

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees.

A Germ Disease. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expels them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumption becomes a germ-proof and well.

The Paris opera is about to produce a four act opera, "Ménage," written by Prince Troubetzkoff, of the Russian embassy.

Harry B. Smith, dramatic editor of the Chicago Tribune, has completed his new opera, "The Knickerbockers," for the Bostonians.

A Radish Ten Feet Long. With the people, the houses, the teapots, the chickens and so many things on so small a scale in Japan, there is all the greater surprise when one finds anything there which has attained an unusual or gigantic size. The coarse white radish (daikon), from six to ten feet in length, strikes one as a vegetable giant in that land of Lilliput. The plant in one fairy story uses a daikon for a club and the street peddlers lean their daikons up against the side of a house as if they were whips or fishpoles. One might very naturally inquire the price of daikon by the yard when he goes to market.—St. Nicholas

The Verdict

OF ALL who have used Ayer's Pills for Biliousness and Liver Complaint it is that they are the best ever made. Being free from any mineral ingredients, and sugar-coated, Ayer's Pills are adapted to all ages, constitutions, and climates.

"Having used Ayer's Pills for many years in my practice and family, I feel justified in recommending them as an excellent cathartic and liver medicine. They sustain all the claims made for them."—W. A. Westfall, M.D., V. P. Austin & S. W. R. Co., Boston, Texas.

"Ayer's Pills keep my stomach and liver in perfect condition. Five years ago I was afflicted with an enlargement of the liver and with a severe form of dyspepsia, most of the time being unable to retain any solid food on my stomach. I finally began to take Ayer's Pills, and after using only three boxes of these magical pellets, was a well man."—Lucius Alexander, Marblehead, Mass.

TOM'S CRIPPLED SISTER.

His home down in Elizabeth Street and the Present for the Little Girl.

If you cross City Hall park in the evening you will likely encounter little Tom. There's a something in his voice as he cries out to make you think of a night bird—a tremulous, quavering call that attracts your attention over all other sounds. Tom and I went into partnership last fall after the first freeze up. I got the shoes and hat and suit and he wore them. It did him proud, and now and then an envious fellow newsboy would have thumped him out of spite if I hadn't kept an eye on him and bribed a policeman to do the same.

I went down home with him once—down in Elizabeth Street—and I found he had a cat armed father, who found it hard to get along, and a mother who worked hard and kept hoping, and a sister who had a full year before, and was crippled that she had not been out of the house for long years. It was awful to realize what she was deprived of, and the bitter poverty still further to be endured, but she was trying to be brave and cheerful and make the best of life.

"Tom," I said one day after that, "I want to buy Kate a Santa Claus present when Christmas comes. You keep quiet, but find out what will please her most and she shall have it."

I suppose that little chap worked and worried harder over that thing than I could to do it in his whole life. He came to me the afternoon with suggestions. One day it would be a book, the next a slate, the next a new dress or a pair of slippers; but when he was at the point of giving up in despair we decided on a hand glass, brush and comb in a red plush box.

"That's it—that's the checker!" shouted little Tom, as I took him into a store one day and made a selection. "Jemimah whiz! but when Kate gets that she wouldn't trade places with the richest girl in New York!"

I took the box to the office and almost every day the lad came up and we had it out for another look. He couldn't have been more elated had he known that he was to get a fifty dollar bill in his own stocking. I expect he had a hard time of it at home to keep the secret, but he managed to do it.

Just a week before Christmas little Tom came up stairs one day and as I was going home with an attack of the grip, I made it up with him how he was to get the box if I was laid up, and so, when the days passed and I was laid up, I felt that the little cripple would not be disappointed after all. All that night before Christmas how many little hearts were made glad in this great city. And how many thousands were made happy on Christmas day by the gifts which public charity bought and distributed.

It was on Christmas day that I went down into Elizabeth Street and climbed to the top floor of a tenement to which little Tom and his father had moved. And how many thousands were made happy on Christmas day by the gifts which public charity bought and distributed.

And poor Tom! When the night sky banks up with the gray snowclouds and winter gusts hurry pedestrians across the park, I hear him calling and calling, and I know that there are tears in his big blue eyes as his voice goes out into the darkness.—New York World.

A Large Transaction.
A sale of $2,400,000 worth of stock was recently made and the money paid over with as little ado as an ordinary man would make over a ten dollar transaction. Two men were in one of our leading banks discussing stocks, when one of them said he would sell certain securities if he got his price. "What will you take?" was promptly asked. "Two million four hundred thousand dollars," was the answer. "You mean $2,400,000?" "I will take them," and really reaching for a small piece of plain, white paper, the purchaser wrote out a check for $2,400,000 on the Fourth National Bank of New York. The check was immediately deposited and paid the next morning through the clearing house.—Philadelphia Record.

Women Capture a Wildcat.
A highly exciting wildcat chase took place at Will's Cove, about three miles southwest of Livingston, Wednesday. The cat, which was of gigantic proportions, was seen about 9 o'clock in the morning by Mrs. Gabriel Johnson and her two daughters, and they immediately set three large greyhounds on it. The animal ran for some distance, but was finally treed by the dogs, and one of the ladies summoned up the courage to get a double barreled gun and fire at the monster. Her bravery was repaid by the sight of the animal falling dead from the tree at the first report of the gun. The ladies are very proud of their success.—Richmond Dispatch.

They Laughed Twice.
An eminent Scotch clergyman happened to dine with some learned lawyers of the Edinburgh bar. He appropriated to himself a large dish of crabs, upon which the lawyers, who were sitting at the table, looked on with astonishment. Enquire, wishing to admonish him for his discourtesy, remarked: "Doctor, you remind me of Nebuchadnezzar in his degradation."

Just as this pot allusion was causing laughter from the legal lights the reverend vegetable order retorted: "Ay, do I mind ye o' Nebuchadnezzar? Doubtless because I am eating among the brutes."—New York Home Journal.

Wrenched Out of Shape.
Joints are wrenched and distorted by rheumatism and are among the most distressing of ailments. This is because the joints are so essential to the body that any impairment of their function is a serious matter. The remedy is to use a powerful anti-rheumatic medicine, such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which will restore the joints to their normal shape and function.

PASSES ON RAILWAYS.
A Great Many People Who Apply for Them are Generally Shaken Off. "Congressmen seldom ask us for free passes," said a railway man to a reporter. "On the other hand, the clerks attached to committee rooms and the private secretaries of prominent men are most frequent among our petitioners. Do they get them? Not usually. You see, in dispensing such favors we consider chiefly the question whether the applicant is able to do the road any service."

"It is very funny to observe how general the impression seems to be among applicants for passes that they are able to do of service to us. You would imagine from the way they talk that most of them are the very pillars of the road. They declare very often that they individually throw into our hands thousands of dollars' worth of passenger traffic, and on the strength of that plea they demand free transportation for themselves. Such persons as these are to be found lurking by dozens around the hotel corridors."

"We find very many applicants of this sort among the people in the departments. Once having got a pass, they have acquired a taste for traveling free of charge, and they do not like the notion of paying their way any more. It is astonishing how a habit of journeying by rail gratis grows upon the individual. I knew a Philadelphia man once upon a time who had an annual pass between Philadelphia and Harrisburg. Having little occasion to travel, he did not use his privilege at all until the week before his document expired; but during that week he did nothing but travel back and forth between Harrisburg and Philadelphia just for the sake of the feeling that he was getting something for nothing."

"Tramps used to apply to us very often, but our way to get rid of them has always been to send them to the sanitary office. That office, as you are aware, has an arrangement with the railway for sending out of the district any persons who desire to get away, preferring to do this rather than permit them to become a charge upon the community. Such people we grant half fares. Among the impecunious unfortunates who ask for passes are numerous candidates for situations in the government service who have failed to secure places. They have come here perhaps comfortably supplied with money, but have gradually expended it while vainly pursuing the official will-o'-the-wisp. Finally they get dead broke and make a plea for transportation on the ground of the presumptive benevolence of the corporation. To show them that this is a mistake on their part we steer them to the channel afforded all penniless strangers for getting out of town."

"Women, if they are given a chance, will work the pass system for all it is worth, and more too. We choke them off whenever it is possible. To Sisters of Charity railways ordinarily grant a low uniform rate. Newspaper men, notwithstanding the opinion to the contrary commonly held, travel on passes comparatively rarely. On the whole, they pay their way as well as other people do.—Washington Star.

At the Breakfast Table.
"When I was a boy," said the grandfather, "they used to cook buckwheat cakes on a big round griddle. They poured on batter enough to cover the griddle, and so cooked only one cake at a time. The cakes were larger than an ordinary dinner plate, and generally they were cut into quarters before serving. As era of smaller cakes began with the introduction of the oblong griddle, about fifty or sixty years ago. Whether the smaller cakes followed naturally upon the invention of the oblong griddle or whether the oblong griddle was specially invented as a more convenient means of satisfying a growing demand for smaller cakes, I would not undertake to say; but I am quite sure that making the cakes smaller was a great improvement.—New York Sun.

The Leaning Tower of Boston.
It is a common thing for persons to call at the office of the city surveyor at the city hall to inquire about the safety of the spire of the Old South church, in Boylston street. It is not generally known that this was modeled after a tower in Florence, and that in the Old World there are a number of "leaning" towers at an angle much more acute than that of the Old South. At Pisa and at Bologna there are striking examples of the skill of architects in this direction, and if such churches stood in Boston a strong appeal would be made to the inspector of buildings in the interest of public safety.—Boston Journal.

Why He Used Latin.
Abbe Balkan being asked why he always wrote in Latin, took a pinch of snuff and answered gravely: "Why for fear the bishops should read me!"—New York Home Journal.

CONSUMPTION AND PURE AIR.
Nature's Remedies Are the Best for Consumptive and Many Other Diseases. I have heard it stated that nearly or quite all the nuns die of consumption. Whether this is true I cannot say, but it is a well known fact that very many of them fall a prey to this disease. It is also well known that the inmates of jails and prisons, many of them, die in the same way. I think it is true, as a popular writer and physician has remarked, that impure air is a prime factor in the development of tuberculosis. To tell the truth, people seem to avoid pure outdoor air as if it were poisonous; they take the greatest pains to shut it out of their dwellings, public halls, churches, schools, places of business, street cars, railway carriages, theaters and other buildings, public or private. So that wherever we go or stay, the same thing is to be met—foul air.

We speak of the savages as filthy, wanting in habits of neatness and cleanliness. But I sometimes think that the great difference in this respect between ourselves and these people is that their filth is mostly on the outside, on the exterior of their bodies, whereas we take our impurities directly into the lungs, and from these into the circulation.

We are careful not to drink from a cup that has touched the lips of a child with a dirty face; but we do not hesitate to breathe into the lungs air that is freighted with foul human excretion; moreover, these organisms are often steeped in tobacco, and other noxious substances. Worse yet, we live in an atmosphere that has been breathed over and over again, not only by ourselves, but by persons, it may be, whose bodies may be tainted with disease.

Dr. Felix L. Oswald, in speaking of the habits of so called civilized people, says that he thinks it impossible for any one to escape the contagion of catarrhal and consumptive diseases, at least wholly, while we have to circulate among people with their present habits, visit libraries or lecture halls or travel in public vehicles, where the subject of ventilation is so thoroughly ignored.

Though he is aware of the fact that these diseases can be eradicated, often at an advanced stage, by a persistent application of fresh air and sunshine, he condemns in unmeasured terms what he styles the "night air horror," and he recommends an abundance of the pure article during every hour of the twenty-four.

The German people are in advance of us in some things. At some of their health resorts they have tried the plan of having the consumptive patients sleep all night in the open air and in the pine woods, where the atmosphere is usually dry. The experiment is said to have been a success. The patients slept better than they had been able to do in their rooms, and the sleep itself seemed more refreshing. Really, if we only know it, nature's healing agencies are all about us—fresh air, sunshine, electricity, pure water and other healing agencies and influences.—St. Louis Magazine.

The Origin of the Mastiff.
Mastiff is the term applied to a very large and powerful species of the canine family, and there is considerable conflict of opinion regarding the origin of the word. Some claim that it is derived from the Italian mastino or the French mastin, both of which signify large limbed. This word, they say, was gradually corrupted into masti, a Lincolnshire expression meaning very large, muscular or big, until it gradually assumed its present form. Others again say its true origin is the old German mastin, to fatten, because the mastiff is a large dog and so seems better fed than any other. These animals were very highly prized by the early Romans, who matched them to fight in the arena with wild animals. It is related that very often two or three mastiffs defeated a lion in such combats.—Detroit Free Press.

Leather for Baseballs.
There are two factories in Philadelphia that use up in the season 100 horse hides a week each to cover baseballs. They are alum tanned. One hide will furnish covers for ten dozen No. 1 balls and five to eight dozen inferior ones. Horse hides for this purpose sell from $2.50 to $4 each, as to size.

Kips are also used. They sell at fourteen cents a foot, and shoeleathers at 20 to 25 cents a foot. The best regulation baseball sold at $1.25 to $1.50 each. A piece of rubber forms the center, around which yarn is wound by hand. Then they are covered. They are "dead balls" and won't bounce.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Mason and Dixon's Line.
In the land office at Annapolis are the original notes of Mason and Dixon, commissioners to lay down the boundary line between Maryland and Pennsylvania. There is an entry for each day between the years 1763 and 1767, and each note is signed by the two commissioners. The first entry is Nov. 15, 1763. "Arrived at Philadelphia."—Baltimore Star.

La Grippe Successfully Treated.
"I have just recovered from a second attack of the grip this year," says Mrs. Jas. O. Jones, publisher of the Leader, Mexico, Texas. "In the latter case I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and I think with considerable success, only being in bed a little over two days, against ten days for the first attack. The second attack I am satisfied would have been equally as bad as the first but for the use of this remedy, as I had to go to bed in about six hours after being 'struck' with it, while in the first case I was able to attend to business about two days before getting 'down.'
