A Surprised Informant

What woman has not suffered beeath the well meant information volunteered by strangers in regard to her hat, her hair, her shoestring or her skirt braid? How often, when some kindly disposed intruder has told her for the twelfth time in one morning that some absolutely unmendable break has occurred in her costume, has she stifled her natural rage and murmured, "Thank you?"

There was a woman on Broadway the other morning who had grown weary of this and who had revolted. In the first place, some man of heavy foot and unseeing eye had trodden upon her skirt and ripped it from its band so that it trailed and flopped in anything but a fashionable manner. Then shopping had further worn upon her and she was very cross indeed. Finally, as she stood in front found near Clarendon yesterday lying of a stationer's window, a man stepped up and said in the cheerful tones of a person who loves to communicate interesting facts just what the woman had heard nine or ten times before:

"Madam, I beg your pardon, but your skirt is dragging in the back." He almost dropped in a lifeless heap of astonishment when the long suffering woman turned and said in tones of concentrated hatred: "Will you please mind your own business?"—New York World.
