A HOT FIRE WELL FOUGHT.

First Whirl of the Paid Department.

OLD J. Q. WILSON HOUSE BURNED.

No Insurance on Building or Contents.

At 10:35 a fire alarm was given from Liberty and Center streets, the old J. Q. Wilson house occupied by Edwin Chatwin and family.

The house was built by Thomas Cross about 1858, and cost about $9000. It was not worth over $2000 now, and its present owner had no insurance.

THE FIRE was first discovered at 7:30 when smoke was coming out of the middle flue, but was not thought to be dangerous.

THE HOSE BURST in several places but by 10:45 several strong streams were pouring into the second story, the roof was well covered and by 11 a. m. was well under control.

It was the first round at a fire by the Salem

PAID DEPARTMENT and they handled it with great credit. The volunteer boys got out in good shape too, and had a hose playing from a Liberty street hydrant.

THE JOURNAL'S FLAG THERE.

What the Associated Press Supplies.

ALL THE WORLD NEWS OF THE DAY.

Facts About the Contents of Tuesday's Journal.

THE JOURNAL is the only newspaper in Western Oregon receiving the afternoon dispatches of the Associated Press, as has been remarked before, with the exception of the Portland Telegram.

It is not necessary to elaborate upon the fact that this is the greatest news gathering concern in existence. All well-informed people know this. It is in fact a combination of all the great American newspapers, organized to get the news at any cost—not for profit as an association—for it pays no dividends, although it has on hand and handles millions—but only for the benefit of the newspapers and the people.

Last evening's JOURNAL for instance, was the only paper in this part of the state except the Telegram furnishing its readers news of: The Great and Fatal Mine Explosion in Indian Territory. The Hog Oregon Pacific Row. The Wyoming Special Session. The Arrest of Gen. Heath's Son. The Fires in Arkansas City, Ark., Exeter, N. H., and Baltimore, Md. The Big Liverpool and Atchison, Kan., Failures. The Floating Wreck off Gray's Harbor.

Besides others too numerous to mention. It is unnecessary to remind our readers that the JOURNAL is the only afternoon newspaper outside of Portland and local paper. And the JOURNAL will continue to do these things, and to do them better, long after the readers and the writer hereof are dead and gone. It is an established institution.
