If Was Screething Else,

While a Baker street car was being accidentally rolled along at a speed of four miles an hour the other after noon the connection with the draw bar broke and the whiffletrees fell down at the hornes' heels. The noise was enough to momentarily alarm all the passengers and everybody sprang up. Among them was a motherly looking woman, with a dozen czins in a banket. After she had ascertained what had happened she sat down and remarked:
