

in the city. On the subject of national politics, he said: "We hope to keep California in the Republican column, but, of course, much depends on the presidential nominees. The state has been constant in its admiration for Blaine, and there is no diminution of that sentiment. We do not hold our convention until May 30, and I am of the opinion that the delegates will go to Minneapolis without instructions. There is little prospect of a third party in California, but the people want free silver, irrespective of party allegiance. The Democratic delegation to Chicago will, I think, be unopposed. If Boss Buckley were with us still, he might fix things for Hill. As I think he is the strongest man with the voters on that side."

BEHRING SEA CASE.
The President, Secretary Foster and Senator Sherman discuss it.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The news of the receipt of Salisbury's reply to Harrison's note of the 22nd inst., brought Hon. John Foster and Senator Sherman to the White House yesterday at an unusually early hour. They remained in conference with the president half an hour, and when they left their faces expressed inward satisfaction with the condition of things which occupied their minds. The reply of Salisbury, it is said in high official circles, while not conceding in express terms what the United States contended for in the recent correspondence, is so conciliatory in tone and manner as to open the way for an amicable settlement of the present controversy. In the previous correspondence, Salisbury declined to admit the subject of damages to the terms of the treaty at all. Now he proposes to refer the question of damages to arbitrators. Upon this point his lordship's suggestion contains an impracticable feature, that of attempting to measure damages to Canadian sealers which were prevented by the United States from engaging in their occupation. This is what the late Charles Sumner described as "consequential damages." It would be impossible, in the opinion of officials interested, to make any estimate of damages for "what might have been." Actual damages are all that can be assessed. But, as stated, the tone of the reply encourages officials to believe a satisfactory arrangement can be made with England for the protection of seals pending the decision of the points in dispute by arbitration.

Chinese Exclusion Bill.
WASHINGTON, March 29.—Representative Gury, of California, says that it is certain that his Chinese exclusion bill will come up for consideration in the house on Monday, April 4th. This is "suspension day," and Speaker Crisp promises to recognize Gury for the purpose of calling him among the first ones. The debate will probably occupy several hours. Messrs. Loud, Cutting, and Wilson of Washington are announced as among those who will take part in the discussion.

SHE WANTED TO DIE.
He Had to Plead With Her to Save Her Life.
CLEVELAND, March 29.—Travelers to this city ten years ago often commented upon the beauty of a young flower girl who sold bouquets at the hotel entrances. Yesterday she was saved from an attempt to take her life by opium. Her name is Laura Rich. After she disappeared from the hotel it was rumored that a wealthy Spaniard had taken her to New York. Not long ago she came back to this city and met a young business man named F. C. Scott, to whom she became engaged. One day he was summoned to her home and she told him her history. She said she had been intimate with an aged business man. Scott forgave her and was willing to marry her. Recently he discovered that the intimacy had been renewed and informed her that their engagement was at an end. Then she poisoned herself and could only be persuaded to take an antidote after Scott had been sent for and had pleaded with her to do so. She will live.

FOUND DEAD.

A Woman in Her Rooms at Spokane.

SPokane, Wash., March 29.—At 2 o'clock this morning, Trix Layton, wife of Al Layton, a gambler, was found in her rooms with a bullet through her brain. She had been dead but a short time, and was not yet cold in death. Half an hour previously a police officer hearing cries from the river, climbed down the bank and found Layton in the water, clinging to a log and almost dead from chill. The man was taken out and removed to the police station, and another gambler went to the room to inform his wife. When the discovery was made that she was dead.

On a table in the room was found this note: "I love my Al. I am so lame for it all! Al forgive me, my darling." The opinion is about evenly divided between murder and suicide. Layton refuses to talk. The couple had been quarreling violently for two days. Some believe that in a fit of desperation the woman shot herself, others believe that she wrote the note and started to leave Layton but met him at the door and was murdered by him. This belief is strengthened by the fact that when found the woman was clad in cloak, hat and gloves. The couple came from San Francisco about six weeks ago. Layton had been dwelling in the Richeieu gambling rooms. He is about 45 years of age and the woman is less than thirty.

Barker, formerly chief record clerk of the pension office, admitted borrowing money from the employees, and not returning it. He said he lost $120,000 in speculation on painters, given him by W. W. Dudley. He said Raum, Jr., got part of the borrowed money. Thomas Farnest, formerly in the pension office, said before the election of 1890, the pension claims from Indiana were advanced. Lemons' cases always came up as complete, although many of them had been in the office a long time. A remark of a witness, about the bad character of some of the women in the pension office, was stricken out.

ALBANY, Or., March 29.—News was received from Brownsville that

Friday night two men were disguised with masks knocked at the door of the Chinese washhouse of Ling Lee. He had gone to bed, but admitted the intruders, who threw red pepper into his eyes and knocked him down. They proceeded to beat him until some passers-by were attracted by Ling's yells, when the assailants fled, leaving their victim in a pitiful condition and almost blind from the effect of the pepper. It is presumed that robbery was intended and would have been accomplished but for the timely arrival of outside parties.

STEAMER WRECKED.

The Sea Causes Another Wreck on the Pacific Coast.

WESTPORT, Cal., March 29.—Captain George Johnson, of the wrecked steamer Venture, who has just come down from Kookport, the scene of the wreck, says: "The sea came in rough at midnight and then calmed down until 3:45, when it became suddenly tempestuous, every sea breaking over the vessel. The captain gave orders to unshackle the cable, but before the cable was unshackled two seven-inch bow-reef hawsers parted, and orders were given to steam ahead. The vessel swung southward and carried the shackle of the cable out of reach from the deck. The vessel was lying under cable awaiting day light to load. The captain made several fruitless attempts to reach the bow of the vessel to cut the cable. Finally a tremendous sea-pour caused the cable to lift and carry across the 4500 pound anchor, thirty fathoms of two-inch chain and twenty feet of log buoy, then the vessel dragged a 3700 pound anchor by the head line and struck south to the point of a steep rocky promontory.

Orders were given to launch the life raft and soon the raft was in the water and the second engineer and first mate were washed into the sea. The engineer was carried into the sea, and the mate succeeded by superhuman efforts in reaching the vessel. By this time the raft had broken away and gone to sea. The captain stood upon the bridge when the vessel struck, the rail being against the bluff and the house loose. The captain left the house and vessel, stepping from the rail upon the perpendicular face of the bluff. After climbing 100 feet up the bluff, the captain found a narrow ledge to stand upon and a life line was thrown to him from the deck and he saved ten of the crew. Four lost their footing in trying to climb the bluff, and were washed away and drowned. The steward was the first to lose his footing, and fell into the sea. His name is unknown. Fireman Wm. Strand, aged about 65, was the next to go. He leaves a wife and small family in San Francisco. First Engineer Homard, aged about 30, single and a native of New York, went next. Sailor Peterson, aged about 42, from San Francisco, a native of Sweden, was the last man lost. The balance of the crew were saved. Second Engineer James Burns, aged about 40, a native of Ireland, leaves a wife in San Francisco. He was washed overboard before the vessel struck. The value of the Venture is $35,000; insurance light. The rescued sailors leave for San Francisco today. The captain remains, awaiting orders from the agent, W. B. Hill.

HAD A SPIRITUAL WIFE.

The Police are After Disciples of the Flying Roll.

DETROIT, Mich., March 29.—The days of the Disciples of the Flying Roll are numbered in Detroit, for the police are now after "Prince Michael" and promise to make it warm for the apostle. During the recent riots he was protected by the authorities, but stories of such scandalous nature gained circulation that the department has been quietly working on the case for several days. Michael K. Mills, or "Prince Michael," as he is called, was married in Canada fifteen years ago and lived happily with his wife until three years ago, when he became a religious crank and took unto himself a spiritual wife. Since then the woman has presided over his household, and his wife has been compelled to submit to all the indignities of a common servant. Mrs. Mills stood by her husband all this time, but at last she resolved to leave him and return to her folks in Canada, and delayed her departure until this morning. As she came out of the house she was met by an agent of the police, who told her some one wanted to see her in a neighboring house, and when she arrived there she was confronted by two officers, who drove with her to a police justice. On the way to the court she told enough to send the "prince" over the road for some years to come. Her story, as well as that of other women, showed plainly that he maintains a harem, over which the spiritual wife presides, and she decrees every evening who shall be the "prince's" wife. His real wife never had the honor of being selected. Mrs. Mills was taken before the superintendent of police, and after a long interview she departed for St. Thomas. The police claim to be able to suppress the settlement on evidence secured.

Further Time Allowed in the Case in the U. S. Court.

PORTLAND, March 29.—The important case of Lyndey Smyth and others against T. Edgerton Hogg and others was to have come up for hearing before Judge Deady Wednesday, but has been further continued. This is the case concerning which so much was published at the time the papers were filed. The action was brought by Smyth and others asking for a restraining order in court to prevent Sheriff Mackay, of Benton county, from delivering to Z. Job the certificate of sale of the Oregon Pacific company, and also, prevent Job from making any transfer of such sale should the transfer be made. At the time of the filing of the papers, Smyth and others did not have the affidavits they desired, to make the proceeding showing for the injunction. Yesterday a motion was made in the United States circuit court by plainiffs, asking for leave to file and use additional affidavits; urged and allowed. The restraining order was modified so far to allow the sheriff to deliver certificate of sale to Job.

SING SING, N. Y., March 29.—Jeremiah Cotto was electrocuted at 10:46 in the electric chair. Four shocks were given. After the first three there were apparent signs of life. Each shock was twelve seconds. The scene was revolting, and the execution is described as most horrible. Among the witnesses were reporters of New York papers; Dr. Johnson, of Brooklyn; Dr. J. W. Wilson, of Poughkeepsie; Dr. Irving, of Sing Sing; and Inspector Wild, of New York. Cotto passed a quiet night, ate breakfast and went to his death quietly and unflinchingly. After each shock Cotto moved his hands and opened his eyes, but there was no movement of the chest as in other cases. After the fourth shock the doctors declared life extinct. There was no burning, but steam arose and scalded the parts where the electrodes were applied.

The murder for which Cotto was executed was committed last July in the outskirts of Brooklyn. Cotto's victim was Louis Frankeloso, a ragpicker. Cotto was a lover of Mrs. Frankeloso in Naples, Italy, and after she and her husband emigrated she sent Cotto money to follow her. He deserted his wife and family to join his paramour here. He lived with the Frankelosos in a tumble-down tenement in Brooklyn, and he and Mrs. Frankeloso discussed the question of putting her husband out of the way, so they might maintain their relations without the husband's interference. One Friday night Frankeloso started out to steal vegetables from neighboring farms, stealthily followed by Cotto. Upon a lonely roadside he came upon his victim, and with savage fury stabbed him no less than fourteen times. Frankeloso was left lying dead in the road. Cotto returned to Frankeloso's home and, standing before the woman he had widowed, licked the blood from the knife with which he had committed the deed.

There are no marks on the clothing by which his identity can be established.
