The high compliments they have received from the state executive body and the attention they have attracted in the community generally. to say nothing of the admiration ercited, must be very gratifying to the fair soldiers. They have all been properly disciplined, and when occasion demands will be ready to serve their country in time of need. There are numerous football teams and baseball nines managed and equipped by the women students in different parts of the country, and their inter collegiate matches show that they are progressing rapidly in their race for muscle.

If a girl has not all the latest im provements at hand for her athlet. sports she makes the most of what she has, particularly if she is a Vasar girl, and has a good time at any rate. Who but a Vassar girl would ever have thought of using a barrestave for a conster? This idea origi nated ten. or twelve years ago, and the practice has been kept up reliciously ever since. Now of course this device is preferred to the con ventional sled, and when the snow has a hard, slippery crust the fait coaster skims down one of those long Poughkeepsie hills so fast that it fairly takes her breath away. To bogganing cannot compare with this improvised coasting as far as fun goes. Let any one who does not be lieve there is any fun in it just try it once.

One class in a prominent New England college, the name of which I have promised not to divulge, had quite as much fun in coasting as their Vassar sisters, although they used an entirely different device. In place of the barrel staves, which are not always so easy to obtain after all, the New England collegians used the homely dustpans. The sly creatures only coasted during the evenings, after gymnasium hours, when they would slip into their rooms, conceal the dustpans under their ulsters. slip out again to their favorite place of resort and slide away to their heart's content. Sometimes all the dustpans would be tied together and a line of girls would start from the top of the hill and go whizzing down together. It wasn't so easy at first to slide all the way down without losing control over the dustpan, but

The Smallest Republic.

San Marino, the little republic inclosed with the boundaries of Italy, bears the encyclopedic honor of being the smallest self governed state in the world; this, however, is a mistake. Goust, a little hamlet in the Pyrenees, is even more of an ideal republic than our great United States. It belongs to neither France nor to Spain, and has not to exceed twenty-five citizens, all told. They have no taxes or other public rates to pay; no mayor, watchman or other official; each male inhabitant of the age of eighteen years having equal say in administering affairs of state. Among them there is neither rich or poor, master or servant, noble or churi. Truly Goust is the model republic.-Philadelphia Press.
