"German Syrup"

Here is something from Mr. Frank A. Hale, proprietor of the De Witt House, Lewiston, and the Tontine Hotel, Brunswick, Me. Hotel men meet the world as it comes and goes, and are not slow in sizing people and things up for what they are worth. He says that he has lost a father and several brothers and sisters from Pulmonary Consumption, and is himself frequently troubled with colds, and he often coughs enough to make him sick at his stomach. Whenever he has taken a cold of this kind he uses Boschee's German Syrup, and it cures him every time. Here is a man who knows the full danger of lung troubles, and would therefore be most particular as to the medicine he used. What is his opinion? Listen! "I use nothing but Boschee's German Syrup, and have advised, I presume, more than a hundred different persons to take it. They agree with me that it is the best cough syrup in the market."

GINSENG.

THE POWER OF MAN

The Chinese prize the Ginseng root, much more highly than Opium. They call it Ginseng: meaning the Power of Man. When scarce the finest quality has been sold for $400 per ounce. Now, why do they pay such a price? Because they believe it gives them the much desired nerve force. How many people suffer from weakness? What a distressing ailment! You lack vim, nerve force, energy, power. You feel all gone. You are always praying for strength, yet getting weaker and weaker. Listen to the voice of reason. Place your case before intelligent specialists capable of helping you, even curing you. By the mere writing of a letter you can have your case diagnosed free, absolutely free of all charges. HUMOR.

THAT LETTER.

The Head of the Family Thought It Wasn't Just the Thing.

Some people readily forget that they were ever young, and never recognize the fact that history is apt to repeat itself in individual humanity as well as in wider senses.

The parents stood gazing with frowning brows at their daughter, while she was trembling and weeping. Their frowns deepened as the mother wiped her glasses preparatory to reading a letter found in the girl's pocket. It began:

"Angel of my existence"——

"What!" cried the old man, "you don't mean to say it begins like that? Oh, that a child of mine should correspond with— But pray proceed, my dear."

"'Existence' spelled with an 'a' too," added the mother.

"Why, the lunatic can't spell," said the old man.

"It is impossible for me to describe the joy with which your presence has filled me."

"Then why does he attempt it, the donkey? But pray don't let me interrupt you. Go on, go on; let joy be unconfined."

"I have spent the whole night in thinking of you"——

"That's picturesque, anyhow."

——"and in bitterly deriding the obstinate, disagreeable old buffer, who will not consent to our union."

"Great Scott! So I'm obstinate, disagreeable and an old buffer, eh? Oh, let me get at him!"

"But, Theodorus, my dear," interrupted the old lady.

"Yes, yes—one moment. I was about to observe that the hand that could pen such words would not hesitate to poison the most cherished relative."

"Theodorus, I didn't see this over the leaf."

"Eh? Let me see. Hum"——

"Yours, with all the love of my heart, "10th May, 1860. THEODORUS."

"Why, bless my eyes, it's one of my letters."

(Sensation.)

"Yes, pa," explained the olive branch; "I found it yesterday—only you wouldn't let me speak."

"You may go into the garden, dear. Hem! we've made a nice mess of it."—London Tit-Bits.

"Nae Muckle to Brag Aboot!"

One night in the commercial room of a hotel in one of our large towns some travelers were talking over the state of trade when one young man began to boast of the large orders he had booked.

An old Scotchman interrupted him, saying:

"Na, na, mon; you've din naethin of the kind."

The young man very angrily retorted, "I'm a liar then?"

The old Scotchman replied, "Weel, that's nae muckle to brag aboot."

The room was convulsed with laughter.—Spare Moments.

What It Was.

A gentleman found himself one evening in delightful tete-a-tete with a fair graduate of a well known finishing school for young ladies. She showed him the curriculum of the institution, and he, after simulating a profound interest in the matter and knowledge of the subjects, being in reality awed by the evidence of her large mental stature, asked her rather hesitatingly, with reference to the various courses of study, in what she had graduated. "Oh," she said sweetly, "I graduated in white Swiss."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Calino as a Sailor.

"My watch had dropped to the bottom of the sea. We were off the coast of Greenland. I dived, picked up my watch, but the ice had closed again overhead, and there was no getting through. To swim around would have been too long. I shouted with the voice of a Stentor, 'Throw me a saw!' They threw me down one; I began to saw the ice, but the sawdust got in my eyes."—Aurelien Scholl.

Unfailing Symptom.

"Judging from the dress and general appearance of that couple that has just got aboard, it's a case of bride and bridegroom. They are starting on a wedding tour."

"That may be, but they've both been married before."

"How do you know?"

"Can't you see she's carrying all the bundles?"—Chicago Tribune.

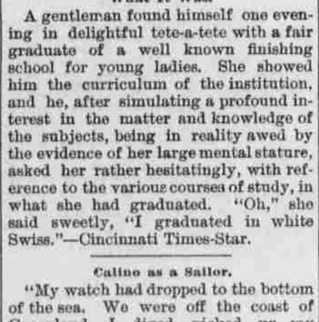
Mute Eloquence.

"Madam, the young lady to whom you introduced me hasn't a word to say."

"But she has a hundred thousand marks in her own right!"

"Ah! certainly that speaks volumes!"—Buntes Allerlei.

Shopping by Proxy.



"I'm going down town to shop a little. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes. Look in my bureau drawer and you'll find my purse. Take ten dollars and spend it for me."

"What shall I buy?"

"Oh, anything."—Harper's Bazar.

When the Lamp Explodes.

Policemen and firemen are frequently called into private houses to put out exploding lamps or clothing that has caught fire from an accident of the kind. When a lamp is blazing ceiling high it requires considerable nerve to take hold of it and hurl it out of the window, but that is the simplest and best way to prevent disaster. If that is impossible, or if the burning oil has got on the carpet or table cover, a shovelful of sand or, failing sand, of common soil will generally do all that is necessary.

The same applies to any one whose clothing is covered with oil and on fire. If he can lie down and have some soil shoveled on his clothes the the fire will go out instantly, whereas a dozen buckets of water would hurt him much worse than the fire. A bucket of sand standing in a cupboard in a room where a coal oil lamp is burned is a good precaution, and may check at the start what might otherwise be a most disastrous fire.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Unfortunate Clam.

The first man who used the expression, "Don't be a clam," should be credited with a bit of advice chock full of wisdom. Somebody is after the clam in season and out, day and night. It is devoured in soft shelled infancy by fishes, sea fowl and crows, is sealed in cans, made into stews and chowders, baked in big piles on the seashore, boiled in free lunch barrooms and dug for fishermen's bait.

The clam furnishes food for many men of many lands, and also for seals, polar bears, the walrus, foxes, crows, gulls and fishes, and there never was a bait, with the exception possibly of porgy chum—i. e., ground up porgies—that equaled the clam for sea fishing. The clam is at home on the Maine coast, thriving in the mud of sheltered beaches between high and low water marks.—Cor. New York Sun.

The Largest Olive Orchard in the World.

The largest olive orchard in the world belongs to Mr. Ellwood Cooper, of Santa Barbara county, California. Mr. Cooper purchased the land occupied by this mammoth grove of oriental trees away back in 1871, the entire orchard, including the portions of it which are devoted to the culture of English walnuts, Japanese persimmons, almonds, etc., comprising 1,700 acres. The orchard now has 10,000 olive trees, 8,100 in full bearing, the remainder being young trees set out during the past year and a half. Besides the olive trees, there are 3,000 English walnut trees, 4,500 Japanese persimmon trees, 10,000 almond trees and about 4,000 other fruit and nut trees. The 10,000 olive trees yielded 40,000 quart bottles of olive oil in 1891.—St. Louis Republic.

Flying Five Kites Together.

On May 9, 1891, at Bergen Point, N. J., I sent up five kites, from two to four feet in diameter, all held by one string at the surface of the earth. The altitude of the highest kite was probably nearly a mile, as roughly calculated from the slant and length of the strings. It is therefore clear that the number of kites to be flown is limited only by the strength of the string, its length, and the force and steadiness of the wind. The variously colored kites fly one above another with a very pretty effect. They look like colored disks floating irregularly at a great height, because each kite is held at a slightly different angle from every other, making differences of position in the sky.—William A. Eddy in St. Nicholas.

Mrs. O'Rafferty—Yis. He stands beyant the back curtain, and his mouth to a hole forninst a candle, an whin Pawnee Ike shoots at th' candle he blows it out.—New York Weekly.

An Old Expression.

Here is a queer perversion of language, long current among boys and now getting into print: "According to the description left with the detectives, Mr. Blank is about 5 feet 5 inches in height and of slight build, and weighs about 130 pounds. He has red hair, red mustache and sideburns, and fair complexion."

"Sideburns" are what the English call whiskers and the Americans side whiskers. They were worn in flowing and picturesque style during the war by General Burnside, and came to be called after him, first Burnside whiskers, then simply Burnsides. The transition to "sideburns" was easy.—Buffalo Courier.

Some Chinese Canned Goods.

In San Francisco the Chinese canneries put up green balsam apples in the same manner as tomatoes and other vegetables, for use in winter, when heretofore dried balsam apples have been substituted. The Chinese balsam apple, called fu kwa, has a bitter taste, and is one of their most highly esteemed vegetables.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Joke on the "Thunderer."

The death of a Mr. Catty in London has called to mind the amusing trick that was played on the London Times years ago. This obituary notice appeared in The Times:

Died, on the 1st inst., Mr. Magog Catt, of the town clerk's office, Guildhall. Sincerely regretted.

Now Magog Catt was a beautiful and well known tabby called Magog, attached to the town clerk's office. Magog had departed this life. More fun was derived from The Times announcement than the mischievous clerks who sent the notice had anticipated. The Mr. Catty who has just died was the head clerk in the office, and hundreds of people who read the notice of Mr. Magog Catt's death confounded tabby with the head clerk, and condolences began to pour in. Many people called to inquire what caused Mr. Catt's sudden demise. Others left cards without inquiry. Many letters of sympathy, applications for the supposed vacant post and circulars from undertakers began to pour in. Monument makers addressed letters to the executors of the "late Magog Catt, Esq."

The joke continued in various forms for weeks, and "Magog Catt, Esq.," even received touching memorial paragraphs about his "services to the corporation" in the provincial newspapers. All these tributes were carefully collected and placed in a scrapbook, which is still in the Guildhall library. The funniest feature of all this confusion was a letter from a gentleman of antiquarian proclivities who wrote that he was compiling a work on curious nomenclature and inquiring if it was by accident or otherwise that an employee of the corporation had been christened "Magog." The English newspapers are now telling of the kind obituary notices Mr. Catty read of himself when he was supposed to be identical with the late lamented Magog Catt.—New York Sun.

The Queen's Conquest.

During the Russo-Turkish campaign of 1877 many Roumanian soldiers were wounded, and Queen Elizabeth—Carmen Silva—who constantly visited the hospitals, found that some of the patients died because they chose death rather than disfigurement. It occurred to her that if one yielded others would follow, and one day, when the surgeon was turning sorrowfully away from an obstinate patient who could be saved only by an operation, she approached and added her own entreaties.

Still the soldier reiterated that, if his leg were amputated, he should only be taken for a mendicant, like the wretched outcasts of the Carpathians.

"I am not a beggar," said he proudly. "I will lose my life, but not my honor."

"It is true," said the queen, "you are not a beggar, but I am," and she threw herself on her knees at the bedside. "I have never prayed but to God, but now I supplicate you to listen to his wish and mine. Let your leg be taken off and spare your life to your family, your country and me, and"——

"And if I consent, my lady, what then?"

"Why, then," she said joyfully, rising and seizing his hand again, "why, I will give you the most beautiful cork leg in Europe; it shall work with springs, and when the war is over you shall come and dance at the palace with your sons."

"I consent," he said softly, "but you must hold my hand during the operation."

After that there was no more opposition to the surgeon's wishes, since they were also those of the beloved lady of the land.—Youth's Companion.

Saved by His Horse.

The Indian papers give particulars of the murderous attack made upon Lieutenant Robertson, R. E., by a Ghazi at Gullstan. It appears that the former was out riding and was joined by the Ghazi, who was also on horseback. Both entered into friendly conversation, and shortly afterward put their horses to a trial of speed, in which Lieutenant Robertson outstripped his rival, when the Ghazi, being a short distance behind, suddenly drew his tulwar and inflicted a severe gash on Lieutenant Robertson's neck and otherwise wounded his hand, which he had raised to ward off the Ghazi's attack.

Lieutenant Robertson was brought into Quetta and taken to the station hospital, where he is at present being treated, and there is every hope of his recovery. The young Ghazi was arrested and brought into Quetta to be identified by Lieutenant Robertson, and it having been proved conclusively that he was the individual who attacked him, he was in consequence summarily tried, found guilty of an attempt to murder and sentenced to be hanged and his body afterward burned. The sentence was carried into effect on Tuesday morning.

It is stated that when Lieutenant Robertson fell off his horse and was lying on the ground bleeding profusely the faithful animal protected his master from further injury by kicking at the Ghazi and attempting to bite him. But for this remarkable behavior on the part of Lieutenant Robertson's horse, it is supposed that the Ghazi would have probably hacked Lieutenant Robertson to death.—St. James' Gazette.

Swallows in a Chimney.

A Norwich man who notes the arrival of the birds in the spring was surprised Tuesday evening to see with what facility thousands of swallows packed themselves away for the night. For the past ten days he has watched the swallows as they have circled in midair at nightfall over the center of the city. Tuesday night there appeared in one flock so many that they formed a cloud of birds, and after circling about awhile the leader started for the chimney on the northeast corner of the Broadway school house, and the whole flock followed, flying into the chimney till the last swallow disappeared. In relating the incident the gentleman said: "I was amazed to see them all go into a single chimney. They formed a large flock, and I do not believe there were less than 5,000 of them."—Norwich Bulletin.
