Blocking an Artistic Triumph.

The audience had cheered itself weary at the entrance of the heavy tragedian, and now he stood in the center of the stage loaded down with chains and glaring about upon the assembled generals and soldiers, who seemed to cover before his fierce and contemptuous glance.

A Roman consul, robed in purple, advanced toward the mighty prisoner, who raised his manacled hands as if to break the chain over the head of his lordly enemy.

The consul shrunk back. Again the burning glance of the handcapped hero swept over the multitude, and those who had come to mock at him grew pale. The silence was intense. The great chest heaved. All eyes were bent upon the giant figure.

"How many leagues am I from Thraee?" he inquired in an authoritative tone.

Silence fell again, but only for a moment. "Some come eleven," rang the answering shout.

The tragedian's glare came back to the captives showing it to be absolutely genuine. There was a titter from all over the house.

The door of the third gallery smoking room, where the ushers were shooting craps, had blown open at an inopportune moment.—Detroit Tribune.

A Story in Every Face.

I love old faces; they are always true. The old man's face is his autobiography; it is his life in miniature.

A face is the scenery of the soul, the camera of our thoughts; although we have not really seen a face until our hearts have followed the whole repertory of its expressions, yet each man's habitual face, as a fair general expression of himself, is as if a composite had been taken and the soul had had a thousand sittings, each negative differing in its way, but all combined resulting in this one. Why should a man be ashamed of his wrinkles? It is being ashamed not of what he seems, but of what he is.

Wrinkles in a man's face are a kind of orthography, nature's handwriting, the shorthand of features, in which the main ideas of a man's life are set down without his knowing it, and in spite of himself, and in the very midst of his denials. It is a language without a grammar, and only the vaguest sort of a lexicon, but every man can read it. It is German to the German and Indian to the Indian, the universal language of the globe, the instinctive Volapuk of mankind!—G. S. Lee in Ladies' Home Journal.

Time and Money.

The native was at the ticket window of a railroad down south, and the smart clerk was champing his bit inside because the native was so exasperatingly deliberate.

"How far is it to Wahoo?" he drawled.

"Forty-eight miles," snapped the clerk.

"What's the price of a ticket?" "One fifty."

The native began to go through his pocketbook slowly.

"Come, come, hurry up," urged the clerk; "time's money on this road."

"Is it?" drawled the native, laying down the price very carefully.

"Yes, it is," "Well," he said, hauling out the ticket, "if it doesn't make any better money than it does time I reckon some of you is going to get arrested for counterfeiting one of these days."

and he moved away, dragging his heels on the floor at every step.—Detroit Free Press.

Why M. Dumas Sold Out.

M. Alexandre Dumas sold his gallery because he was tired of seeing pictures cover every wall in his house. There was not a spot anywhere but in the kitchen, where they were not hung, and they were piled up in the garret.

"The thought of keeping a few things, but was told if he did the others would not sell well. People would say that he only sent to the hammer things by forgery."—London News.

Sea-weeds Are Useful.

Of all tribes of plants seaweeds are commonly reputed to be the least useful. Yet this belief does them great injustice. They supply, directly and indirectly, the food upon which most fishes and other animals of the ocean depend, the smaller creatures feeding upon the plants themselves, to be gobbled up subsequently by the larger ones.—Interview in Washington Star.

THE TRAIL ON THE MESA.

Over the mesa, bare and brown, Under the blazing southern sun, A worn, old trail leads forth from the town To the dwelling of those whose toll is done.

A little cluster of graves, forlorn, Forgotten, lonely, unkept and still, While around the cactus and through the thorn

The narrow trail creeps over the hill. Somebody's lover, somebody's friend Under each wooden headboard lies Somebody's dream played to the end, To praying mortals or weeping skies.

Sin and sorrow and love, now past, Strength to conquer, and faith to last, These they have known, and then, at last, The slow, sad journey over the trail.

The sun is riding home to his rest, The gates of the great corral swing wide, The trail leads on to the heart of the west, Over the crest of the great divide.

—Florence E. Pratt in Harper's Weekly.

The Rattlesnake and His Tail.

The habit of rapidly shaking the end of the tail is by no means peculiar to rattlesnakes, but is one common to many serpents of very different kinds—innocent no less than venomous. It is probably a mode of attaining satisfaction by following the line of least resistance.

Any mental excitement tends to produce some kind of bodily movement. Parts which are most easily moved naturally lend themselves the most readily to such modes of expressing externally vivid internal feelings, and in most animals few parts are more easily moved than the tail.

We see how readily a dog's tail wags under pleasurable excitement, and a cat's under that of watching a possible prey. It is very easy to understand then how under the stimulus of alarm, anger or any other strong emotion a certain feeling of relief or satisfaction is produced in snakes, and especially in the rattlesnake, by movements of this kind.—Quarterly Review.

Hideous Hairdressing.

The most elaborate and atrociously hideous hairdressing the world has known was in vogue at the close of the eighteenth century. Stewart, the great hairdresser, says: "At no period in the history of the world was anything more absurd in head-dress worn than at this time. The body of these monuments of ugliness was formed of tow, over which the hair was turned and false hair added, in great curls, bobs and ties, and powdered to profusion, then hung all over with vulgarly large rows of pearl or glass beads, fit only to decorate a chandelier. Flowers as obtrusive were stuck about this heap of finery, which was surmounted by broad silken bands and great ostrich feathers, until the head-dress of a lady added three feet to her stature."—Washington Star.

Judging the Young.

The time has gone by when wise people judge the young in the masses, and when the quantity of workers is of more consequence than the quality. These are the times when only the individuals who are specially adapted by their ability for the calling which they have chosen are likely to make a mark. It is not enough that a lad be educated to a profession, but he must have natural adaptation to his career, or he will be a failure, and it is far better for a lad that he be a successful mechanic in the humblest walk of life than a lawyer without a case or a physician without a practice.—New York Tribune.

Had to Give It Up.

Hugh Farrell, who is not a very large man, attempted to drink twenty quarts of milk on a wager in Middletown, N. Y. He had ten hours to do it in, but after drinking eighteen quarts he thought he had made a custard of himself and gave it up. He was able to go to work the next morning, although he tried to find a whey out of doing so.—New York Sun.

Queen Elizabeth's Handwriting.

Queen Elizabeth, thanks to the pains of her assiduous tutor, Roger Ascham, wrote an upright hand, and had acquired "all the elegancies of the pen," according to the notions of polite society in the sixteenth century.—New York World.

The Poor Worm Turns.

"And you will not marry me, Miss Hicks?" "Never, Mr. Small. I do not love you."

"Very well, I am content. Is—er—your younger sister at home, Miss Hicks?"—Harper's Bazar.

Before Starting on a Journey

A person usually desires to gain some information as to the most desirable route to take, and will purchase tickets via the route that will afford him the quickest and best service. Before starting on a trip to Chicago or any point East, you should provide yourself with a map and time table of the Wisconsin Central Line. The trains run on this route are vestibule and are equipped with Pullman's latest Drawing Room Sleepers, elegant Day Coaches and Dining Cars with all the latest improvements for the service, and are exquisite in furnishings and convenient and comfortable in arrangement and so complete in every detail that they have no superior in comfort and elegance. The dining car service is pronounced by all the most eminent travel writers, and is operated in the interest of its patrons.

Fast trains via the Wisconsin Central Line leave Minneapolis daily at 12:45 p. m. and 8:20 p. m., and St. Paul at 10:45 a. m. and 7:15 p. m., making favorable connections with all trains from the West and Southwest.

For tickets, maps, pamphlets and full information apply to G. F. Eckman, C. P. and T. A., Minneapolis, Minn., and to J. C. Pond, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. W. M. Terry, who has been in the drug business at Elkton, Ky., for the past twelve years, says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives better satisfaction than any other cough medicine I have ever sold." There is good reason for this. No other will cure a cold so quickly; no other is so certain a preventative and cure for croup; no other affords so much relief in cases of whooping cough. For sale by Geo. E. Good Druggist.

Dissolution.

The firm of Sprague & Allen is dissolved, G. D. Sprague having purchased the entire business. All bills will be payable to him. G. D. SPRAGUE, F. T. ALLEN.

TO THE LADIES.—"Viavi!" stands alone, the greatest medical discovery of the nineteenth century. (From an M. D. in the Ladies' Health Journal, Newark, Ohio.) You are cordially invited to call and investigate for yourselves. Office over 4 and 8 cent store, Cottage-Parkhurst block, Commercial street, Salem, Oregon.

A New Kind of Insurance.

For twenty-five cents you can insure yourself and family against any bad results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer. One or two doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy will cure any ordinary case. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. No family can afford to be without it. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by Geo. E. Good, druggist.

Disypella in its worst forms will yield to the use of Carter's Little Liver Pills, aided by Carter's Little Liver Pills. They not only relieve present distress but strengthen the stomach and digestive apparatus.

There are many forms of nervous debility in men that yield to the use of Carter's Iron Pills. Those who are troubled with nervous weakness, night sweats, etc., should try them.

Backache is almost immediately relieved by wearing one of Carter's Smart Wood and Belladonna Backache Plasters. Try one and be free from pain. Price 25 cents.

LET ME SHOW YOU what a saving I have made during the last year by being my own doctor. Last year I paid out $36.25 for doctors and their medicine; this year I paid out $5 for six bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and they have kept health in my whole family. They are the purest and best medicine ever made.—Charles King, 60 Temple street, Boston, Mass.

MANY NEW IDEAS in the home care of diseases, accidents, and how to treat them, and many hints of value to the sick will be found in Dr. Kaufmann's great medical work; elegant illustrations. Send three-cent stamps to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass., and receive a copy free.

Read E. T. Barnes' full add, it gives valuable information, it will save you money by reading it if you will call on them. 21-d-1w.
