughly and said he had no grapes to sell. She went off and sold a blanket and got some more shillings and came back and tried to buy the grapes. But the gardener roughly assaulted her and told her to be off. The king's daughter was walking in the garden at the time and she heard the excitement, and, seeing the poor woman, said to her, "My father is not a merchant to sell, but he is a king and gives." Then she reached up and plucked the grapes and dropped them into the poor woman's apron. So Christ is a king and all the fruits of his pardon he freely gives. They may not be bought. Without money and without price take this sweet cluster from the vineyards of God.

I am coming to the close of my sermon. I sought for a text appropriate to the occasion. I thought of taking one in Job, "My days fly as a weaver's shuttle," of a text in the Psalms, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom;" of the prayer of the vine dresser, "Lord, let it alone this year also," but pressed upon my attention first of all and last of all and above all were the words, "This year thou shalt die."

Perhaps it may mean me. Though in perfect health now, it does not take God one week to bring down the strongest physical constitution. I do not want to die this year. We have plans and projects on foot that I want to see completed, but God knows best, and he has a thousand better men than I to do the work yet undone. I have a hope that, notwithstanding all my sins and wanderings, I shall, through the infinite mercy of my Saviour, come out at the right place. I have nothing to brag of by way of Christian experience; but two things I have learned—and the all helpfulness before God, and the all abounding grace of the Lord Jesus.

If the text means some of you, my hearers, I do not want you to be caught unprepared. I would like to have you, either through money you have laid up, or a "life insurance," be able to leave the world feeling that your family need not become paupers. But if you have done your best and you leave not one dollar's worth of estate, you may confidently trust the Lord who hath promised to care for the widow and the fatherless. I would like to have your soul fitted out for eternity, so that if any morning or noon or evening or night of these three hundred and sixty-five days death should look in and ask, "Are you ready?" you might with an outburst of Christian triumph answer, "Aye, aye! all ready!"

CHARACTERISTIC LAST WORDS.

I know not what our last words may be. Lord Chesterfield prided himself on his politeness and said in his last moment, "Give Daryolles a chair." Dr. Adam, a dying schoolmaster, said: "It grows dark. The boys may dismiss." Lord Tenterden, supposing himself on the bench of a court, said in his last moment, "Gentlemen of the jury, you will now consider your verdict." A dying play actor said: "Drop the curtain. The farce is played out."

I would rather have for my dying words those of one greater than Chesterfield or Dr. Adam or Lord Tenterden: "I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me."

The sooner the last hour comes the better if we are fitted for entrance in the celestial world. There is no clock in heaven, because it is an everlasting day; yet they keep an account of the passing years because they are all the time hearing from our world. The angels flying through heaven report how many times the earth has turned on its axis, and in that way the angels can keep a diary; and they say it is almost time now for father to come up for me to come up to come up.

Some day they see a cohort leaving heaven and they say, "Whither bound?" and the answer is, "To bring up a soul from earth." And the question is asked, "What soul?" And a family circle in heaven find that it is one of their own number that is to be brought up, and they come out to watch, as on the beach we now watch for a ship that is to bring our friends home. After awhile the cohort will hoarse in sight, flying nearer and nearer, until with a great clang the gates hoist and with an embrace old friends meet again.

Away with your stiff, formal heaven! I want none of it. Give me a place of infinite and eternal society. My feet free from the cloths of earth, I shall bound the hills with gladness and break forth in a laugh of triumph. Ah! ah! We weep now, but then we shall laugh. "Abraham's bosom" means that heaven has open arms to take us in. Now we fold our arms over our heart and tell the world to stand back, as though our bosom was a two-barred gate to keep the world out. Heaven stands not with folded arms, but with heart open. It is "Abraham's bosom."

CHILDHOOD IN HEAVEN.

I see a mother and her child meeting at the foot of the throne after some years' absence. The child died twenty years ago, but is a child yet. I think the little ones who die will remain children through all eternity. It would be no heaven without the little darlings. I do not want those that are in heaven to grow up. We need their infant voices in the great song. And when we walk out in the fields of light we want them to run ahead and clap their hands and pick out the brightest of the field flowers. Yes, here is a child and its mother meeting. The child long in glory, the mother just arrived.

"How changed you are, my darling!" says the mother. "Yes," says the child, "this is such a happy place, and Jesus has taken such care of me, and heaven is so kind, I got right over the fever with which I died. The skies are so fair, mother! The flowers are so sweet, mother! The temple is so beautiful, mother! Come, take me up in your arms as you used to." Oh, I do not know how we shall stand the first day in heaven. Do you not think we will break down in the song from over delight! I once gave out in church the hymn:

There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign,
And an aged man standing in front of the pulpit sang heartily the first verse and then he sat down weeping. I said to him afterward, "Father Linton, what made you cry over that hymn" He said, "I could not stand it—the joys that are coming." When heaven rises for the doxology, I cannot see how we can rise with it if all these waves of everlasting delight come upon the soul, billow of joy after billow of joy. Methinks Jesus would be enough for the first day in heaven, yet here he approaches with all heaven at his back.

But I must close this sermon. This is the last January to some who are present. You have entered the year, but you will not close it. Within these twelve months your eyes will shut for the last sleep. Other hands will plant the Christmas tree and give the New Year's congratulations. As a proclamation of joy to some, and as a matter of warning to others, I leave in your ears these five words of one syllable each, "This year thou shalt die."

The Kaiser is an inveterate smoker, so was his father, Frederick III. But his fondness for the weed is "not a circumstance" to that of Bismarck, who prizes a good cigar above great riches.

"August Flower"

What is it For?

This is the query perpetually on your little boy's lips. And he is no worse than the bigger, older, balder-headed boys. Life is an interrogation point. "What is it for?" we continually cry from the cradle to the grave. So with this little introductory sermon we turn and ask: "What is AUGUST FLOWER for?" As easily answered as asked: It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver. Nothing more than this; but this brimful. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. Twenty years ago it started in a small country town. To-day it has an honored place in every city and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country and sells everywhere. Why is this? The reason is as simple as a child's thought. It is honest, does one thing, and does it right along—it cures Dyspepsia.
