CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Representative Turner, of Georgia, is said to be the ablest, and Allen, of Mississippi, is called the wisest member of congress.

Senator Manderson, president pro tem. of the senate, has been presented with a gravel made of woods grown upon the many battlefields in which he took part.

James Jeffrey Kochs, who succeeded the late John Boyle O'Reilly as the editor of The Pilot, is a taking Irishman with a rich brogue, a keen wit and a delightful sense of humor.

The coming giant is an eighteen-year-old boy named Myron Johnson, who lives at White Plains, N. Y. He is 6 feet 10 inches in height, weighs 300 pounds and is still growing.

The archbishop of Canterbury has not for thirty years allowed any mail to be delivered at his country residence on Sunday, and he scrupulously avoids reading any letters on that day.

Richard Wagner's son Siegfried, now a young man of twenty-one, is said to resemble the composer in appearance not a little. His mother is training him to manage the Bayreuth interests when she is gone.

Tennessee has six surviving ex-governors, and they all reside within the borders of the state. The oldest of them all is Senator Isham G. Harris, who has been in politics longer than any other man in the state.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale has in his library in Boston a series of large baskets, filled with pamphlets, suspended from the ceiling in such a way that they can be readily lowered and put back by means of lines and pulleys.

The distinguished Frenchman Ribot, whose career in politics has recently been phenomenally brilliant, credits much of his success to the ambition and encouragement of his wife, who was formerly Miss Burch, the daughter of a Chicago banker.

Michael Biddulph, member of parliament for Ross (Herefordshire), who made his maiden speech after he had sat seven years as a member, twenty years ago, a short time ago made another. These are the only two speeches he ever made in that body.

It is said that Maurice Barrymore will be Marie Wainwright's leading actor next season.

Jo-Jo, the "dog faced" boy, has earned about $200,000 in dime museums during the past ten years, all of which he has when he reaches his majority.

Dan Cosmoline, for six years treasurer of the Emma Abbott company, was remembered by the singer in her will for $5,000. He has just received a check for the amount.

"The Reckoning," by Sylvanus Daney, who is a brother of Henry Arthur Jones, has had a successful production in London. It will probably be heard in this country next season.

The friends of Charley Dockstader, the minstrel, will be pleased to hear that he has again assumed management of a first class minstrel company, with the brightest prospects for success and prosperity.

It is reported that the comedians Evans and Hopy will part at the end of the season. It is said that their relations lately have not been pleasant, and that a lawyer has been consulted about settling their affairs.

It is now definitely decided that Wilson Barrett will visit America next season. He intends opening in Boston in January, 1892, and will probably produce his "Othello," which, like his "Hamlet," will be gorgeously staged and novel in its business.

A genuine old Roman circus placed a thin slab of stone three feet long, has been acquired by the British museum. In the upper corner there are holes for cords to pass through, so that it might be hung up outside the theater, and it bears this inscription in Latin: "Circus full. Immense applause. Doors shut."

Over $1,000,000 worth of trotting horses were sold in Lexington, Ky., during February and March.

Allerton will spend the balance of his life at Independence, Ia., his owner having decided never to place him aboard a train again.

How would it do to send the field away when well hunched, regardless of the pole horse? is a question propounded by a prominent driver.

The horseman believes that the highest priced colt does not always make the fastest trotter or the greatest sire. Blood lines minus individual excellence are not very far from a blank.

William Engeman, controlling proprietor of the Brighton Beach race track, has sold his interest in the track to his uncle, George Engeman, for $30,000, and will retire from the turf.

Evidently Senator Stanford considers the 4-year-old colt Advertiser the true successor to his sire, Electioneer, in the Palo Alto stud. He recently refused $110,000 for the young stallion.

John Porter, the famous English trainer, says that no foals born after May are ever winners, and that if the English Jockey club would alter the dates for horses' ages accordingly all would be well.

Among the improvements decided on for the hits track at Independence, Ia., is an amphitheater to be 250 feet long, capable of seating 10,000 people and to cost $25,000. It will be constructed in the latest modern style, provided with handsome cafes, and will be seated throughout with opera chairs.

COLLEGE MEN AT A DISCOUNT.

Frank Adams from a sensible Sister Aided One Young Fellow to Get a Start. He was a college bred youth, and after graduation came the question of how he was to make his living. He had the right stuff in him, though at first it was pretty well hidden by the high opinion he held of his own capacity.

A farmer's son, with no influential friends to assist him in obtaining a situation, he found himself alone in Boston. He presented himself at business offices, wrote letters in a queer to advertisements, sought interviews with men prominent in commercial and banking circles, but was everywhere met with refusal. At last he began to grow despondent and to wonder what a college education was good for anyhow.

He now sought the advice of an old maid sister, his senior by many years, whose experiences in the world had made her thoroughly practical. She questioned him closely as to how he made application for a position, how he approached an employer, what he said of himself, etc. When the young man had answered, she said:

"It's just as I supposed, John. You didn't ask for a place as an employee at all. Your method is more like demanding that the employer turn over his entire business to you. You'll have to go about the thing differently. Don't attach so much importance to your college acquirements. Collegians nowadays are as thick as huckleberries down east, and some of them are working for a mere song."

"Don't say to a man from whom you expect a situation, 'My dear sir, if there is an existing vacancy in your establishment I shall be glad to fill it, being assured that my qualifications will enable me to assume any position you may have to offer. Just believe that there are a few things left which you don't know, and make your application accordingly.'"

John was sensible, and saw the force of his sister's remarks. His next request for a situation was couched in more modest terms than the others, and his college training was not mentioned until the very last part of the interview, when it was drawn out by the employer's own questions.

He got that situation after a few days without further trouble. That was several years ago, and today he holds a much better position in the same establishment.

Only the other day John repeated his sister's advice to a recent graduate from his alma mater, at the same time relating his own experience.—Boston Herald.

Hardy Meat Eaters.
Many races of men live entirely on animal food, and these are the most hardy, and from all I have been able to gather on the subject the most free from diseases of all kinds. Sir Francis Head says of the Pampas Indians: "They are all horsemen, or rather pass their lives on horseback. In spite of the climate, which is burning hot in summer and freezing in winter, these brave men, who have never yet been subdued, are entirely naked, and have not even a covering for their head. They live together in tribes, each of which is governed by a cacique, but they have no fixed place of residence. Where the pasture is good they are to be found until it is consumed by their horses, and they then instantly move to a more verdant spot. They have neither bread, fruit nor vegetables, but they subsist entirely on the flesh of their mares."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Electricity in Modern Warships.
In modern warships electricity is playing a very important part. The commanding officer, who sits in his conning tower, has at his disposal every electrical device known, and by the pressure of a button can make his wishes known to every part of the vessel, as well as direct its movements mechanically. Now, by a new application, the fighters on the Miantonomoh can blow away the smoke from their eyes, and it may not be long ere some invention is patented by which they may blow this smoke into the eyes of their enemies.—Electricity.

How Sharks Bite.
I once hooked a shark about five feet long, which fought longer than usual, and when brought to gaff he was found to be hooked in a side fin, so that he retained his full powers. So also with the hammerhead. The shovelnose shark I have found to be the most active of them. The nurse shark lies on the bottom, and its bite is not felt or its presence known to the angler till he raises his rod, then the fish comes up like a log, without resistance.—Forest and Stream.

The Only Way.
Mrs. Youngmother (with tones elevated above baby's screams)—Don't sing to the child, Edward, for mercy's sake; he'll never go to sleep if you do.
Edward (who has an execrable voice and knows it)—Yes he will, dear; he'll do it in self defense.—Kate Field's Washington.

Logic and Love.
Dejected Sutor—If you intended to say "no" why did you let me propose?
Sweet Girl—Why, how could I say "no" if you didn't—New York Weekly.

Strength and Health.
If you are not feeling strong and healthy, try Electric Bitters. If "La Grippe" has left you weak and weary use Electric Bitters. This remedy acts directly on the liver, stomach and kidneys, generally aiding these organs to perform their functions. If you are afflicted with sick headache, you will find speedy and permanent relief by taking Electric Bitters. One trial will convince you that this is the remedy you need. Large bottles only 50c, at Fry's drugstore, 225 Commercial street.

THE OLD RED CRADLE.

A Bit of Household Furniture Is Put Up at Auction and the Sale Goes On. After the woman had been away for days he went through the house like a man in a dream. He gradually came to a realization of the truth. All her little things were there, but she was far away. Her bird hopped in its gilded cage and peeped in vain for food from her hand. Days went by. The dream was gradually clearing in his mind, and when it was over it left him as weak and undecided as a child.

The next day out on the wall hung the red flag of the auctioneer. He was going to sell out and go away. The auctioneer was saying, in his metallic, mercantile way: "This ladies and gentlemen, is part of the property of Mr. James Bardell, who is suddenly obliged to leave an account of ill health. And how much am I offered?"

The bids went along lively, one after another. They sold her chairs, her carpets, her curtains, her dishes, her beds, her bedding. Every seam, every stitch, every chip in the paint seemed to cry out the story of the happiness of other days, and of a home despoiled. Still, one after another, the neighbor women, alert for bargains, carried them off.

"And now," said the auctioneer, "here, ladies and gentlemen, we have the little old red cradle, such as you and I were rocked in in the old New England farmhouse home. My client tells me it has been in the family for fifty years. Go on now, give me a bid."

He held up the red cradle. "Two dollars," said a gruff voice, that of a secondhand dealer at the corner. "And ten," said another. "And twenty-five," said a third. "The old red cradle, what do I hear?" exclaimed the auctioneer in his mercantile tone.

After the sale, Isaacs, who had bought the cradle, was setting his score with the auctioneer's clerk. He said to the man whose wife had gone away: "I have bought nearly all your stuff."

"You have, Isaacs," "Do you want to buy them back?" said the shrewd merchant, with a cunning smile. "Leave me," said the man abruptly; "take your goods and leave me." "In the morning," said Isaacs. At noon next day Bardell said to his servant: "Why doesn't Isaacs come over? Go and tell him I want to see him at once. He must take the stuff away, as we must get out at once."

"He says," said the servant, coming back, "that he has changed his mind. He refuses to take the goods." "What's that?" "He bought everything in for your wife, who stood in the crowd and broke completely down when the old red cradle was put up at auction. Here is a note saying that she awaits your forgiveness to return home."

The old red cradle. Ah! what is its song of "Home, Sweet Home!"—New York Recorder.

Carthage's Great Snake.
The ancients firmly believed in monster serpents of all kinds and of both the land and marine species. During the wars with Carthage a great snake is said to have kept the Roman army from crossing the Bagradas river for several days. The monster swallowed up no less than seventy Roman soldiers during this combat, and was not conquered until a hundred stones from as many different catapults were fired upon it all at one time. The monster skull and skin were preserved and afterward exhibited in one of the Roman temples. The dried skin of the creature was 120 feet in length, according to Pliny.—St. Louis Republic.

A Borrowed Sermon.
So early as James II's time, we read of a country clergyman who electrified his congregation by the statement that it was "for their vices that Providence has afflicted them and their families with that cruel pestilence which is spreading everywhere in this town." He had omitted to read the discourse right through, or he would have known that this referred to the great plague in London.—Illustrated London News.

One Way of Telling.
Wife—I know that Mrs. Bronstone was thinking all sorts of horrid things of me while she was talking to me.
Husband—Why, my dear, I don't understand why you should say that. She certainly was very pleasant.
Wife—Oh, yes, of course, but she kept looking at my dress all the time she was talking.—Detroit Free Press.

The Topaz and the Coral.
Coral was made use of by the Romans as a protection against the evil eye, and popular superstition has credited the topaz with the power of depriving boiling water of its heat. Perhaps the most wonderful properties, however, were ascribed to the chimerical stones which many creatures were supposed to carry in their heads.—Queries Magazine.

Boston Night Object.
"New York is ruled by so few politicians," said Marlow, of Philadelphia, "that I should think you'd have its name changed to Boston."—Harper's Bazar.

Strength and Health.
If you are not feeling strong and healthy, try Electric Bitters. If "La Grippe" has left you weak and weary use Electric Bitters. # "German Syrup"

A Farmer at Edom, Texas, Says: "We are six in a family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles—Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this country."

A LUMBERMAN'S RENDEZVOUS.

This term might be applied to Stevens Point, located on the Wisconsin Central, at the gateway to the vast forest region which extends North to Lake Superior a distance of 250 miles without a break, on account of its vast lumber interests. The Wisconsin River in this vicinity, on account of its vast lumber interests, is a most effective title of "Wild Wisconsin," not only as a lumber feeder to the city by furnishing through its numerous tributaries an outlet for thousands of acres of prime timber, but also as a source of water power that is second only to that of Newash and Menasha, which cities are located on the "Central." Millions of feet of lumber are cut every year, giving employment to hundreds of men. In addition to the lumber trade, it has numerous other manufactures, such as the manufacture of carriages, and the Wisconsin Central Lumber is located here. For tickets, maps, pamphlets and full information apply to G. F. McSaid, C. F. and T. A. Minneapolis, Minn., and to J. C. Pond, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.
