WENT MAD IN HIS CAB.

A Wild Ride that Terrified a Trainload of Western Passengers. Probably one of the most exciting incidents ever known in railroad history was told a reporter by Mr. Julius Smith, who has returned from a trip to the northwest. He was in Tacoma, Wash., for some time on a visit, and on his return started back on the Oregon Short line. The road leads along the base of the mountains, and the passengers were enjoying a fine view for some distance, and everything appeared to be going on nicely until suddenly it was noticed that the train was gradually increasing in speed until it fairly flew along the rails.

Faster and faster flew the train until it bounded from side to side at a fearful rate and the frightened passengers were thrown about the cars like so many puppets. Trees and poles flashed and the train was going at a clip equal to 100 miles an hour, while it seemed only a miracle which kept it on the track. Around curves it would spin, almost standing the poor victims on their heads, while they were every minute expecting to be dashed to pieces.

The conductor soon discovered that the engineer had gone mad. He stopped for nothing, but flashed past the stations at lightning speed, and for a stretch of forty-five miles the train went so fast that it was impossible for the passengers to hold their seats. The fireman could not be seen in the cab and it was determined to make an effort to get to the madman before he sent the whole train-load of people to eternity. The conductor and brakeman crawled carefully along the tender and worked their way into the engine behind the engineer, who stood with his head bare and his long hair floating back as he gazed ahead, muttering to himself.

With a blow the madman was laid on the floor and the conductor shut off steam and gradually brought the train to a standstill. The madman was secured and a dispatch sent back over the road asking for information regarding the fireman. It was discovered that at the last stopping place the engineer had shoved the fireman from the engine just as the train started, and then put on full steam. The engineer was always sober and had never shown any signs of insanity before. —Kansas City Journal.

Two Hard Names. We may point out the desperate attempts of our countrymen to get at the proper utterance of Goethe's name. Probably the patronymic of no great man has been so widely and so variously mis-called. Among the varieties are Goatly, Gweethy, Gooter and even Gutter, which mode our less ambitious effort was lately corrected by a superior bookseller.

The editor of a popular journal lately gave it out, with perhaps a too liberal concession to the inflexibility of the English tongue, as "Gerty." The name of Marie Bashkirtseff is another verbal rock on which many a British tongue comes to grief. Have you Marie Bashkirtseff? —Bashkirtseff (almost everything chron. record or hereditary files, and many other diseases and female weaknesses, it is always a great benefit to the general health. A Logical Argument. A man was urged to take a newspaper. "What is the use of taking it? I never open it, so I don't know what's in it. What good would it do me?" "You take liver pills occasionally, don't you?" "Certainly!" "Do they do you any good?" "Of course they do." "Did you ever open them and find what was in them?" That made him shell out the subscription price. —Texas Siftings.

Five Hundred Shocks a Year. The empire of Japan has no fewer than 700 earthquake observing stations scattered over it, and the records of the 500 shocks that annually visit that country are accurately noted. —New York Journal.

Caged Snakes and Their Food. Many persons suppose that the creatures introduced alive into the dens of huge monsters suffer tortures of terror and fear. We have often observed the process, and confidently affirm the supposition to be entirely groundless. The rabbits and ducks, which we saw put in with serpents, showed no signs of fear whatever, sometimes even giving the plainest demonstrations that they were governed by quite other emotions. On one occasion we recollect noticing a rabbit running about beside and over the coils of a huge python. When exactly opposite the head the serpent moved it slightly and projected its tongue several times. The rabbit took no notice of this, and a little afterward began to try and nibble the skin of the python's body. —Quarterly Review.
