MITCHELL ON SULLIVAN

His Opinion of Corbett and of Himself.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The Herald publishes an interview with Charles Mitchell in which the pugilist says, referring to his fight with Sullivan at Chautauque: "I think," said the fighter, in a tone of cautious deliberation, "that the Sullivan fight was a harder one than this is likely to be. My own opinion is that Sullivan is the greatest fighter ever born of a woman, and if Corbett had tackled him in his prime he would not be champion today—I mean Corbett."

"What do you think of Corbett as compared with Jackson?"

"I sometimes think the less I say about people the better it is for me.
But, after all, what is a fellow to do?
They come to me and ask a lot of questions, and of course I answer them; then the papers come out and say:
'Here's Charley Mitchell, and he's talking again.' I suppose I ought to grin and bear it, and do like the fellow in the scriptures when they pumiced one of his eyes—turn round and say: 'Here's the other one, fill that up, too, won't you?' But I don't mind saying that I think Corbett's chance with Jackson would be better now than ever. When he fought him the draw in San Francisco, he was a young, inexperienced man, and the black man had already made a record. Now, Corbett has been sparring around the country, and fought Sullivan, and all that, and of course he learned a good deal, and can do better than he did before. That is why I think his chances are better than they were."

"What do you think about fighting a black man?"

"What odds does the color make?
A fighter is a fighter. I'm blowed if I don't think Corbett will be wanting to fight no man unless he has got a college education and has been through Harvard or Yale or Oxford or Cambridge. What's the ring coming to, anyway? Why look here, I'd been fighting for 12 or 13 years before I came over here. This man said all he wanted was the satisfaction of punching me. As soon as I get here he begins to talk about a $10,000 stake, $25,000 of gate money, a fortune, by Jove, and I suppose, until two years ago he never saw $100 in his life. I came here prepared with my stake money and anxious to fight within 10 weeks from the date of signing, but he wants to put it off for a year so that it won't interfere with his show business. Meantime, he can get all the benefit of advertisements, and Mr.
Brady can go around bluffing. Well, I'm not in the show business myself and all I came over here for is to fight."

AT HIS OLD TRICKS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Mitchell, the English pugilist, visited the saloon of Jim Wakeley, one of Sullivan's former backers, early this morning, and tried to use the methods on barkeepers there which he so successfully employed on old man Savage in London.
Mitchell and his friends drank freely, and finally the liquor began to tell.
He rebuked the barkeepers for their slowness. The American resented the insults and told Mitchell to keep quiet.
He replied with profanity and the bar-keepers seized empty bottles and made for him. They struck him over the head and drew blood from his nose, but his friends interposed and got him out of the saloon, placed "Gentleman his hotel. He was knocked out in one round in the first fight of his present visit to this country.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.

There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube, when this is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed.
Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

German Workmen's Dwellings.

In the summer months of 1863 the first colony of workmen's dwellings, known as Alt-Westend, was built.
It contained eight rows of houses, each row having sixteen dwellings of three or four rooms each, and so arranged that the four room dwellings could be divided into two room dwellings and so rented if necessary. The first stories have a clear height of over nine feet and the second of over eight. The outer walls are of plastered stone work in the first story, surmounted by plastered framework, and each dwelling has a cellar. The buildings are simple, and in the words of Alfred Krupp, were intended for poor families who must save, but desire a healthful dwelling, and not for those to whom a few more dollars a year made no difference, when it meant that they could live more comfortably.—Berlin Letter.

A Carpenter Making Moonlight.

Charles Dickens was extremely fond of amateur theatricals. A recently discovered letter of his contains the following lines, which are most characteristic of the author of "Pickwick": "I am terribly out of spirits this morning, owing to the great difficulty I and the stage carpenter experienced in making moonlight, which is a much more troublesome task than we anticipated." There is something very ludicrous in the idea of employing a carpenter to make moonlight.—Harper's Young People.

Multiples of Nine and Six.

Possibly it was the belief in the supposed influence of nine and six on men's lives that originally gave rise to the custom of granting leases for multiples of seven and nine years.
Never for an even hundred or thousand, for fear of the power of the evil one. Nine, the trinity of the trinities, is the perfect plural, and is credited with mystic properties. As might be supposed, therefore, many superstitions are connected with it.
—New York News.

A cause of spindling growth is a lack of air. Plants shut up in the house get sensitive and are liable to suffer if there is a sudden fall in temperature, but if they are given plenty of fresh air daily, unless the day is very inclement, the plants will thrive and be sturdy.

The term "The Grand Old Man" was first used to designate Mr. Gladstone by Sir William Harcourt, and was heard in 1880 upon the return of the Liberals to power.

There are several degrees of arson, but to be in the first degree the of-

TOLD BY DETECTIVE DRUMMOND.

How He Protected Bascomb from a Green Goods Man He Could Not Arrest.

Chief Drummond, of the United States treasury secret service, tells a good story. A man named Bascomb came up from Tennessee. He had received a green goods circular and had determined to trap the swindlers.
Drummond was detailed to go with him.

"I put on a flannel shirt," says Drummond, "an old pair of trousers, a rough pair of shoes and a soft hat and followed Bascomb to the meeting place. He was accosted by a man who took him into a building. I followed and stood upon a stairway where I could watch the door leading into the office of the swindlers. After awhile the door opened and Fowler, a noted green goods man who was then employed by the Davis brothers, stepped half way into the hall. He had a valise in his hand and was neither in the office nor out of it, but stood in the door. Bascomb had his eye on Fowler all the time, as I afterward learned. While Fowler was in the door a colored boy darted across the hall with a valise in his hand.
The exchange was made so deftly that Bascomb didn't see it.

"In a minute Bascomb came out and he and Fowler started for an express office. I followed. They took a stage and I took one too. Their stage stopped quite often, but mine didn't, and at times I found I was ahead. Finding that Fowler might recognize me, I would lie down flat upon the floor of my stage whenever I got near the one I was following.
The passengers were amazed, and thought, I suppose, that I was an escaped lunatic. Fowler and Bas-comb left their stage near the Adams express office and I alighted from mine. Just as Fowler was in the act of handing the valise to the receiving clerk I tapped him on the shoulder and told him that I wanted him, and that, too, pointing to the bag.

"Bascomb was delighted. 'I've got him! I've got him!' said he. 'The valise,' he continued, 'is full of counterfeit money.'

"My friend," I replied, 'they grow smart men in Tennessee, but there are smarter ones in New York.'

"Then Fowler put in: 'Look here,' said he to me, 'let the jay have the valise. If you do I am a century ahead and you will get fifty cases.'" "What did he mean by that?" asked Drummond.

"He meant that the Davises were to pay him $100 for the part he had taken in the swindle, and that they would give me $50 if I didn't interfere."

"I led Fowler and Bascomb into a hallway next to the express office," continued Drummond, "and cut open the valise. It was filled with damp paper and a block of wood. 'I'll be totally goldarned,' said Bascomb.
'How did you do it?' he asked Fowler."
"And you arrested Fowler?" said I.
"No. I let him go," Drummond replied. "There wasn't a point to be made against him under the law.
There was no counterfeit money in the bag. On the other hand, Fowler could have had me arrested for highway robbery, but of course he didn't.
He was glad enough to make his escape."

"And Bascomb?"

"Oh, he returned to Tennessee with his comb cut."—Cleveland Leader.

Laborers of the Andes.

The majority of the laborers in the mountains of Peru are "Cholos," or Indians born in the Sierra. They are found incapable of doing efficient work on the coasts or in the warmer altitudes without a long course of acclimatization. If gangs of these "Cholos" have for special purposes been taken down suddenly from the Sierra to work at altitudes of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet, sickness and fever have resulted from the change.—
