HUMOR

THE GUESTS TURNED COOKS.

A Practical Joker Had All the "Help" Out Sailing on His Yacht.

There is a certain yachtsman who loves a joke, especially one of the practical kind. He is rich, and can therefore indulge this weakness with less fear of the consequences than most people would have. Last summer he made his headquarters at a hotel on the Jersey coast, taking frequent cruises on his schooner yacht. Being liberal with his money he was the "star boarder" at his place, and the proprietor put up with his eccentricities rather than lose his valuable patronage.

One day in August the yachtsman said to the hotel keeper:

"Your servants have to work pretty hard, don't they?"

"Well, yes," was the hesitating reply. "They seem very faithful, and I think they deserve a little treat."

"Yes," said the hotel man, wondering what was up.

"I have been thinking it would do them lots of good to take a sail on my yacht."

"Oh, that would be too great a favor," replied the other. "Besides they haven't time to go out on such a trip."

"Yes, they have. They can go directly after luncheon and get back in time to cook dinner."

"You would be sure to bring them back in two or three hours?"

"Certainly; you needn't worry about that."

Consent was given, and the guest invited all the servants for an afternoon's cruise. They accepted the offer eagerly. The next day was named for the time. Luncheon was hurried through with, and the start was made without washing the dishes. The yacht was of good size, so that there was room for every one. All the employees of the hotel went, except the clerks. The cooks and their helpers, the waiters, hall boys, baggage handlers, dishwashers and all the rest put on their best bibs and tuckers, for an afternoon "off."

The day was a fine one, and the sail was immensely enjoyed. The owner of the vessel was even more delighted than his guests. Four o'clock came and the vessel was miles from the hotel. The cooks began to get anxious. They were assured it was all right. After an hour or two a capital supper was served, and Mary Ann and James forgot all about their duties on shore. When their host said, "I wonder what the people at the hotel are eating," there was a great shout of laughter. All consented to the mutiny against their employer, and didn't mind sailing until 10 or 11 o'clock, when the schooner finally landed.

In the meantime the guests were in a fine state of mind, and the proprietor was beside himself. At 6 o'clock some of the people went into the kitchen, washed a few dishes, cooked coffee and got together some cold food. A few thought it all a great joke. When the yachting party returned the hotel keeper couldn't scold his employees and didn't dare offend the rich guest. He therefore smiled, in a forced fashion, it is true, when the yachtsman asked him cheerily, "How did you enjoy your dinner?"—New York Tribune.

She Bought Postage Stamps.

"Where did you buy that delicious perfume?" remarked a lady to a friend recently, upon detecting the exhalations of a most pleasing odor.

"At Blank Bros.," replied the person addressed, naming a prominent firm of chemists and perfumers. "They have a wonderful variety from which to select."

"Yes, I suppose so; but then are they not dreadfully high in their prices? Druggists always get more for their wares than any other class of men."

"I suppose they do," remarked the owner of the perfume. "My husband says they charge twice as much as other people, and I suppose it must be so, but there seems to be no help for it."

"Oh, mamma," spoke up the youthful daughter of the lady, who had remained an interested auditor of the conversation, "I don't think druggists charge more than other folks."

"Why, what do you know about it, my dear? What have you ever bought from them?"

"Oh, postage stamps and postal cards," came the quick reply from the little one; "and," she added, "they don't charge no more for 'em than they do at the post-office."—Exchange.

George W. Cable and Eugene Field have started out with a duologue entertainment.

Boston's aldermen have established a committee of censorship to abate the indecencies of pictorial billposters.

Four steers compelled attention to a theatrical enterprise in Boston by drawing a placarded wagon through the streets.

Abelone Harrison advertised the play in which she is acting by serving as a rescued woman, in Kansas city, at a trial of fire apparatus.

Packs of playing cards, with the characters of a drama in place of the usual kings, queens and jacks, are given away by a traveling manager.

A Philadelphia manager keeps a six horse coach going about, with announcements thrown on its windows by an interior apparatus, the vehicle being in all other respects conventional.

Spike Hennessey, the genuine burglar who has figured in a melodrama for several years, may be less eager to exploit his record now that he has married a California clergyman's daughter.

In the way of flamboyant advertising on the billboards the Camden (N. J.) aldermen have resolved to charge fifty dollars a year for each theater thus displayed in that town, the action being taken in the interests of the Camden theater against those of Philadelphia.

Marie Jansen, whose disagreement with Francis Wilson caused her retirement from his company, has made a partnership with another comedian—George Wilson, of local Boston repute as the successor of the late William Warren at the Museum—and together they will try their fortune in comic opera.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

The South park branch of the Pennsylvania, from Dunlo, Pa., to Scalp Level, Cambria county, will be finished in time to begin operations in the spring.

Second Vice President and General Manager Benjamin Norton, of the Long Island railroad, has resigned, and E. R. Reynolds has been appointed general manager in his stead.

The Wilkesbarre and Eastern, which is now being built from Wilkesbarre to Stroudsburg, Pa., will require a great many bridges. All of these will be built of iron. Contracts for 2,000 tons of bridges have already been let.

The Erie's old broad gauge No. 74 was regarded as the most unlucky engine that ever ran on the road. It was used in the Susquehanna yards, and is said to have killed thirty-nine persons, including four women and three children. In addition to this seventy men were crippled by this engine.

TURF TOPICS.

"White Hat" Dan McCarty, of California, owns in the neighborhood of 500 horses—trotters, pacers and runners.

Sixteen thousand panes of glass are used in the windows which light the newly completed covered mile track at the Jewett farm.

The coming marriage of Miss Maud Stone, of Cincinnati, to Mr. Carey, of New York, is announced. The prospective bride is the young lady for whom Maud S was named.

Senor Bocau paid $60,000 for Ormonde, took him to Buenos Ayres, got some high priced engagements and sold him for $150,000 to Millionaire MacDonough, of California. It is now reported that the Californian owner has set $3,000 as his service price for Ormonde.

Phallas held the stallion record two months and sixteen days. Fearnaught held it two months and fourteen days. Allerton held it, all told, two months and eleven days, which was the shortest time that any horse had held it until Stamboul was cut off with only twelve days of glory by Kremlin, who was in turn dethroned by Stamboul, the present king.

THE YELLOW KITTEN.

How a Trusting Young Cat Saved a Despairing Painter from Suicide.

In the atelier of a certain French painter there seems to be a congress of yellow cats, or rather the same cat in portraits innumerable. A pair of him crown, like an armorial bearing, the doorway; he plays with falling petals of tea roses; he sleeps while a sparrow eyes him askance; he sits, grave as a sphinx; even a procession of him forms the frieze of the chimney piece, and he peeps between purple and golden pansies on the Sevres tea service in the corner consecrated to madame.

Eight years ago Maurice Lenoir dwelt in a garret, earning his bread by copying pictures, nourishing his soul with dreams of a great classic canvas of his own. Needless to recount the disillusions, privations, rebuffs or the nervous reactions of the days when he received a few francs. The unrelieved pressure of poverty, the unremitting blows of ill luck—tap, tap, like a paver's mallet—became unbearable. The thin blood of semistarvation mounted to his head, creating visions of suicide.

One evening he bought poison. Re-entering his room something brushed past his feet. He lighted a candle and began to write a few lines, merely to save trouble at the inquest. Suddenly there sprang upon the table a little yellow kitten. It rubbed caressingly against his face. Evidently a waif—one of the surplus ninefold lives of nobody's cat, it was thin and famished, its wet fur frayed by the jaws of some dog.

"One may be tired of life," said Maurice, "but one does not leave a guest hungry!"

With bread and milk, all he had, he fed the kitten, then warmed it within the breast of his coat, where it caressed with its tongue the hand that held it, then purred itself to sleep.

Maurice reflected: "Suicide is the refuge of one who has no longer hopes, ties of affection or responsibilities. In receiving this kitten I have assumed a duty. To place this little creature for warmth upon my heart and then turn that warmth to ice would be a betrayal. At least I will live until tomorrow."

In the morning the little cat appeared so pretty Maurice painted and was able to sell its portrait. Another was ordered and another.

M. Lenoir's pussies became the fashion. He deferred his dream of a classic canvas and painted only cats in all postures and colors—yellow, black, white, gray and tabby. He studied cats; he divined under their mask of drowsiness or caprice the subtle charm and wisdom adored in old Egypt.

The yellow kitten that saved his life also made his fortune. And M. Lenoir proved not ungrateful; the yellow cat, now patriarch of a tribe, has his cushion and his cup in the atelier, and wears a golden collar inscribed "To My Benefactor."—Elizabeth Cavazza in Short Stories.

No Songs Like the Old Songs.

Life is full of surprises and disappointments. At an Omaha hotel on Sunday a number of gentlemen, strangers to each other, drifted together by the force of circumstances, engaged in a discussion of music to while away the time. One of them was a pale, thoughtful man, with the air of a student; another was a fat man, with bristling whiskers, who might have been a veterinary surgeon. "I tell you," said the fat man, "there are no songs like the old songs; they are the sweetest, and the noblest, and the best; they linger in one's memory like the scent of the roses about the broken vase, and they are hallowed by fond associations so that they give rise to emotions that cannot be called into life by any of the new songs. Take, for instance, 'Annie'"——

"'Rooney?'" broke in the pale, thoughtful man in a sweet, birdlike voice, and then a great hush fell upon the assemblage and the fat man, with a long, lingering look of scorn at the interrupter, repaired to his own room to bury his sorrow.—Omaha World-Herald.

A Prince's Dog.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria has a pet dog, which is disliked and dreaded by his courtiers. It is a pug of very aristocratic lineage, given him by Queen Victoria. He always feeds it himself at luncheon, after making it go through a variety of tricks. At a signal from the prince it stands in the corner of the room on its hind legs and prances across to the opposite corner, keeping in time to the beat of the prince's finger.

It "groans" for Russia and "cheers" for the queen of England, and when told to "die for Bulgaria" it rolls down insensible in the drollest manner. The prince always speaks to it in English, and it will not take the slightest notice if addressed in any other language.—London Graphic.

Albino Birds and Beasts Sacred.

It is noteworthy that albino animals are regarded by the Japanese in a superstitious light. The appearance of one is considered a good omen for the reigning mikado, and occasionally signalizes a reign. For example, one reign is called "hakuchi nenkan," or period of the white pheasant, another, the "haku hoo nenkan," or period of the white phœnix.—London Globe.

Entertaining the Butcher.

Do you remember the Irish woman who told her consumptive son to "Cough for the lady, Jimmy?" One of my nurse maids gave me a yarn to match that. Baby Bob had been ailing, fretful and wakeful for a few days, and it occurred to me that perhaps if his carriage was wheeled up and down the path the sunshine and sweet summer air might be the best anodynes for the little chap. Sure enough, when I looked out at the end of half an hour, Baby Bob was rosily sound asleep, and my heart rejoiced.

A little later the butcher's boy, coming in at the side gate, stopped to gossip with Kathleen. "A fine baby you have there!" said he. "And if you think that when he's asleep, it's awake and laughing you should see him!" said she, and to my horror she bent to give the baby a brisk shake, crying jovially: "Bobby, dear! Wake up and laugh for the butcher, Bobby!"—Boston Commonwealth.

Eating Before Retiring.

Dr. Cathell is satisfied that were the weakly, the emaciated and the sleepless to nightly take a light meal of simple, nutritious food before going to bed, for a prolonged period, nine in ten of them would be thereby raised to a better standard of health. He has found that after digesting a bowl of bread and milk, or a mug of beer and a few crackers, or a saucer of oatmeal and cream before going to bed, for a few months, a surprising increase in weight, strength and general tone has resulted. Persons who are too stout and plethoric are recommended to follow an opposite course.—Philadelphia Press.

The Newspapers of the World.

The total number of papers published in the world is estimated at 47,000, distributed as follows: United States and Canada, 19,000; Germany, 6,000; Great Britain, 7,000; France, 4,300; Japan, 2,000; Italy, 1,500; Austria-Hungary, 1,200; Asia, excluding Japan, 1,000; Spain, 850; Russia, 800; Australia, 800; Greece, 600; Switzerland, 450; Holland, 300; Belgium, 300; all others 1,000. Of the entire number about half are printed in the English language.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Guns Used in War.
