OUR SATURDAY NIGHT. If you know but one thing but are thoroughly master of that your life has not been a failure. The man who understands shoeing a horse is a monopolist and enjoys a sinecure. All who know enough to wish their steed well should must come to him. He may not employ his time well, or make good use of his earnings, but nevertheless so far as he is master of his trade he is king among men.

GOVERNMENT MONOPOLY. Following is the plank of the Oregon People's party relating to the liquor traffic: 6. That alcohol in any form shall be sold only by state agents, said goods to be pure and sold at cost without profit to the agents, and shall not be drunk within the building nor within sixty feet of the place where delivered nor in any place of resort of gaming, thus abolishing license, the saloon in society and the saloon in politics. That the national government shall not license the sale of any alcoholic substance in any state legally prohibiting the sales thereof, nor shall it in any way interdict or interfere with such prohibitory laws.

WHERE THEY FAIL. The editor of this paper had a conversation with Senator Veatch the other day about the Oregon railroad commission, in which he expressed a favorable opinion. He got a bill through one branch of the legislature to abolish the commission. He has been its most unsparring critic in that body, both on its merits and for political reasons. He held it to be a Republican measure, conceived in corruption and to serve the corporations and as a useless burden on the people. He took that position for years on the stump and in the legislature. Now he says he begins to look upon the commission more favorably.

With LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you have to take internal remedies. JACK THE RIPPER. Traced Through the Colonies by a Corps of Detectives. THE DEEMING MURDER. Five Murders Already Proven Against Him.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10. - The steamer Alameda, which arrived from Australia brings details of the Deeming murders. Nothing since the early days of the settlement in West Australia has so stirred the colony to its depths. All business was stopped at every place through which Deeming passed on his way to Melbourne, and the people turned out to have a look at the criminal. The crushed and mangled body of a woman was found in a populous suburb of Windsor, southeast of Melbourne, March 5, and a week later Deeming was in custody, charged with the murder. The last occupant of the house was a man who gave the name of Drew, and he disappeared suddenly. He complained of the leaky condition of the walls of the house, and told the landlord that as he was a practical man he had bought some cement and would patch up the walls himself. He cemented his wife up in the walls. Drew was apparently of sporting proclivities, dressed in the height of fashion, and was bedecked with diamonds, and carried himself with the air of a lord. He was traced to the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm, where he was identified as Albert Williams. Eight days after the crime Williams sought another victim, through a matrimonial agency in Melbourne, and went on by steamer. On the voyage he made desperate love to a young lady passenger, Miss Kate Rounsefell, of Bathurst. His manner captured the heart of the fair passenger, and when they arrived at Sydney she had promised to become his wife. He was then traveling under the name of Baron Swanson, and in glowing terms pictured to her his vast handsome revenue, and made glorious promises for their future. Step by step the detectives traced him, aided in their search by his ostentatious display of diamonds and general bearing, and his love entanglement with Miss Rounsefell eventually led to his capture. At Sydney, Swanson was identified as Albert Deeming, a plumber and gas-fitter, who was accompanied by his wife and two children, and who served a sentence at Darlinghurst for larceny; and eventually the record of the man under the names of Deeming, Baron Swanson, Drew, Williams and Lawson was made bare to the world. He was traced by the police to the Southern Cross mine in the Yilgarn gold field, West Australia, where he was working as engineer, and was at the time furnishing a house in anticipation of his marriage to Miss Rounsefell. The latter's father was a tradesman who died some years ago, leaving a widow and children. The eldest sister is now a milliner at Bathurst, and Deeming's fiancée secured employment at the principal stationer's and news agency in Brisbane. She afterwards accompanied her brother to Brokenhill, and while there was taken sick and was obliged to return to her sister in Bathurst. It was on this trip that she met Deeming. She was only a country girl of 19, and never doubted the sincerity of Deeming's motives. The eldest sister was so taken with the alleged baron that she readily gave her consent to the marriage. While Deeming was at the mine he wrote his unsuspecting fiancée constantly, and in one of his letters, under date of February 8, he says he is in trouble, having had one of his bags stolen from his cabin with £150. Further on he says, "I must now tell you, dear, what I have done since my arrival here. Soon as I got here I put an advertisement in the paper I have sent you, by which I have been appointed managing engineer at wages of $6 per week with a house for the first six months, and $3 10s per week to follow. Besides this I expect to make $3 per week. The mine at Yilgarn is about 250 miles from Perth. This is a fine town and a healthy climate and everything that can be wished for and comfort. You must not think it is like Brokenhill, far from it. Now, as soon as you get this letter, dear, send me a wire, and let me know whether you can come at once. I will have a home for you and everything arranged for our marriage on your arrival. Now, don't keep me waiting, dear. So long as we are to be

Size and Strength of the Gulf Stream. Even those who navigate the waters of the Gulf stream do not fully realize the strength of its current. Two or three years ago a government vessel was anchored in the stream observing the current. The wind was very light when a sailing vessel was sighted ahead, drifting to the northward. As she came nearer and nearer it became evident that there would be a collision unless steps were taken to prevent it. The crew of the sailing vessel trimmed their sails to the gentle air, but it was useless, for onward she went, carried by the irresistible force of the current directly toward the bow of the steamer. As the vessels approached each other, by a skillful use of the rudder on board the steamer she was moved to one side, and the sailing vessel drifted past a few feet distant. The captain of the latter was as astonished as he was thankful that his vessel was not lost. All that he could cry out in broken English as he flashed by was, "I could not help it; the water bring me here." - John E. Pillsbury in Century.

Seven Thousand Miles of Wheels. If all the locomotives in the United States were coupled together they would make a train of solid iron and steel over 300 miles long. Add the passenger cars and we would have 300 miles more of wood and iron; this would give us a gigantic passenger train 600 miles in length, counting both engines and cars. Should we want a huge "mixed" train we might add the "box," "flat" and every other kind of freight car, and our train would then have a total length of over 7,000 miles!

A Georgia Negro Farmer. There is a negro in Meriwether county, Ga., who has fifteen children living. The family, it is said, eat a bushel of potatoes daily. They run a three-horse farm and make all their provisions and thirty bales of cotton besides. They raise sugar cane and make their own sirup and sugar. They even raise rice. They economize in every way, making their own plowstorks, for instance, doing their own blacksmithing, etc. Every edge is made to cut. An evidence of the negro's good management is shown in the fact that he has lived on the place twenty years. - Philadelphia Ledger.

Sharks' Teeth as Weapons. Sharks are among the most ancient of fishes. Long before the first reptiles appeared in the world, to be followed in their turn by the mammals, they ruled creation at a time when nearly all the earth was covered by seas. Thus great quantities of fossil sharks' teeth are found scattered over the bottom of the oceans. Such great ones as that mentioned have been largely utilized for battle axes and other purposes by savages, who are quick to take advantage of tools offered them by nature without labor. - Washington Star.

An Asiatic Alphabet. Silas B. Beach has discovered an Asiatic alphabet which has been wholly taken from the various changes which the moon undergoes during the month. This curious moon alphabet had twenty-eight letters, every one of which resembled the moon in some of its phases.
