COUNTY SUPERVISION OF ROADS. Beyond a desire to make another at place for some politician to fill there can be no excuse for the proposed creation of the office of county road boss." Every one knows that no one man can properly oversee the roads of this county. It is a physical impossibility for one oun to supervise the nearly two thousand miles of public roads in this county. Of course, not over two or three hundred miles are traveled enough to need such supervision. The proposed county road boss would live in Salem and might be able to look after the main roads leading into Salem. But he would be able to do very little if anything toward securing good results for roads in the north, south and eastern parts of the county. A certain care of the bulk of the roads must be in the hands of the road supervisors. Wherever the county court can do so a certain number of miles of a main travelled county road should be let to a consum to keep it in good order for a year. If supervision beyond what the county court and road supervisors can give is needed it will be better to employ a competent man in a certain section of the county to oversee the road work. But no one county road boss will be worth having. Salem wants her share of road and bridge taxes expended for the benefit of this section of the county. Other parts of the county are entitled to the same. A county road boss living at Salem would have little idea of what would be wanted at Si Iverton, Woodburn, Butteville, Aurora or Jefferson. The people should have some control of their own roads in the different parts of the county.
