"German Syrup"

Croup. We have selected two or three lines from letters freshly received from parents who have given German Syrup to their children in the emergencies of Croup. You will credit these, because they come from good, substantial people, happy in finding what so many families lack—a medicine containing no evil drug, which mother can administer with confidence to the little ones in their most critical hours, safe and sure that it will carry them through.

ED. L. WILLITS, of Alma, Neb. I give it to my children when troubled with Croup and never saw any preparation act like it. It is simply miraculous.

MRS. JAS. W. KIRK, Daughters' College, Harrodsburg, Ky. I have depended upon it in attacks of Croup with my little daughter, and find it an invaluable remedy.

Fully one-half of our customers are mothers who use Boschee's German Syrup among their children. A medicine to be successful with the little folks must be a treatment for the sudden and terrible foes of childhood, whooping cough, croup, diphtheria and the dangerous inflammations of delicate throats and lungs. ®

SELECTIONS

THE NEW UMBRELLA.

It Has a Gutter and Drain to Carry Off the Water.

"The chappies of New York used to roll up their trousers when the cable announced that it was raining in London, but they can soon discard their custom," said John M. Hughey, of New York. "I saw something on Broadway the other day that induced this belief. The rain was coming down in torrents, and the flood of humanity always surging on that street night and day had been driven into doorways and under awnings for protection. For a half hour not a pedestrian was seen on the street.

"My attention was attracted by yells and I looked out a big plate glass window to see what was causing the excitement. My curiosity was soon satisfied. In the middle of Broadway one of the slim necked and consumptive legged chappies was striding along under a curious looking umbrella, as if not a drop of rain was falling. I noticed that the umbrella had an unusually long handle, with a prodigious hook on the end that almost scraped the ground as the dude proudly cantered along. Through this hook a stream of water was gushing out and left a rivulet in the dude's wake.

"The chappie was so overwhelmed by the flattering remarks that were showered upon him by the rain frightened pedestrians, who had lost confidence in their umbrellas and had taken refuge in the stores, that he condescended to step into the room where I was standing. This gave me an opportunity to examine his funny looking umbrella. I found that it was so constructed as to curl up around the rim when opened, forming a complete gutter, like those around the eaves of houses. This gutter, of course, caught the rain as it ran down the mansard roof of the umbrella, and kept it from dripping down to the ground and splashing the chappie's ice cream trousers. By a slight tilt of the umbrella the water thus caught was thrown to a common center, which was the entrance to the sewer that runs down through the umbrella's handle and out to the ground.

"There, you see, is the riddance of the umbrella's defect as a protection from rain. The dude proudly told me that it was the latest thing in 'Lunnun;' that all the 'fellahs' over there were using them; that he had just come from 'Lunnun,' and had brought the umbrella over in the ship with him. He hadn't said anything to the chappies about it, because he wanted to knock 'em all out by being the first seen on Broadway with the newest English invention. He knew they would all go wild about it and he was glad of it. Well, when I get back to New York I don't expect to see any other kind of umbrella carried by the chappies."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Devil Fish with 2,560 Suckers.

Mr. Edwards, the taxidermist, has just received a large octopus, or devil fish, which was captured off Old Town by some fishermen. The creature weighed over sixty pounds and had arms three feet eight inches in length. On each of its eight tentacles or arms there were 320 suckers, making a grand total of 2,560. The octopus had attached itself to a fish hooked on a trawl and was drawn up with it. The same firm has also received a young albino deer, a buck, shot on Windby island. It has two-pronged horns and is supposed to be about two years old.

The natural color for a fawn is brown, with white spots, but the color of this one is white, with brown spots. A doe was shot on the island some time ago, so that it is thought there must be albino blood in the deer on the island. The doe was secured by Mr. Edwards some time ago, and now the pair are to be exhibited in some of the shop windows down town. The deerskins are comparatively easy to preserve, but no better means of preserving the devil fish has been found as yet than keeping them in alcohol. This is on account of their having no bones, and because of their shrinking and shriveling, as most forms of deep water marine life do.—Tacoma Ledger.

The Bills Still on Top.

The gatemen at the elevated railroad stations watch the receptacles for Grant monument fund donations with much interest. The glass jars on some of the down town stations have filled rapidly during the last week. The gatemen at the Park place up town station noted one curious fact. When there was but a single layer of coins on the bottom of the jar two one dollar bills, loosely folded, were dropped through the slot. The jar is now nearly one-third full of coin, and those two bills are still on top. As the nickels, dimes and quarters have fallen into the jar they have worked their way under the loosely folded paper money instead of packing it down and covering it up, as the watchful gatemen think ought to have been the case.

SO MUCH FOR HIS LOOKS.

Resemblance to Daniel Webster Caused a Man to Pay a Bill.

He wouldn't pay his bills and he imagined he resembled the lamented Daniel Webster. The former was a fault, the latter an eccentricity and a decidedly weak point with the man of whom I write.

On his office wall hung a large picture of Daniel Webster, and while the lawyer drew legal documents it was his wont to frequently look at the picture, as if for inspiration, draw a sigh of contentment as he saw the resemblance and continue with the writing of "the party of the first part" in an action against "the party of the second part."

It was the picture of Daniel Webster that led the lawyer finally to settle an old bill, and unconsciously at that. The creditors were a half dozen colored people who had at various times cleaned the lawyer's office and tried to arrange his legal papers in a condition bordering on "orderly."

But when they demanded their money the lawyer had the faculty of putting off the payment that was exceedingly discouraging to the creditors. In fact the payment was delayed so long that the claims were finally consolidated and placed in the hands of a collector. The collector was told of the lawyer's weakness and his delight at being told of his resemblance to the picture of Webster suspended on his office wall. On this fact the collector based his hopes of success.

He went to the lawyer's office, and while waiting for an audience with the man of legal lore stood gazing at the picture of Webster and then at the lawyer. The latter watched the collector meanwhile from beneath his heavy eyebrows.

"Well, what do you think of it?" queried the lawyer of the collector, glancing at the picture.

"Splendid, splendid," replied the man with the bill. "You couldn't have a better picture. The artist caught your expression perfectly." and the collector fingered the bill in his pocket.

"Think it looks like me, eh?"

"Looks like you—well, it's simply perfect."

"Well, sir, that's a picture of Daniel Webster," and the lawyer he-he-ed with intense satisfaction and pleasure and asked what he could do for the visitor. The collector said he wanted to collect $20.70, and the lawyer sat down and drew his check. Rising from his seat and handing the check to the collector the lawyer rubbed his hands together and said, "And so you think Webster looked like me?"

"Oh, yes," replied the collector, as he opened the office door, "about as much as he did like me," and the door went to with a bang.—New York Herald.

Baby Language.

The first time that I had the pleasure of a call from his mother he accompanied her, and said sweetly at my expressed regret at having to tell him goodby when his visit was ended:

"No-no nee! Tee-tee Weewie no no go out of houzie if you nee." Which his mother informed me was, being interpreted:

"Do not cry! Little Willie will not go out of the house if you cry."

By the time I had known him several months I learned that "nee" was to "cry," and "tee-tee" was "little." When he said "The tee-tee bow-wow nees" it was not strange that the average listener was mystified as to his meaning.

There is no kindness in allowing a child to use this sort of language. It is quite as easy for him to learn the proper words in the beginning, and once acquired they will serve him forever. Otherwise as he outgrows infancy he will have the mortification of being laughed at, and the added mental strain of learning what is equivalent to a new tongue. —Babyhood.

The Dogs of the Red Men.

When Columbus discovered America he found that the Indians possessed dogs. They were direct descendants of the wild coyotes of the plains. You can find a beautifully mounted group of coyotes in a glass case at the National museum — a male, female and young one. Their resemblance to certain domesticated dogs is very striking.—Washington Star.

Why Young Men Are Afraid.

In New York city, where the standard of salaries is as high perhaps as in any American city, it was recently shown that of the young men in good commercial positions 70 per cent. earned $1,000 per year and only 8 per cent. exceeded $3,500 per year. Upon these incomes all the home comforts of married life are possible, but only by good management. Girls with frivolous ideas of life make failures of such homes, but the earnest girl can make happy herself, her husband and her children. Into these homes our girls are daily going as wives, and it is apparent that young men must be careful in their choice.

The young men whom our young women meet in the nicest homes of our largest cities are those who are earning the incomes referred to above. Large revenues are few, and if by a "desirable" marriage is only meant the alliance to young men of dazzling salaries, just about one girl in every thousand will make a "desirable" match. Facts such as these must be taken into consideration by the girl of today, and when they are, it will be more clearly understood why young men are apt to be frightened from rather than attracted to the girl whose chief idea of popularity is to be "smart" in her chat and "careless" in her manner.—Edward W. Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Farmer and the Lawyer.

This story is told of Charles Dickens and Mr. Frederick Ouvry, the well known solicitor. On one occasion, Dickens was in treaty for a piece of land at the back of Gad's Hill, the proposed vendor being an old farmer, a keen old man of business and a hard nut to crack. An interview was arranged with him at Gad's Hill for a certain evening, and Mr. Ouvry came down for the purpose of being present when the bargain was struck. Dickens and Ouvry were sitting over their wine when the old man was announced. "We had better go in," said Dickens. "No, no," said the astute lawyer—"John" (to the butler), "show him into the study and take him a bottle of old port wine."

Then, turning to Dickens, "A glass of port will do him no harm; it will soften him." After waiting about twenty minutes they went into the study. The farmer was sitting bolt upright in an armchair, stern and uncompromising; the bottle of port had not been touched. The negotiations then proceeded very much in favor of the farmer and the bargain was struck. With a chuckle the old man then turned his attention to the port and finished the bottle.—San Francisco Argonaut.

He Broke Up the Game.

In public, as well as in private, one should ever be mindful of the rights of others. Not long since a clergyman, accompanied by two young ladies, was traveling. It was nearing the hour of midnight, yet they had not ordered their sleeping berths made up. Instead, they were indulging in a game of words—trying to see who could think of the most words that begin with this or that letter.

They spent half an hour or more on "A," and then went to "B" with a freshness that seemed to indicate that they intended, despite the lateness of the hour, to go to the end of the alphabet. At any rate, that was the impression they gave to the tired man in the berth opposite, who was trying in vain to sleep.

Presently there came a lull, when none of the three seemed able to think of another B. The tired man took advantage of the lull. Parting his curtain the least bit of a space, he shouted:

"And 'bores,' sir—'bores!'"—Harper's Young People.

Making Phosphorus by Electricity.

The application of electricity to the manufacture of phosphorus is expected to revolutionize the industry. The phosphorus is extracted from the usual materials by being intensely heated with carbon in an electric furnace. It is thus vaporized and is afterward collected in copper condensers. The latest pattern of furnace produces daily about 150 pounds of very poor phosphorus, with a loss of about 14 per cent. of total quantity of the raw material.

The effect of this new development will be that a single building which has been erected for the purpose in England will soon be turning out half as much as the world's present consumption.—New York Telegram.

MEN! WHY ARE YOU WEAK?

For such sufferers we have a relief and cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In your ignorance of effects or by excesses, or exposure, you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause, and health, strength and vigor will follow at once and in a natural way. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or money refunded. Send for our Illustrated Pamphlets, free; sent by mail, sealed. Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment, as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this State, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or at rest, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or we forfeit $5,000.
