portant matter. The result is complicated by the Australia ballot law and four tickets in the field. There is still a possibility of a fusion vote being cast against the Republican ticket, though in principle the Democratic, People's and Probi party were never so far apart.

The Australian ballot law will have and a secret ballot is always a benefit to the minority party. The falling off in the vote will reduce Republican majorities. The Alliance will cut both the old parties about equally. The Probibition vote will cut the Republicans three to one, is the general estimation. Workmen Treated Worse than the Slaves Eyer Were.

CONTRACT LABOR SLAVERY.

Workmen Surrounded and Watched by Armed Guards.

NEWARK, N. J., April 19 .- Karl Loeschuer, an Austrian, tells a remarkable tale of suffering he underwent while working for the Ponpon Phosphate Mining Company of South Carolina. Last December, when he had been in this country but a short time, he left this city and went to Philadelphia in quest of employment. While there he read in a local paper that workmen were wanted at the mines in South Carolina, He answered the advertisement, and. in company with twenty-four other men seeking employment, started for Charleston. On reaching that place the party changed cars, going to a small place called Ponpon station, the headquarters of the mining company. After waiting several hours on freight-cars, they arrived, and six or eight men armed with rifles and revolvers sprang off and drove the newcomers into a car like so many cattle. Arriving at the mine, they were set to digging. Loeschner says the work is extremely hard, and Heavily-armed men watched them all the time, and if a man lagged in his work he was taken aside, his back bared and unmercifully flogged with a heavy rope. The whipping was so brutal that many strong men fulness of the guards. Excessive prices were charged for food and the other necessities of life. The things had to be purchased at the company's stores, While Loeschner worked at the mines, from December 17 to March 18, he received only his railway fare, $4 for tools and the rest for food. He stood the inhuman treatment as long as possible, and at length, in the middle of March, planned to escape with one of the other hands. They watched their chance, and on the night of March 18, while the guards were quarreling over a game of cards, the two men succeeded in escaping from the building and stole away in the darkness. For two days they lived in one of the numerous swamps of that locality with nothing to eat, Hill, where they separated. Through the kindness of a brake-

For the Attacks on Catholics in a New York Paper.

NEW YORK, April 19.-The attacks on the Catholic church which have been appearing in Colonel Sheppard's Mail and Express have caused the Republican leaders considerable annoyance. The matter was brought fermally before the Republican executive committe at its last meeting by the reading of the following letter from Senator John Sherman: I have read the extracts you refer I have read the extracts you refer to from Colonel Sheppard's paper, and have no hesitation in saying he does not represent the feelings of the Republicans, but only his own. I think no Republican wants to in-terfere in any man's religious con-victions, nor should this question enter in any respect in the domain of party politics.

The committee passed a resolution pard and repudiating the utterauces of his paper on this subject.

END OF A GAY LIFE.

Once Surrounded by Friends, Now Dying Deserted.

NEW YORK, April 19.-Parents has seized Colonel James B. Mix, once Horace Greeley's protege. He is confined to his palatial home, in fore and had never been missed!"- the upper part of the city, watched constantly by nurses, who fear he may do himself some bodily injury.
