These two had never seen a circus though they were familiar with them from hearsay and dime novels, and the idea that a real live one was coming to their town set them wild. They at once laid plans to procure the price of admission, fifty cents each, a small fortune to them. Their father was dead and their mother could not afford, they well knew, to spend a dollar on them. They at once organized an amateur circus among their companions, and after a good deal of rehearsal on a parallel bar and a trapeze gave a public performance, charging one cent for admission. This netted only fifteen cents, and Jerry got a sprained ankle, while Tom burst his only pair of trousers where it did the most harm.

By that time the advance agent dier. Nearly all of these schemes arrived and proceeded to cover the town with posters that took the lished in newspapers and of circutown with posters that took the boys' breath away. For carrying an immense pail of paste all day they got ten cents each from the agent, not be reached, and for this reason and they had considerable difficulty in ungluing their clothes that night sufficiently to get them off. But the posters were an unalloyed delight, and Tom and Jerry played hookey to the postoffice department these in order to stare at them till the frauds are carried on without any teacher came himself from the school and dragged them away. Is the verdict of every woman who has used Royal Baking Powder. Other baking powders soon deteriorate and lose their strength, owing to the use of inferior ingredients, out Royal Baking Powder is so carefully and accurately compounded from the purest materials that it retains its strength for any length of time, and the last spoonful in the can is as good as the first, which is not true of any other baking powder.
