The One Great Problem.
The young man who had just received a bequest from a rich uncle had been puffing away at his cigar in silence for some moments. Suddenly he looked up and asked his companion:
"Ever do anything in real estate?"
"I've tried to," was the guarded response.
"Ever buy any property in the west?"
"Quite a little. Want to buy some?"
"Well, I don't know," said the young man indolently. "I'd like to put my money to some use, and western real estate is a pretty good investment, it seems to me."
"It is if one understands what he is doing."
"Of course, of course. Now, if I knew when to buy?"
"When to buy?" exclaimed the one who had invested. "That's the easiest part of it to my mind. At any rate it never bothered me."
"What does one want to know, then?" asked the young man in surprise.
"When to sell, my boy! When to sell! No trouble to buy, but if I'd know—well, let's change the subject. I don't like to think of the time I could have closed out at a big profit just before the boom burst."—Chicago Tribune.

A Little Girl's Story.
Sarah Simonds sought some Sunday school scholars. "Scholars seldom sit still," said she, so she selected six straight-forward, sober, steady, serious, saw Stella Stark's small sister Susan. Stella started scolding. Seeing she seemed sorry she soon stopped—said sweet, soothing sentences.

Soon she seemed satisfied, serene, so Stella spun some startling stories. She said she saw seven ships sailing southward Sunday.

Suddenly she saw some ships slowly sinking. She screamed several seconds. Strangely she saw six sailors swim swiftly shoreward, seeking succor. Sad scene! Six sole survivors! She simply said, "Sabbath breaking!"
Susan sighed.—St. Nicholas.

A Doubtful Complement.
An anecdote of the Duke of Marlborough, who is said to have bought land in the Powell River valley, Tennessee, on which to establish a country seat, is told at the expense of a native winemaker in those parts. "There, Mr. Duke," said the Tennessee vintner, handing Marlborough a sample glass, "is what I call honest wine?" "Yes," the duke is said to have replied; "yes, Mr. Stebbins, poor, but honest!"—Argonaut.

Did Not Fill the Bill.
Old Lady—There is one thing that I notice particularly about that young man who calls to see you. He seems to have an inborn, instinctive respect for woman. He treats every woman as though she were a being from a higher sphere, to be approached only with the utmost delicacy and deference.

Granddaughter (twent, eighteen)—Yes, he's horridly bashful.—New York Weekly.

What It Was.
"How do you understand the phrase an 'impressionist picture'?" asked the country cousin of the city cynic as they stood in the art gallery.

"Why, an 'impressionist picture' is one that leaves on your mind the impression that it is a picture of a cow, and the impression lingers until you look at the catalogue and read that it is a picture of a water spout."—Boston Transcript.

A Gentle Reminder.
Bingo—Did those trousers of mine come from the tailor?
Mrs. Bingo—No, my dear, but my bonnet came from the milliner's.

Bingo (savagely)—What do I care? I should like to know what your bonnet's got to do with my trousers?

Mrs. Bingo (meekly)—Nothing, my dear, only the milliner is waiting to see you in the next room.—Truth.

Board and Cloth.
"Say," said the elderly farmer looking man. "I want a little piece put in the paper that I want a woman who can cook, wash, iron, milk four cows and manage a market wagon."

"All right," said the advertising clerk. "Shall I state what wages will be paid?"
"Wages nothing!" shouted the farmer looking man. "I want to marry her."—Indianapolis Journal.

Florida Shad.
The shad of Florida are not the same as those of the Hudson river, or the Connecticut, or the Susquehanna. The same fish come each year to the particular river where they were born, and in their appearance are slightly different.—New York Press.

How Crows Are Regarded in Ireland.
Crows, like crickets, are good or evil luck, but the "curse of the crows" is a malediction to be avoided. If good luck abides in the household where they build their rookery they should not be molested.—Irish Times.

The Plea of Insanity.
Cannot be used in extension of the conduct of those who have committed infelicitous injury upon themselves, and by the foundation for serious and direct injury to be made by the use, in season and out of season, of any slight success and without discrimination, of drastic vegetable cathartics and powerful purgatives, notably the various forms of mercury—to relieve simply constipation, a complaint unendurable at any stage by the persistent use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This famous remedy never fails to give relief, and is perfectly safe, easy to use, and does not irritate the bowels. If there is any other tonic agent in a crowd of pills, or any other medicine which can truthfully be said, we are aware of it. Abandon the famous habit of taking up and riding down your bowels, which also sets right weakened stomachs, indigestion, flatulence, nervousness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, malnutrition, debility and kidney complaints are troubled and conquered by the Bitters.

HERALDRY OF THE RAILS.

Trademarks of Some of the Well-Known Railroads in This Country.
Almost every railroad company has a device or motto which is printed on the time table folders, the letter heads and the illuminated cards that hang on walls of station, waiting room and business office. Those devices are usually printed in colors, and some of them are quaint and clever. One of the most familiar is the autumn tinted maple leaf, the main arteries of which designate the route of the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City railway, which is popularly known as the "Maple Leaf."

A three leaf clover is the distinguishing mark of the Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City road, which is commonly called the "Clover Route."

The Houston and Texas Central railway has about as elaborate a design as any. Its main feature is a steel colored horseshoe bearing the name of the road. Encircled by the name is a green four leaf clover resting on a background of red, and connecting the heels of the shoe is a rabbit's foot labeled "Lucky Route."

To the right just above the horseshoe appears a lone star. The four leaf clover is also the device of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg road, each leaf bearing a letter, as "R. W. & O."

The long stem of the clover cuts lengthwise through the French word "Bonheur," conveying assurance of good luck.

Jay Gould's Missouri Pacific road has a large red seal, crossed by a rail road track, with the name of the road in black letters covering the entire face of the seal. The heraldic stamp of the Washburn road is a red flag with a black center, in which appears the forward end of a locomotive, the headlight flashing the word "Washburn." The Lehigh Valley flies a red pennant with a diamond shaped center of black, upon which are the letters "L. V." in white.

One of the simplest of these advertising devices is that of the Pennsylvania railroad, which is a small red keystone with the words "Pennsylvania Lines" across its face. The Florida Central and Peninsular railroad prints upon its time tables a red shield, upon which appears the front of a locomotive, the trunk of an elephant dangling from the headlight, encircling which are the words, in red letters, "Florida Trunk Line."

The Georgia Southern and Florida railroad has for its device a shield printed in dark tints. On the lower surface of the shield is a picturesque scenic view showing a railroad train crossing a stream on a long iron bridge. Just above the picture are the words "Suwanee River Route to Florida." The Richmond and Danville Railroad company contents it with the oddly designed initials "R. and D." speared by an arrow and printed in bright red. A yellow disk on a black square constitutes the trade mark of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, the letters "B. O." appearing on the yellow disk on each side of the faintly traced picture of a monument.

A most peculiar device is that which the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad has clung to for a great many years. It is an oblong open space, with a red disk at the left, labeled "The Great Rock Island Route." Occupying the greater part of the space are the words in big, black letters, "A—Man," and crowding close upon the letter "A" is the distinctive figure of a man with a stick over his shoulder and a satchel in his hand. The device of the Erie railway is both simple and familiar. It is a black disk on a tinted square, the face of the disk bearing in white letters the words, "Erie Lines."

An Indian arrowhead, showing the words "Tampico Route," is the distinguishing stamp of the Monterey and Mexican Gulf railway.—New York Times.

The Loyal Highlander.
The Highlanders are loyal to Scottish genius. Sir Walter Scott, while making a tour of the western Highlands, wrote to the innkeeper of Arrogather, Loch Long, to have rooms prepared for him.

On the appointed day it rained capesly. As Scott drew near the inn, he was met on the hill near the house by the landlord, who, with bowed head and backing every yard as Scott advanced, thus addressed him:

"Gude guid us, Sir Walter! This is just awfu! I sic a downpour! Was ever the like! I really beg your pardon! I'm sure it's no fault o' mine. I canna think how it should happen to rain this way, just as you o' a men of the world, should come to see us. It looks amaisht personal! I can only say, for my part, I'm just ashamed o' the weather!"—Youth's Companion.

Embroidery Among Egyptian Women.
The graceful and sacred lotus was a favorite pattern for embroidery among the Egyptian women, whose deft fingers imitated almost every object in nature. They worked on robes which the king wore lions' heads and asses, the emblems of royalty. They not only ornamented their own clothing with the needle, but the garments that draped the images of Osiris and Isis; the hangings and furniture of their houses and temples and the sails of their pleasure boats on the Nile, but reserved their most costly work for decorating the boats used in religious festivals.—Woman's Work.

Why Tea is Dangerous.
No people in the world drink so much tea or so often as the Japanese, and Europeans in Japan easily fall into the same habit. No word is ever heard of its being injurious or a source of indigestion, but that is because they take care not to extract the tannin from the tea leaves and we take great care to do so. That is why we say persons who live on tea and bread and butter have weak digestions.—British Medical Journal.

Mozart's Knowledge of Instruments.

Scarcely an instrument in the orchestra escaped Mozart's attention. A born violinist, he wrote concerti for violin and orchestra which, though without the emotional element of Beethoven and Spahr, are greatly prized. To the tenor violin, which had been deemed worthy only of filling up tutti passages, he gave a voice and place of its own in the orchestra. The clarinet was raised to great importance by him, and forthwith took place as a favorite solo instrument. In nearly all his scores it received special attention; while the fresh, beautiful, and exceedingly masterful work, the quintet in A major for clarinet and strings, and the fine clarinet concerto, which he composed for Stadler, have imparted to the instrument an all age reputation which can never be impaired.

Then his sparkling genius spent itself in writing for that fine reed instrument, the bassoon, the splendid properties of which he deemed more suitable than even the clarinet for his "Requiem." For the oboe Mozart did much, according to a prominence which it had never reached with any previous composer. His Oboe 108 has a rare oboe part, and in the mass "No. 12" is some fine difficult music for it.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Whistling Language.
It seems that there is really a whistling language. A French traveler, M. Lajard, has written a work on the subject which has been called the attention of the Paris Academy of Sciences. It is in the Canary Islands that people whistle instead of speaking when they hold converse with each other. Nor is the whistling language a mere language of conventional sounds. It is composed of words, as it were, like any other language, and the inhabitants of the Canary Islands attain great proficiency in it, so that they can converse on all sorts of subjects. The whistling noise is produced by placing two fingers inside the mouth.

M. Lajard declares that the language has a great affinity with Spanish. He has jotted some of it down in a sort of musical notation, and it is found that any sentence has exactly one syllable more than the equivalent sentence in Spanish, the extra sound being accounted for by the fact that the first syllable serves as a mere accent designed to attract the attention of the person addressed. M. Lajard learned enough of the language to converse to a certain extent with the natives.—London Telegraph.

Letting Temper Run Its Course.
"What a comfort it is occasionally to slam a door!" confessed one woman to another in a confidential chat. "There have been times when that privilege was a great safety valve to me."

The other laughed. "A little hard on the latch and hinges, wasn't it?" she said. "I knew a woman who showed me in a closet an old calico gown secured to a hook. She said to me, 'Whenever I am irritated to the verge of giving way I rush in here and give this gown a vigorous twist.' Its tattered folds were mutually eloquent of its value as a mood conductor. My own method of relief is to rush into the garden and dig. When my family see my trowel making the dirt fly they realize that I have got to the slaming door pitch and nobody disturbs me."—Hor Point of View in New York Times.

Comments on a Lecture.
"How do you like the lecture?" asked a woman of a man, both of whom were sitting before me in a car one day.

"Pretty well."
"What was it about?"
"Dickens."
"What did she say?"

"Well, she said a good many things. She cracked him up a lot, but for my part I don't see that he writes better than other folks."
"How does she dress?" once asked one woman of another.

"She wears a train and looks like a fashion plate! That isn't the way to reform the world. No woman has any business to lecture who does not wear a short gown."—Kate Field's Washington.

Prisoners Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Grotton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones alive. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Daniel J.
