NOT HUMPING THEMSELVES.

There was never in this state, or scarcely any state, a greater or better occasion for an extra session of the legislature than there was in Oregon this winter. But of course there will be none. Oregon will not be represented at the world's fair; nothing, or next to nothing, will be done toward opening the Columbia river; and we will drag and drift along after just the same fashion. But those who live a few years—say ten or twenty—in Oregon, will see great changes, and a wonderful development. We won't get much of a start at it this year, that's evident; but it is sure to come.—Portland Telegram. The Telegram is informed that this is the moulting season among the birds that roost in the state house. They are neither laying or incubating, but becoming highly pregnant for acting in future.

LITERARY.

About twenty school teachers and literary ladies of Salem attended the discussion of the public school question, which was decided in the affirmative by L. F. Cont, chairman for the evening. The constitution was amended to allow ladies to join the Alka society. By resolution the company places all responsibility for managing the free public library in the hands of the five trustees who are empowered to form a public library association, the membership of which shall be entirely separate from the Alka and have a vote in electing trustees. The Alka society wishes no responsibility in the matter according to the tenor of this resolution, and the trustees are entirely free to run the library for the public.

OUR BAND.

Eugene Guard, Feb. 6th: Last evening at the band concert Prof. J. M. Coomer outdid, if possible, his efforts of the previous evening when he played the cornet solo, "Centennial Polka," without a single break. Besides his playing, special commendation is due to the tuba solo by John Wahn, the euphonium solo by J. H. Riley, and the clarinet solo by C. Poppa. These were the two concertos. These are all good players and masters of their respective instruments. The singing of Messrs. Ross and Ford is highly complimented.

FORMALLY OPENED.

Lincoln Public School in South Salem Dedicated to Education Monday Morning.

There was a very interesting ceremony in South Salem at the opening of Lincoln school, south Salem.

At 9 o'clock, pupils, teachers and board of education met at the old school house under the hill, forming into lines and marching over to the imposing structure between Liberty and High streets. There were about two hundred in line and another crowd waited for them at Lincoln school.

AT LINCOLN SCHOOL all assembled in the wide hallways below, to be assigned to their respective rooms. The formal dedication address was delivered by Mr. R. Waite. In conclusion he gave the school children a gentle lecture of advice as to their duties. He was followed by Mr. Director Smith, Mrs. Supt. Grubbe, and Principal James T. Matthews, in appropriate remarks.

The building is nicely warmed and ventilated, and it was generally remarked that it was one of the most perfectly constructed and arranged public buildings in the city. There was a large attendance of visitors, and the whole affair was highly successful.

LOST A HAND AND EYE.

A Howell Prairie Hunter Injures Himself by a Shotgun Accident.
Dr. Byrd went out to Howell Prairie Sunday afternoon and took off the right hand of W. W. Nichols, who had received a discharge Saturday from a shotgun, which he had handled rather carelessly. The shot shattered his right wrist and put out his right eye. Mr. Nichols is a newcomer from the East.

RESUMES PREACHING.

Rev. C. L. Corwin preached in the First Congregational pulpit Sunday for the first time since his sickness. Crowded houses greeted him, and in the evening his sermon to young people packed the church. He dwelt upon the importance of getting right, and especially to avoid evil literature. In his concluding remarks he was very severe on the Unitarians, who tenets and influences he scored unmercifully.
