THE CAPITAL JOURNAL.

HOFER BROTHERS, - - - Editors.

PUBLISHED DAILY, EXCEPT SUNDAY BY THE Capital Journal Publishing Company.

(Incorporated.) Office, Commercial Street, in P. O. Building, Entered at the postoffice at Salem, Or., as second-class matter.

M. R. C. A.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to an article in yesterday's issue of THE JOURNAL published by the merchants of this city.

It will be of interest to give it a careful reading. There has been various so-called "collective agencies" represented in Salem in the past years some of whose methods were positively dishonorable. Good men were reported and published as "dead beats" and were given no chance to dispute the account if it was not an honest one but under the methods employed by the Merchants' Retail Commercial agency of which the organization referred to is a branch, no man is wrongfully reported because all the opportunity in the world is given him to make a settlement if the account is an honest one and if it is a dishonest one he can have that fact shown to the executive board and they will see that justice is done.

We have examined the credentials of this agency and read the testimonials of some of the best business men of the East and of California and believe it to be and do all it claims. The branch here is a strong one so we advise the Salem "dead beat" to wake up and saw wood.

PRUNE RAISING IN OREGON.

Some of the Advantages This State Has Over California.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—[TO THE EDITOR.]—The Chronicle of this city, in its holiday number in giving fruit data, makes the statement that all the fine prunes raised on this Coast are raised in California and what few prunes are raised in Washington and Oregon will not compete in any way with the California prunes.

Now, whoever wrote that article was not posted, or else did not care to give the general public the facts of the case. For, in San Francisco, all the large fancy grocers make a leader of the Oregon Italian prune, and in this city, in the midst of the California prune orchards, there are carloads upon carloads shipped from Portland and retailed to the best trade in the city. These prunes command the highest market price, and the demand for them is increasing rapidly each year; in fact, the leading grocer of this city informed me that he sold very few California prunes. He said his customers had found out how far superior the Oregon prune really was. They cannot raise the Italian prune down here.

The prune they raise in this country is the French prune, but I have seen much finer French prunes raised near Portland than I ever saw raised in California.

The reason Oregon has such an immense advantage over California to raise prunes, as well as a great many other fruits, is on account of your country.

California is willing to eat your nice prunes, but they are not willing to admit that you have a grand climate; in fact they do everything in their power to keep the homesteader from your country by crying "It's the last place in the world to go, on account of the climate;" but where they could find a better climate I am sure I don't know, for your summers are surely grand, and for the winter just past is a sample of your winters, there is no country in this broad land, even in California, to equal yours.

Now, if they must have your Italian prunes down here they surely must have them all over the great East, as the people in the East buy all of California's best fruit, and if better fruit is sent there it will find a ready market and an almost unlimited market, for down here they say it is no trick at all to sell fine fruit; it's only the poor and inferior grades of fruit that become a drug on the market.

Oregon prunes are not only finer than California prunes, but they are even finer than the very finest imported prunes, that retail at 30 cents a pound. Taking all this into consideration, the prune industry of your country is worthy of careful consideration, as undoubtedly that will become the greatest prune country in the world; but there is one thing people must not lose sight of, and that is that your country is also a most excellent country for a great many other kinds of fruit, and must consider well before planting a prune orchard that all soils are not suitable for this kind of an orchard but that might not be good soil for prunes might be suitable for other kinds of fruit; and great care must be taken about planting trees in soil that is too wet, for, if this is done, after the trees get two or three years old their roots will begin to rot and the ends of the branches to die. I have seen a number of such orchards in your country.

In California they are doing everything to attract the actual settler, and are doing wonders in making settlements and building up the country, and are getting in the very nicest class of people. If a little effort was made in the right direction these settlers would go to Oregon in preference to locating here, as they would have everything to gain by doing so. Your land is much richer, much cheaper; you have fine water and you have timber for firewood, which is a large item, and the orchard will mature much faster in your country than it does in California. There are many other advantages in favor of Oregon that will not take one long to see on arrival there.

I don't live in Oregon and I don't live in California, but I have made several trips through the two states looking up the fruit industry for some friends in the East who contemplate going into the raising of fruit. I have been very careful in looking into the matter, as I have been in the fruit business myself all my life, I do not think I have made any mistake when I say that the country around Portland has every advantage over this country and that it will not be long before an acre of land up there suitable for fruit raising will be worth more than an acre of land down here for the same purpose.

Your railroad facilities alone should make land worth twice as much as the same quality of land is worth here. This country has but one railroad and it makes rates to suit itself. Portland has a number of railroads, and one who raises fruit in that country will not have to give it all to the railroads in order to get it to the markets. I think the future of your country is very bright, and I shall surely advise my friends to locate there.

THE GUTTER-SNIPE.

It is the "gutter-snipe" whose case seems more hopeless,—the child of drunken or dissolute father or mother, tugged down the long stairs by brother or sister and from babyhood given the freedom of the gutter. Trucks and horses have no terrors for these babies. Bounds seems learned instinctively, and one sees them, by dozens, in the gutter itself, or wherever a bit of soft earth is found, digging and shaping the immemorial mud-pile or playing with an oyster-shell or a bit of paper or string extracted from the same source. If rain come, so much the better; for the cleansing stream brings with it its flotsam and jetsam, that are wealth to the baby whose hands stretch toward it. A rejected paper-box, a bit of gay cloth, are treasures hoarded till some stronger wulf snatches them. Might is right. There is no inch the gutter-snipe may call his own; and the baby eyes, that even there hold innocence and the faith of babyhood, learn quickly distrust and fear looking out from hard, experienced little faces in which childhood has died even in the three-year-old.—From "Child Life in the Slums of New York," in Demorest's Family Magazine for July.

Tin and sugar are two articles which show quite plainly the general effect on prices of a high tariff, and prove pretty conclusively that the tariff is a tax. The duty on sugar was removed, and the price decreased. The duty on tin was increased, and the price went up. Prior to the passage of the McKinley law, the ruling price of tin in San Francisco was from $4.75 to $5 per box. Now it is $6. San Francisco imports about 350,000 boxes, or 34,800,000 pounds, annually. Since last June nearly half a million dollars in duty on tin and terne plates has been paid at the San Francisco custom-house alone. This tax was ostensibly for the purpose of encouraging capitalists to engage in the tin-plate industry, but so far it has not had this result.—Portland Telegraph.

FROM CHICAGO.

Hawkers and Peddlers.

What ear-splitting cries we hear daily in the streets of every large city! But these itinerant dealers who hawk their wares about are, when under proper restrictions, a useful portion of the community, and not such nuisances as the catarrh hawkers. This is a stubborn disease to conquer, but Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy does it. It is mild, soothing and antiseptic, unlike snuffs that irritate, or solutions that burn. It corrects offensive breath, and restores taste, smell and hearing. Nasal catarrh often ends in consumption. Apply the only cure in time. Price 53 cents, by all druggists.

POLITICAL ITEMS.

The Rumors—Cleveland, Hill, Boise, Etc.

TAMMANY'S PROGRAM.

Rumor They Will Desert Hill After the First Ballot.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The Herald's Washington correspondent telegraphs the following: "The story is too absurd to be dignified by making a statement in reference to it," so said Senator Hill today, in regard to the story of a Tammany program in the Chicago convention. The story was set afloat by a member of congress, who received a letter from a Tammany man in New York alleging that the Tammany forces had practically concluded to drop Senator Hill after the first ballot and join the several Western delegations to secure the nomination of a Western candidate. The program as outlined in this letter includes Tammany's choice for the vice-presidency. Robert B. Roosevelt is a New York man, who has been determined as fit for the second place. He is wealthy, has a good standing among the business community and boasts of a long line of ancestry. His selection, it is hoped, will result in the unification of the democracy of New York state. A Western candidate upon whom the factions are to unite is not decided upon, though in connection with it Palmer, Boies, Gray, Morrison and Carlisle are discussed. Despite Senator Hill's emphatic denial, there is no doubt that a letter containing such information was received by a representative in congress, for I saw it. Mr. Roosevelt, when asked if he knew he was candidate for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination, would not deny positively, and acknowledged that Tammany had held lately a big conference. He did not know of the resolution to desert Hill.

CLEVELAND AND PALMER.

The Illinois Senator Says He Will Stick to Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—If Cleveland fails to receive the votes of Illinois, the fault cannot be laid at the door of Senator Palmer. Mr. Palmer was an original Cleveland man, but about the time of Hill's February convention in New York the race seemed to be becoming a free-for-all, and he allowed himself to be enticed. He has since drifted back to his first love, and now places his candidacy distinctly subsidiary to that of Cleveland. The fact seems to be that the two Illinois factions use Cleveland's name to club each other with. When Palmer was an avowed candidate the Morrison people were for Cleveland; now that Morrison is nursing a boom of his own, the Palmer men have rallied to Cleveland's defense. "The Illinois delegation," said Senator Palmer today, "will vote for Mr. Cleveland as long as there is any prospect of his nomination. After that their vote will go to me. I have every reason to believe that the members of the Illinois delegation are acting in a perfectly fair manner. The members are disposed to and positively intend to abide by the instructions given at the state convention. I take this view because of information that comes to me. No one has any right to suppose that they intend playing any tricks, or that they do not mean to do what they practically agreed to do. If it were true that nine delegates had no intention of voting for Mr. Cleveland, I think they would have refused to act as delegates, because the purpose implied and expressed in selecting the members of this delegation was to send a solid phalanx from our state to the convention for Mr. Cleveland."

FROM CHICAGO.

The Clevelandites Are Arriving and Hopeful.

CHICAGO, June 17.—John E. Hanson, advance guard of the Cleveland democracy at Buffalo, arrived at the Great Northern last night. "About 350 members of our organization will arrive in a body on Saturday," said he. "The outlook for Mr. Cleveland's nomination is most encouraging. The Democrats of New York do not propose to allow a lot of soreheads to dictate who shall be presented to the national convention as the choice of the party in the Empire state. Mr. Cleveland is the spontaneous choice of the Democratic party. The men who come
