This term might be applied to Stevens Point, located on the Wiscomin Central Lines, at the gateway to the vast forest region which extends North to Lake Superior, a distance of 20 miles without a break, on account of its vast humber listerests. The wiscomin River to which the lumbermen have given the familiar and somewhat affectionate title of "Old Wiscoms," not alone acts as a tumber feeder to the city by furnishing through its numerous tributaries an outlet for thousands of acres of pine in the uppur country, but it furnishes a water power that is second only to that of Neenah and Menasha, which etties are also located on the "Central." Millions of feet of iumber are out every year, giving employment to hundreds of men. In addition to the lumber trade, it has numerous other manufactories; it is here where the large oar shops of the Wisconsin Central Lines are socated.
