THE CAPITAL JOURNAL. HOFER BROTHERS, - - - Editors. PUBLISHED DAILY, EXCEPT SUNDAY, BY THE Capital Journal Publishing Company. (Incorporated.) Office, Commercial Street, in P. O. Building entered at the postoffice at Salem, Or., as second-class matter. THE FUSION COMPLETED. Col. Robt. A. Miller, who has been crooning and cackling about Salem for a few days in the painful expectation of a small pullet laying its first egg, feels relieved. He was playing a part and it was not his forte. His mask and costume are stripped off and Robert is himself again, with the exception that he is metamorphosed from a plain Democrat into a hybridized fusionist, for the next election at least. But he laid his egg, and the public will discuss it, whether it be added or fertile for hatching out a Cleveland electoral vote. Our dispatches say that pursuant to a general plan of the National Democratic committee, certain Democratic electors are withdrawn and People's party electors appointed to fill the vacancy, in the vain hope of carrying enough of these hybrid delegations from Republican states to defeat Harrison. That Robert accepts his deception with meekness and dispatch is a foregone conclusion, than which nothing else could be expected from a Democrat who would walk through fire and eat live coals for an amusement at the best of party. It is so natural for a gold-bug corporation Democrat to step aside for a free silver anti-inflationist of the People's party, you know. And when it is done from a noble standpoint of principle, as in Col. Miller's case it must be, it is all the more admirable. To perfect this fusion fraud, by which Oregon is to be raped out of good Republican society and counted with the solid south. Col. Miller explains his resignation thus: "I have within the past few days received advice from the National Democratic committee, which have raised some doubt as to my eligibility to fill the position of presidential elector if elected, etc."

Does anyone doubt, if he stood the ghost of a show of being elected, that his disability would ever have come to light? This has been the thickest fraud of all. But Chairman Murphy of the Democratic committee says in an interview: "I am not at liberty to state what the disability of Colonel Miller is, as the information was imparted to me under the pledge of secrecy." So we are not to have exposed to the public what the disabled part of a hitherto supposed sound Democrat consists of? Great heavens! suppose Col. Miller had been elected to congress two years ago and his disability remained unknown to his constituents? What a stain that would have been on the democracy! We look next for the Democratic candidates for congress to make way for Brother Rork, and for the other Democratic elector to be displaced by the appointment of Gov. Penoyer, all to count Cleveland in with hybridized electors. Great is fusion and Democracy is its prophet.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

There was a group of business men who had met at their club and were discussing some of the serious and metaphysical questions of the day. One of them was a middle aged man with a thoughtful visage and iron gray hair. He heard the others speculating on transcendental theories with close attention, and finally remarked: "I had a strange dream last night—a very strange dream. If you promise not to laugh at me I will relate it. As a general thing I do not believe in dreams, but this was very convincing—very." "Let us hear it," said his friends unanimously; "dreams often mean more than we can understand." The dreamer stroked his chin thoughtfully, and finally began in the manner of a man who does not expect to be believed. "It was impressed on me very strongly," he said, "at the time, for I had been annoyed that very day by having mislaid some tickets, and I suppose carried the annoyance with me in my sleep, for I dreamed that I was looking for them and found them in a certain place in my desk, where I was in the habit of keeping such things safely laid away in an envelope. It was so real to me that I could hardly believe it a dream. Now comes the strange part. As soon as I was fully awake I went to my desk, and there was the envelope!" He paused a moment, and some one breathlessly suggested: "And you found the tickets?" "No; there wasn't a blamed thing in it."—Detroit Free Press.

Maddie's Birthday Cake. Eight-year-old Maddie had had a birthday, and was telling Aunt Emma about it. "I had a birthday cake with frosting and with eight little candles on it—one for every year, you know." "That was nice," said Aunt Emma. "I am going to have a birthday, Maddie. Don't you think I ought to have a cake with candles on it?" "Why, you couldn't!" said Maddie, looking up with surprise. Aunt Emma was as old as Maddie's mamma. "You couldn't have the candles, Aunt Emma—not one for every year, you know. There wouldn't be room on the cake."—Youth's Companion.

The Human Nature of So. Fastboy—I know that Flying Soud, would win that race. Slowboy—Then I suppose you are rich this morning. Fastboy—No; I put my money on another horse.—Chicago News-Record.

The Greatest Mistake of All. Some people have an unfortunate propensity to brood over what they call the "mistakes" of their lives. It arises from false estimate of human judgment and an overstrained idea of the responsibility of their actions. A conscientious woman of middle age wrote to a friend, "I am glad to be spared a longer life, that I may spend it in repenting my past mistakes." To spend one's time in lamenting past mistakes seems the worst mistake of all. Life is short at the longest. There is little time to dream of doing less to mourn over what has been done. To act, to act quickly, to act up to our best instincts and higher aspirations, is all we can do. It is all that is expected. After that our responsibility ceases, and the final result belongs only to God. The good woman above quoted had always acted according to her best judgment. But, being human judgment, it was fallible. Being human, she could not foresee the consequences of her actions, but could only do as seemed right at the time. Now if she was called upon to act to-day, what better could she do than that? Then why regret that she so acted before?—Harper's Bazar.

Cholera. When properly treated as soon as the first symptoms appear, cholera can nearly always be cured. The patient should go immediately to bed and remain as quiet as possible. Send for a physician, but while awaiting his arrival take Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in double doses after each operation of the bowels more than natural. If there is severe pain or cramps, take it in double doses every fifteen minutes until relieved. This remedy has been used with great success in severe epidemics of dysentery that were almost as severe and dangerous as cholera, and if used as directed a cure is almost certain. Every family should have a 50 cent bottle at hand ready for instant use.—After the disease is under control, castor oil must be taken to cleanse the system. No other physic or substitute will do in place of castor oil. For sale by Baskett & Van Slype, druggists.

Tailor in War. It was not at all unusual for soldiers and others who were exposed to danger to wear tailors made by way of protection. A story which gained credence is told of a soldier in the time of the Prince of Orange. He was a Spanish prisoner, and on being condemned to be shot it was found that he was invulnerable. The soldiers stripped him to see what kind of armor he wore, but it was discovered that he was not protected in that way, but an amulet on which was the figure of a lamb was found on his person. This was taken away from him, and the shots took effect.—Detroit Free Press.

An Immense Giant. The bones of a giant discovered in an excavation near Rouen, in the year 1869, were of extraordinary proportions. The skeleton was as long as the whole leg of an average man, and the skull was made to hold a bushel of wheat without spilling a grain. One of the jaw teeth was eleven-sixteenths of an ounce—lion. A Free Press. Mother—I am so glad little is so pretty. Father—Why not? Mother—She's so fond of looking at Mother News.
