THE BLACK BOX.

It was in the depth of a dark and dreary winter. But it was in the middle of a warm and beautiful summer when the deed was done.

As yet I am not alluding to anything mysterious at all, but at the same time I am very anxious to explain how it was that I, a humble and not altogether solitary Englishman, found myself located in the Hotel Drei Liebchen at Annanasberg.

I was traveling alone one summer time, full of health and uncommonly full of spirits, and I rashly got out of the Rhine steamer at Annanasberg in order to pay a flying visit to a miniature Paris, hedged 'round with avenues and consecrated to the military, and deliver some letters of introduction to an enthusiastic English engineer, who was doing his best to make the stolid Germans energetic, and make a fortune during the unenviable process.

Strange to say, he took to me. There was no beating about the bush. We were friends at once, and a few hours after my credentials were read and thrown aside, I found myself walking with my arm in his toward that cozy and hospitable mansion in which he lived, and where he had introduced that delightful home feeling, and those pleasant family associations, so dear to the English—so strange to the foreign mind.

Here was a miniature English home planted in a strange land, and I can tell you it was by no means objectionable to enjoy my cut of joint under his mahogany in the company of men worth talking to and women decidedly worth admiring.

I am now gradually nearing the point. Before the next sun sank my portmanteau was moved from the hotel to my friend's house, and the first night I slept under his hospitable roof I was dreaming, strange to say, of his daughter.

There was no help for it. It was the very place of all others to make love in. It was the very weather of all weather for the operation.

A house surrounded by a wilderness of varied trees overarching one another, and making love in their quaint and fanciful fashion; a lake at the end of the garden full of desolate weeds, and owning a crazy old boat; a soft croquet lawn for the more worldly, and bright flowers for the lovers of nature; a sun which perpetually gleamed upon the warm, white house, and laughter forever ringing out of it—surely such a place as this was the one of all others to make love in.

They called her Annabel, and I called her so first on the brightest of all the moonlight nights, when half a dozen of us had been frightening the girls in the shrubbery, and we found ourselves alone—I deny that it was accident—by the gloomy lake.

There we were. The one word Annabel came trembling from my lips, and the one look which her answering eyes gave me persuaded me that I had not made a mistake.

We were engaged, and a few days after I left for England with all the parental difficulties got over—the husband that was to be of as true and sensible and as pure a woman as ever fell to a young fellow's lot.

This was in the summer time, and at midwinter I found myself, of course, at the Drei Liebchen at Annanasberg.

It was a bitterly cold winter, but I heeded it not. The thoughts of seeing her again almost warmed me. My excitement to get away from London was tremendous. I was bound for Germany and my love. My holiday was short, but under the circumstances where in the whole world could it be better spent?

And what with sleeping and smoking and dreaming and thinking and fidgeting and longing, I arrived after midnight at the Drei Liebchen.

It was too late to present myself at the white house. Besides, I was not presentable. I was dirty, unshaven and woebegone from constant traveling. A quiet night at the hotel I thought the best plan, that I might present myself spick and span the next morning.

Such precautions as these should never be forgotten. The female mind is generous but susceptible, and this susceptibility not unfrequently conquers generosity. I determined to be on the right side of the hedge, and made up my mind for a refreshing sleep at the Drei Liebchen.

But I reckoned without my host.

It was after midnight when I drove up to the hotel from the station, and though, as luck would have it, mine host had not retired for the night, I found anything but pleasant news awaiting me. I was absolutely thunderstruck. There was no room in the hotel.

"What! at this time of the year?" I asked, with something like irritation.

A stupid and very positive "ja" answered me incontestably.

"But have you no corner in which you can squeeze me for the night?" I asked.

The landlord consulted his slate. He also consulted a very sleepy and obstinate servant—the kind of man who seemed determined not to smile or be genial, and appeared to take a quiet and fiendish delight in my misery.

"Yes; there was one room."

There was one room; but should I object. There was not somebody, but something in it.

"What is that?" I asked curiously.

"A black box."

I looked astonished.

"Oh, there is nothing to be alarmed at," said my host, wondering at the curious expression of countenance I had assumed.

"The fact of the matter is this: An officer, who is to be attached to the cavalry regiment quartered in the town, telegraphed to me only this morning for a particular room which he always uses. He said that he would send on his luggage beforehand, and arrive by the last train tonight. The luggage, consisting of this one black box, arrived, not beforehand, but on the last train, and as the officer has not up to this moment made his appearance, and as I cannot imagine that he is remaining so late with any friends in the town, there will surely be no harm in your occupying his room."

Accordingly I went very gratefully up to bed, and too tired even to take the precaution of locking my door. I surveyed the black box for a few minutes, wondered how officers could use such ridiculous and unsightly coffers for conveying their impedimenta and very shortly after turned into bed.

I was dead tired, but, strange to say, I was restless and could not sleep; indeed I was, if anything, overtired.

I was excited with my rapid journey, excited with the thought of seeing Annabel, worried with the prolixity of the landlord and curious about the black box.

I was gradually becoming excited about this box. I fancied all sorts of horrors. My mind wandered from Greenacre, the murderer, to the horrible Pantin tragedy; from Portia to Bluebeard; from the dramatic narrative of the "Mistl toe Bough" to the thrilling tragedy of the "Iron Chest," which I had seen during Mr. Charles Kean's management at the Princess theater.

And then I suppose from sheer fatigue I must have dozed.

A sudden and sharp click awoke me!

I sat bolt up in bed and listened.

Not a sound.

The box again fascinated me; so, shrinking down beneath the sheets again, I watched it.

Slowly—very slowly—inch by inch, I saw the lid of the box move.

There was no use denying it—I was in a terrible fright. I don't mind the natural, but I have a holy horror of the supernatural. I was in a fevered, nervous and unfortunate state, and in that horrible condition between sleeping and waking I hardly knew what I was about.

Still the lid of the box rose gradually. There was no doubt about it.

Then a head appeared and it looked stealthily around the room.

I instantly pretended to fall asleep, and gave a very good imitation of a snore.

The head lengthened into a body. The lid of the box flew back, and a short, thickset man stepped out of his hiding place.

It was no ghost.

He paid no attention to my jewelry, but made at once for the door.

He walked as noiselessly as a cat, and slipped quietly out of the room.

There was no time to be lost. I hurried on a few articles of clothing, provided myself with a stout walking stick, the only thing I had handy, thrust my money and jewels into my pockets and started off on the pursuit.

I was wide awake by this time, and was now terribly eager to arrest my midnight visitor.

I was determined not to arouse the house until it was absolutely necessary.

The clock struck three as I darted into the passage to surprise him.

Down stairs I went in less than no time.

But I was too late. Those minutes occupied in collecting my valuables and slipping on my things were all wasted time.

There was no trace of him. It was terribly dark in the passages, and I was rather nervous of a sudden encounter in the dark.

Besides he might have firearms, while I was comparatively unarmed. The notion of coming flop up against him in the pitch darkness extinguished some portion of my enthusiasm.

Besides, while I was reflecting what to do and where to go, I found that I had lost myself entirely. I knew nothing about the ins and outs of the rambling old hotel, and I had not taken my bearings and quite forgot the number of my room.

I wandered about the passages for quite half an hour, and at last, after a fruitless search for the mysterious man in the box, I happily discovered a half open door and found out my room by my boots.

Now came the question what to do? There was no trace of the man in the room. The door of the room was open as I left it, but the black box was shut.

What should I do? Should I alarm the house and get called a fool for my pains, supposing the box was discovered empty? Should I lift the lid and risk everything in a final tussle? Should I lock the door from the outside or lock the door from the inside and go to bed again?

I went deliberately up to the box and struck it violently with my stick. It was not quite closed after all, and I heard to my surprise a howl of pain from the inside.

As luck would have it, I had got my man after all. My mind was instantly made up. I darted suddenly back, gave the box another violent crack with my stick, rushed out of the room and locked the door.

And then I shouted with might and main. A pell pull was handy and I pealed at it. Up came half a dozen waiters, and, lastly, up came the pursy landlord of the Drei Liebchen.

Having collected my forces, I opened the door. We were only just in time, for the window was wide open, and with one bound across the room I just managed to secure his last retreating leg.

I dragged the culprit back into the middle of the room and made him show his guilty face.

"Max!" cried the landlord and the waiters with one voice.

They knew the object of his visit when they looked into the black box, for there were secreted every atom of silver—knives, forks, spoons and dishes—which the household possessed.

The mystery was soon explained. The midnight visitor was a discharged waiter, and he had hit upon the happy expedient of the black box and the false telegram in order to conveniently rob the house.

The thief was immediately handed over to the police. The detestable box was dragged out of my room into the passage. I locked myself into the room and slept without a break until every bell in Annasberg woke me out of my slumbers and reminded me it was morning.

As for my dear Annabel, she made far more of a hero of me—as all good women do—than I really deserved, and after dinner that night, over the walnuts and the wine, with a dear little hand resting cozily in mine—under the table—I told the assembled guests, with as much picturesque force and dramatic intensity as I could muster, the true and authentic legend of "A Night at the Drei Liebschen; or, the Landlord, the Lackey and the Black Box."—Clement V. Scott in Boston Globe.

The Indian, it is said, measures distance in canoeing by "pipes." One pipe is the interval between the haltings he is allowed to make for a smoke. Evidently a "pipe" must vary a good deal with the good nature of the employer.—Kate Field's Washington.

MEN! WHY ARE YOU WEAK?

DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELT AND SUSPENSORY FOR WEAK MEN

WHO ARE DEBILITATED, AND SUFFERING FROM NERVOUS DEBILITY, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, LOSSES, DRAINS, IMPOTENCY OR LOST MANHOOD, RHEUMATISM, LAME BACK, KIDNEY TROUBLES, NERVOUSNESS, SLEEPLESSNESS, POOR MEMORY & GENERAL ILL HEALTH the effects of abuses, excesses, worry and exposure. For such sufferers we have a relief and cure in our marvelous invention, which requires but a trial to convince the most skeptical. In your ignorance of effects or by excesses, or exposure, you may have unduly drained your system of nerve force and vitality—which is electricity—and thus caused your weakness or lack of force. If you replace into your system the elements thus drained, which are required for vigorous strength, you will remove the cause, and health, strength and vigor will follow at once and in a natural way. This is our plan and treatment, and we guarantee a cure or money refunded. Send for our Illustrated Pamphlets, free; sent by mail, sealed.

Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is no experiment, as we have restored thousands to robust health and vigor, after all other treatments failed, as can be shown by hundreds of cases throughout this State, who would gladly testify, and from many of whom we have strong letters bearing testimony to their recovery after using our Belt.

THE DR. SANDEN ELECTRIC BELT

is a complete galvanic battery, made into a belt so as to be easily worn during work or at rest, and it gives soothing, prolonged currents which are instantly felt throughout all weak parts, or we forfeit $5,000. It has an Improved Electric Suspensory, the greatest boon ever given weak men, and we warrant it to cure any of the above weaknesses, and to enlarge shrunken limbs, or parts, or Money Refunded. They are graded in strength to meet all stages of weakness in young, middle-aged or old men, and will cure the worst cases in two or three months. Address

Sealed Bids for a Bridge.

BY ORDER of the County Court of Marion county, Oregon, sealed plans, strain diagrams, and bids for a wagon bridge across the North Santiam river, at Mill City, Marion county, Oregon, will be received by the clerk of said court until Friday, September, 9, 1892, at 9 a. m., of said day. Said bridge to be sixteen feet in the clear, covered and painted, and to be located at one of two proposed sites, one of which site is immediately below and the other above the railroad bridge at said place.

Separate bids will be received for each of said locations, and for the location above said railroad bridge the bid will be for said wagon bridge exclusive of the approach on the north side of said river. Separate bids will also be received for said bridge exclusive of the lumber, the county furnishing all lumber on the ground and the contractor furnishing all other material. Each bidder will be required to deposit with his bid 5 per cent. of the amount of such bid to abide the result of the awarding of said contract as by law required and provided.

Said court reserves the right to reject any and all bids received under the said order.

Before Starting on a Journey

A person usually desires to gain some information as to the most desirable route to take, and will purchase tickets via the one that will afford him the quickest and best service. Before starting on a trip to Chicago or any point East, you should provide yourself with a map and time table of the Wisconsin Central Line. The trains run on this route are vestibule and are equipped with Pullman's latest Drawing Room sleepers, elegant Day Coaches and Dining Cars of latest design, built expressly for this service, and are exquisite in furnishings and convenient and comfortable in arrangement and as complete in every detail that they have no superior in comfort and elegance. The dining car service is pronounced by all the most elegant ever inaugurated, and is operated in the interest of its patrons.

Fast trains via the Wisconsin Central Lines leave Minneapolis daily at 12:45 p.m. and 6:25 p. m., and St. Paul at 1:30 p. m. and 7:15 p. m., making favorable connection with all trains from the West and Southwest.

For tickets, maps, pamphlets and full information apply to G. F. McNeill, C. P. and T. A., Minneapolis, Minn., and to Jas. C. Pond, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill. 1-16-ly
