DODGING JURY DUTY.

The Methodical Habits of a Traveler Sustain His Explanations.

Among the jurors in Justice Cullen's court on Tuesday was a well built man, who looked youthful in spite of his silvery gray hair and mustache. He had been summoned to appear in court that day, but had not yet been called when the reporter met him.

"I wonder," he said, "whether I will really be made a juror this time? I have been dodging jury service every year since I came to Brooklyn to live, twenty-eight years ago."

"That is a frank confession."

"Oh, but I didn't know anything about it at any time until it was too late. You see, I go traveling every winter through the southern states, and by some strange chance the subpœna server always visited my house after I had started. There being nobody at home, his subpœna lay in the hall where he put it, until my return. Then I would go down to the commissioner of jurors and explain."

"Did he always accept your explanation readily?"

"No, but fortunately I am methodical, and I carry constantly the statement of my whereabouts for a year past. I travel for pleasure, and I have plenty of time to keep a record of my movements. I put down every day while traveling the name of the place and hotel at which I am stopping. I do that for a double reason, but the most important is that it enables me to keep track of the hotels. For instance, say that I go to a city in Texas and put up at Brown's hotel. I find the accommodation is beastly. I note that fact. The next time I go there I will try Smith's, and I will keep on changing until I find the best. Then, too, whenever I find a room in a hotel that suits me particularly I note that.

"The result of that practice is that I know now the right rooms in the right hotels in nearly all the large cities of the south. When a friend of mine tells me he is going to a certain city in Georgia, I refer to my diary and tell him to apply for room 17 at Robinson's hotel 'If you can't get that room,' I say, 'get one like it. It will please you.

"Now, as to this jury business. The officials usually look doubtful when I tell them I was out of town. Then I refer to my diary and say, 'If you will write to Brown's hotel, Fort Worth, you will find that I occupied room 6 on the day your subpœna reached my house.' Then I read off the other places I was at for a week thereafter, and by that time they are convinced. That I should finally be caught strikes me as amusing."

Half an hour later he was in the jury box listening intently while the merits of a suit for damages against a property owner were being revealed by opposing counsel.—New York Sun.

Tabby Whipped an Alligator.

A house cat belonging to Mr. Walton was in the habit of going to the river and feeding on mussels and such fish as it could get, and it was noticed several times that when the cat moved along the bank a ripple in the water showed that an alligator kept pace with it in the water. The cat, however, was aware of the alligator's presence, but showed no signs of fear.

One day the cat approached too near the water in its eagerness to get a fish and was grasped by the hind legs by an alligator about three feet long. The cat made a spring and got away, but its leg was bitten badly and bled freely. The taste of blood seemed to put the alligator into a frenzy, for it came out on the bank and continued the pursuit. The cat turned on its enemy, and then began one of the fiercest fights seen in a long time. The cat was so quick that it was impossible for the alligator to get a bite at it, and the result was that the saurian soon endeavored to beat a retreat to the water.

But the cat now began an offensive attack and cut off the way, biting the alligator in the throat and tender spots under the arms until the reptile was bleeding and almost exhausted. The fight continued, and when at last the alligator gave up it was bleeding from a hundred wounds. The cat was seemingly unhurt, except in the wounded leg, which was injured before the fight began.—Vernon (Fla.) Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Saving Money on Sixty Cents a Day.

Out of what trifles does poverty contrive to extract a living. A decently dressed man, with one arm, sold me some fusees at a cent a box yesterday. I asked him what he made on them, and he told me that he cleared two cents on every five boxes. He sold from 100 to 150 boxes a day. "And can you live on this?" I asked. "Yes, sir," said he, cheerfully. "I hire a room for one dollar a week and cook for myself. I live and save money. I've got a savings bank account, and please God I'll have a stand next winter if I can get a permit."

And he showed me a bankbook with a credit for fifty odd dollars in it—fifty odd dollars filched from his actual necessities out of an income never greater than sixty cents a day!—New York Cor. Pittsburg Bulletin.

Photographing Hunters' Lies.

At length an ingenious inventor has devised a means of putting to the test sportsmen's tall stories. The idea is to place a small camera on the barrel of the gun, the shutter of which is arranged to work simultaneously with the action of the trigger. Every bird will now be able to tell his own posthumous tale or to present a graphic picture of a happy deliverance.—New York Journal.

Cleaning Bottles.

Eggshells are nice to clean bottles or cruets, also little bits of raw potato and soapsuds. Shake well, then rinse several times.—Exchange.

The Sunken City of Cissa.

Both Pliny and Decimus Secundinus incidentally mention the Istrian island and the city of Cissa, and the ecclesiastical records of the province of Aquileia for the years 579 to 626 A. D. mention two "Bishops of Cissa." Since that time we have no record of the place or what became of it. Fishermen have long contended that they know of a place on the Istrian coast of the Adriatic sea, south of the Rovigno lighthouse, where their nets get tangled on the spires of sunken churches and other public buildings of a city long since submerged. In January, 1890, the Austrian Imperial Academy of Sciences sent a convoy of boats and ships, under Rear Admiral Hinke, with instructions to make a thorough examination of the spot designated by the fishermen.

The diver who made the descent says: 'On reaching the bottom I was astonished to find myself upon the walls of an overturned building. Proceeding farther I observed continuous rows of buildings and streets, the doors and windows being blocked with masses of seaweed and gravel. From my observations I should say that I had had the unique experience of examining what had once been a large and flourishing city. When I left the place I brought with me to the surface a cut cornerstone with mortar on one side, the mortar being still perfectly firm."

Dr. Hilber wants the Austrian government to make appropriations for exploring the site, which he firmly believes to be that of the lost Romam city of Cissa. —St. Louis Republic.

'Lection Day in Rhode Island.

'Lection day in Rhode Island is not the day the votes are cast, but the day the governor is inaugurated. On voting day there are fires in the houses, and the people wear overcoats and shawls. But on 'lection day, which is a week or so later, all fires are put out for the season, the overcoats are laid away in camphor, and the little girls have fresh white dresses. This is the custom, now of course somewhat moderated, but elderly people tell that in their day it was more rigidly enforced than a law. A housekeeper that would rebuild a fire after 'lection day was regarded as an eccentric, lawless, wasteful woman, to whom one would be chary of lending tubs or of setting up neighborly ways. An old lady relates her misery as a child going about in low neck and short sleeves with blue lips and shivering on her way to church, but without questioning the reasonableness of the custom.

In other parts of the country May 1 used to be the date for extinguishing fires and putting on summer clothes. After that there were no weak concessions to cold rains and chilling winds. Even in this enlightened day there are parts of the country where, after the high domestic rite of housecleaning is established, the fires are extinguished and the grates are stopped up until Thanksgiving Day. There are stalwart minded individuals who erect such limits for themselves. An overcoat laid off, it would be weakness to resume; a spring jacket once worn, it would be cowardly to renounce.—New York Evening Sun.

Some Fine Italian Mosaics Exhumed.

From an archæological point of view an interesting discovery has just been made in this neighborhood, about half a mile to the north of the famous Villa Livia, at Prima Porta, on the Via Flaminia. By the merest accident, in the open campagna have been found the remains of what must have been a most spacious villa. So far the discovery consists of the pavements of nine rooms, all of them executed in the most beautiful colored mosaics. In the principal room the design represents a Medusa's head surrounded by a garland of the most delicate design intertwined with birds and leaves, in which the various colors are most perfect. But perhaps the floor with the most beautiful design ever unearthed is that in a smaller room adjoining that already spoken of. It represents an Egyptian scene of a goddess holding a snake, which is drinking out of a cup, while another figure is presenting a bird.

Nothing could surpass the beauty of the colors or the grace of the design, and the whole is as fresh and vivid as if it had been just executed. Unfortunately there seems to be nothing but the flooring of the villa left. The government has come to an arrangement with Signor Piacentini, on whose property this interesting discovery has been made, to buy the mosaics and have them carefully brought to a museum in Rome. They date from the time of Augustus.—Rome Cor. London News.

Blanket Your Horses.

As every reader is aware, a pair of fine horses is sometimes seen standing unblanketed before one of our large stores in cold weather, their bodies steaming from the effects of fast driving, while comfortably seated on the box of the carriage are butler and driver smothered in furs. To correct this, the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has adopted a most ingenious and effective remedy. It has provided a man with a sign, "Please Blanket Your Horses," and when a team is found unblanketed, the man simply takes position in close proximity to the equipage, a crowd soon collects, and the character of the remarks made by the assemblage are not calculated to make the practice popular. The horses are either blanketed or driven away to more congenial quarters, and the banner man quietly goes in pursuit of other offenders.—Boston Commercial.

Hilarity at a Funeral.

Cheerful music was so admired by Frederick Moet, a wealthy gentleman of Buffalo, that he gave instructions to his relatives to have plenty of it at his obsequies. When his body was passed into the Buffalo crematory there was waltz music from an excellent band and a quartet sang several popular melodies. When the body had been reduced to ashes the funeral party went to a restaurant and enjoyed a sumptuous dinner provided at the request of the deceased. —Yankee Blade.

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

John Greenleaf Whittier, the American poet, began life as a shoemaker.

Congressman Bland, of silver bill fame, is a short, rather fat man, who dresses with remarkable eccentricity.

Governor Eagle, of Arkansas, is by occupation a farmer and by inclination a preacher. Baptist congregations sometimes invite him to fill the pulpit, and he is said to be really eloquent.

Charles Gayarre, the Louisiana historian, a fine writer and accomplished scholar, is over eighty years of age and in destitute circumstances. There is a movement on foot in New Orleans for his relief.

Sam Small, the evangelist, has grown a beard that curiously alters his appearance. He also, much as he has had to say against dudes, shines resplendent nowadays in patent leather shoes and a very elegant black frock coat.

Lord Dufferin is so fond of yachting that the absence of an opportunity to indulge in it is the fly in the ointment of his official life at Paris. While embassador at Rome he passed every moment he could spare from his post on his yacht.

Emerson Bennett was widely known twenty years ago as a novelist, his "Prairie Flower" having reached a sale of 100,000 copies. He is a veteran of seventy and lives in Philadelphia. Mr. Bennett is still a prolific maker of manuscript writing all night and sleeping all day.

Professor W. K. Townsend, of New Haven, who has been appointed United States district judge for Connecticut in place of Judge Shipman, is about forty years of age. He is Phelps professor of contracts, admiralty, jurisprudence and torts in the Yale law school, and a zealous Yale man.

Professor Edwin C. Bissell, of the Hartford Theological seminary, who has accepted the chair of Biblical theology in McCormick university, Chicago, is an Amherst graduate, and during the war was a captain in the Fifty-second Massachusetts regiment.

WHISPERS ABOUT WOMEN.

Mrs. Priscilla Scroggins, of Georgia, who is said to be 115 years old, has 1,274 descendants living, of whom 250 are great-grandchildren.

Miss Cornwallis West, who was recently married to Prince Henry of Pless, is barely seventeen—just the age of her mother at the time of the latter's marriage.

Miss Helen Gladstone, daughter of the "Grand Old Man," is to become one of the chief assistants of Mrs. Sedgwick, the new principal of Newnham college, England.

Marshal Bazaine's widow is still living in Mexico, the country in which she was born, and yet retains her husband's name. Few people are aware that she was his second wife.

Mrs. Anna Catherine Sharp, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Lucy Evans, of Independence, Mo., are two splendid examples of healthy old age, one having recently celebrated her 114th and the other her 108th birthday.

At the school election at Evanston, Ills., Mrs. Mary B. Willard, the venerable mother of Miss Frances E. Willard, cast her first vote, at the ripe age of ninety years. Miss Willard was absent from home and consequently did not vote.

Mrs. Cornwallis West, who is still an exceedingly pretty and young looking woman, first became known as a reigning beauty about the time Mrs. Langtry appeared upon the social horizon, and during several seasons divided the honors with her.

Mrs. George Hearst has a number of rare hangings and valuable old prayer rugs and tapestries in her beautiful new house in Washington, which was so sadly closed almost before it was finished by the long illness and death of Senator Hearst.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Five acres of space in the Midway Plaisance have been reserved for a nursery exhibit.

S. J. Hunter, of Nevada, Mo., has a collection of over 11,000 varieties of woods, petrifications, etc., which he purposes exhibiting at the fair.

The marble slab presented by the Empress Josephine to Panama will be included in the exhibit from that country. Official consent for its removal has been granted.

The Suffolk Horse society, England, has offered two gold medals, of the value of fifty dollars each, for the best Suffolk horse and mare or filly exhibited at the World's fair in Chicago.

The New South Wales World's fair commission will send for exhibition at the exposition copies of the noted aboriginal cave inscriptions of northern Queensland, and also a whole tribe of aborigines.

Every species of fish and other aquatic animals large enough to be seen, which is native to inland waters and to the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, except perhaps a live whale, will be exhibited in the fisheries department of the exposition.

ODDS AND ENDS.

In France all postage stamps are sold at the cigar shops.

The first theater in the United States was built at Williamsburg, Va., in 1752.

The oldest bank note on record is a Chinese note painted about 1368 and now in the British museum.

The entire population of the world could be provided for in the United States, allowing each person 1½ acres of land.

LOVE'S PLEASURE HOUSE.

Love built for himself a Pleasure House—
A Pleasure House fair to see
The roof was gold, and the walls thereof
Were delicate ivory.

Violet crystal the windows were,
All gleaming and fair to see—
Pillars of rose stained marble upbore
The house where men longed to be.

Violet, gold and white and rose,
The Pleasure House fair to see
Did show to all, and they gave Love thanks
For work of such mastery.

Love turned away from his Pleasure House
And stood by the sail, deep sea—
He looked therein, and he flung therein
Of his treasure the only key

Now never a man till time be done
That Pleasure House fair to see
Shall fill with music and merriment
Or praise it on bended knee.

—Philip Bourke Marston in New York Times.

A City of Homes.

I cannot force Minneapolis to challenge the world to produce her equal, but it seems to me that it will be difficult to find another influential trading and manufacturing city that is so peculiarly a city of homes. It was after riding over mile after mile of her streets and boulevards, and noting the thousands of separated cottages, each in its little garden, that I came to a locality wherein there were a few—a very few—apartment houses. They were not what we in New York call "tenement houses," for the poor seemed superior to the evil, and lived in their own tiny boxes; they were flat houses for families few in members and indolent by nature.

These were so very few that the array of dwellings took an extraordinary importance. Try, then, to fancy the pleasure and surprise with which I read in the city directory afterward a statement that the city's 164,738 inhabitants occupy 32,026 dwellings. If there were 921 more dwellings there would be one to every five persons, that is to say, one to each family.—Julian Ralph in Harper's.

Perfect Beauty Is Rare.

The other day chance brought me in a prosaic electric car beside a girl whose profile was the most beautiful example of piquant delicacy and regularity possible to conceive. Glances were stolen at her from time to time, and the artistic spirit which animates even the average Bostonian had begun to boil with admiration when just at that moment she turned her front face, and the ideal vision melted into thin air. She was actually ordinary. A sculptor could have told what was the matter with the proportions, but it only proved to the layman's mind that this thing we call beauty exists merely in fractions, and the perfect whole is but a dream of genius after supping full on many models.—Boston Herald.

The Indian Likes "Canned Truck."

The California Indian is as a rule an epicure. True his forefathers feasted on acorn bread, dried grasshoppers, roasted angleworms, and even on occasion browsed on the succulent alfileria, like their four footed intimates. But the modern Indian is not built that way. He has as keen an appreciation of the good things of the table as his white acquaintances. Like the old Arizona miner, his idea of heaven is a place where one can live on "canned truck" for an indefinite period, and wherever he swarms the merchants with whom he deals cater to this taste in every possible way. "Canned truck" of every kind is kept in quantity, and the gaudier the labels the better the sales.—San Francisco Chronicle.

When Dundas Was Shaved.

A story is told of Dundas, who, when being shaved at Edinburgh, suddenly felt the razor drawn across his throat, while the barber rushed from the room, exclaiming, "Take that, traitor!" Dundas put up his hand to feel for blood, but the crime had been committed with the back of the razor. On his appearance in the cabinet, after this story had doubtless reached his colleagues, Mr. Pitt inquired, "Are you quite sure your head is on your shoulders?"—Nineteenth Century.

The Etymology of "Umpire."

When we have found out a new etymology, what is it but a new instance of the recovery of an old and forgotten predication? When, for example, we learned that "umpire" has dropped an initial n, and that the word represents non-par ("odd, single"), we find that the fact of his standing between two discordant parties as a single arbitrator was the predication of which this functionary was the subject.—Professor John Earle in Forum.

A Hint for the Flatterer.

DESERVING PRAISE.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. D. J. Fry's, Druggists.
