pens, are not represented on the entry books.

THE JUDGES AT WORK.

At 9 o'clock this morning the judges of the different departments were given the entry books and most are now solving the great mystery that is always compulsory on a judge, and before evening some will have completed their task.

AT THE RACE TRACK.

The third heat of Monday's special trot was won by Frank O'Neil in 2:33; Walter second, O'Neil got the race. There was the usual amount of scoring and this heat was not trotted until 3:50 p. m.

The running race, a 1/4 mile dash closed the day's races. In this there were five entries: S. J. Jones' Daily Oregonian and Patricia; Swiftsure, owned by W. L. Whitmore; Polk county Joe owned by Keyt & Holman; and Misty Morn owned by Mrs. R. E. Bybee. In the pools Misty Morn was barred. The start was a good one and Misty Morn came under the wire ahead in 1:17, with her sister Patricia, 2nd. This was run at 4:25 p. m. Judge Looney ordered the jockeys to ride for blood, as he wanted the "best horse to win," he said. He is the proper man in the judges' stand.

The grand stand contains many people today, a much larger number than yesterday. The judges are D. H. Looney, J. Q. Wilson and Wm. Galloway. Starters are F. W. Reid and G. Hayden, of Vancouver. The first race was called at one. Trot 4 in this race Stella H. was first, Lady Mac, second and Lucy third, time 2:30. Stella was hitched to pneumatic sulky. The second heat was won by Lady Mac, Stella H., second time 2:34. This was trotted at 2 o'clock.

THE WILBER COMPANY.—A large and appreciative audience greeted the opening performance of this admirable company, at the opera house last night. That popular drama "The Streets of New York" was admirably presented with Mr. McCann and Miss Kendall in the leading roles, who maintained their well earned reputation, while their support in all its parts was efficient and meritorious and the performance won encomiums from all sides. Tonight the new play "Shadows of a Home" will be produced. It is a comedy drama of American home life, the comedy element was predominating. A number of new songs will also be introduced. A large audience will doubtless be present to witness it.

Taylor, and others of Salem's population. The conglomeration of color is beautiful and the aroma arising from this portion of nature's work is exquisite and refreshing.

It has been many years past since the big pavilion at the fair grounds has contained a general exhibit as that now hanging on the wall of a portion of the art department to the right of the main entrance. This is the elegant display of photographs from the gallery of Cherrington Bros., of Commercial and Chemeketa streets, Salem. It is samples of this firm's every day work and no other gallery on the northwest coast can equal it. Here are photos from the smallest to the largest size. If the Messrs. Cherrington had some of their proofs on exhibition, only the photographers of large cities could not produce as good a showing of art as these would be. The artists are the admiration of every one who passes into the pavilion.

SPECIAL FRUIT EXHIBIT.

These water melons on the top shelf in the board's fruit exhibit were secured by D. D. Pretymann from a 26-acre field of this fruit on the farm of Thos. Shattuck, of Grants Pass.

A number of Japanese plums is one of the curiosities in the fruit exhibit. They came from near Grants Pass, as also a lot of peach and fig tomatoes.

W. H. Flanigan, of Grants Pass, sent 10 twenty-ounce peaches of the King variety and they are in the society's exhibit of fruits.

A plate of fine large bunches of grapes are on display from the vineyard of R. A. Payne and R. D. Hill, of Ashland.

Seth Luelling, of Clackamas county, furnished an excellent showing of different kinds of fruit.

O. Coolidge, of Ashland, needs special mention of the amount of nice fruit that he furnished this department.

L. E. Pratt's plates on the fruit stand are handsome—he has 10 punes of the Gros de Ajen variety which weigh 2 1/2 pounds, also jars of figs and a Bartlett pear weighing 1 1/2 pounds.

THE HORSE STALLS.

Horseflesh is represented at this exhibition as it never was before. Each one of those box stalls to your left as you enter the main road gate contains a fine specimen of the equine family, from a heavy Clyde and Percheron to a slim built and smooth coated roadster or speeder. When the parade of these beautiful animals takes place on Friday morning on the new parade track then the many visitors can see with their own optics what Oregon contains in this department of the animal kingdom.

THE OTHER STOCK PENS.

The other stock pens are filled just as the JOURNAL report of Monday (yesterday) had them; there are probably a half-dozen that were overlooked, but there are enough and a great many more than any previous year. D. M. Guthrie, the famous Merino sheep raiser of Polk county, who has always had a representation of his fine wool family on the grounds, is not among the pens this time. Mr. G. has had "too much farm work and hop picking to attend to this season," he says; he is a member of the state agricultural board, having been appointed by the governor in the place of T. G. Richmond, lately deceased.

The old faces of the sheep and cattle exhibitors of past years are not noticed on the ground as much as usual, and one noticeable fact is that their places are taken by younger and newer stock dealers. Even T. L. Davidson and John Minto, of Salem, who could always be depended on to help fill up the sheep

It is easily controlled, makes but little noise, and is a neat, compact and beautiful piece of machinery. The company will soon introduce others. Those who would like to witness the working of this little engine, will find the proprietors ready and pleased to show it.

AN EXCEPTION TO THE RULE.—Secretary J. T. Gregg today received a letter from a prominent gentleman and lawyer of Salem, who also is representative-elect from Marion county, which is worthy of extra notice. It was an acknowledgment of the receipt of a complimentary ticket to himself "and lady," from the board, and also a declination of the same. He thanks the association board for the favor bestowed on him and says he is certainly able enough to pay his own way. He argues that the Oregon state fair is in need of the support of every citizen of the state and that it is a wrong movement for the board to issue passes to those who are simply "prominent" citizens. The fair board has a great load to carry and the issuance of complimentary tickets is carried to too great an extent. Were some prominent gentlemen to come here from a distant state then it would be an act of courtesy for the board to favor him with a free admission ticket, but not otherwise. It takes money to run a state fair and every Oregonian should act accordingly.

THE RECEIPTS.

The receipts yesterday at the gates and office amounted to $2,418.91, against $2,475 for 1891.

The gate finances for the week last year, 1891, are as follows: Tuesday, $1,605; Wednesday, $2,419; Thursday, $4,079; Friday, $2,105; Saturday, $2,500.

THE PAVILION.

Upon entering the main door of the pavilion this morning your eyes are bewildered with what is before you. You hardly know where to begin the pleasure work of looking at the exhibits herein contained. Yet, you must commence somewhere and this is right in the art gallery. You are tempted to say, upon glancing at the beautiful paintings, crayon work, sketches, etc.: "Nature is almost outdone." A hundred or more different views each neatly framed are here, and it is a most difficult job to choose the best—they are all the result of careful work with the artists' brush and palette.

To the right and left on the walls is a mass of embroidery, needle, crochet, and other work by female hands. Table scarfs, cloths, tidys, pillow slips, and everything that can be made with a crochet hook and needle is displayed—the blue ribbons will, certainly, be many in this section after today.

In yesterday's JOURNAL a description of the booths in the pavilion was minutely given and it was just as near correct as could be, but since late yesterday afternoon the jelly, jarred fruit, preserves, and cake and pastry exhibit has been greatly augmented by the addition of hundreds of receptacles containing the good stuff that would tickle any and everybody's palate. There are hundreds of jelly glasses, jars with all kinds of fruits, little and big, and you have to move on and get to some other booth or your mouth will water enough to fill a Salem sprinkling wagon.

R. M. Wade & Co. have a fine display of ranges.

A handsome display of native woods is near the Salem Woolen Mills display.

The soap factory is behind with its exhibit owing to a break down, but will have its booth complete by night.

THE FLORE.

The most attractive place on the fair grounds for the greater portion of the female sex, and also some of the men folks, is the floral exhibition

NOTES.

C. S. McNally, of Salem, has about 20 architectural designs, all prospective work. It is in the northwest corner, in the art department.

The parade track makes an excellent driving way for the city and country roadsters and here you see some pretty fast goers themselves.

F. W. Bier, of Vancouver, Wash., was a time keeper yesterday in company with F. C. Baker. He is a valuable man in the judges' stand.

The number of cases on display in the Salem cannery exhibit is over 1080 instead of only 480 as the JOURNAL read yesterday.

The impression has got out in the southern end of this county that the men's day tickets are $1 each. THIS IS NOT CORRECT; THEY ARE ONLY 50 CENTS.

The institute tent is to the left of the Capital City's electric line just at the ball ground platform.

Superintendent Savage turned away over a dozen pavilion applicants because he had no room for them.

C. D. Nairo, of Ballston, has a kennel of handsome thoroughbred Collie pups near the poultry coops.

There are five handsome turkeys in the poultry display—one is pure white of the White Holland breed, for sale at $3.

The trains today brought many visitors to the fair.
