the oil and labels from the cans were secured and brought to San Francisco. The samples of oil submitted to an expert, who reported after investigation that some of the fluid "flashed" at a temperature of from 80 to 100 and 103 degrees and burned at a temperature of between 115 and 118 degrees.

"And this," said Mr. Craig, "when upon every can of the oil, along with the brand and the name of the company, is the assertion, '150 degrees fire test.'"

"The expert further stated in his report that the oils in question would be fairly safe in a cool climate, but were unsafe in such a warm temperature as that of Selma, or, in fact, almost any other point in San Joaquin valley.

"You must remember," added Manager Craig in explaining the case, "that the temperature about Selma frequently ranges from 100 to 115 degrees in the shade during the daytime, and even at night is often as high as 110.

"All the facts in the case," added Mr. Craig, "were submitted to the local representatives of the Standard Oil company, together with a request that the corporation refund to the New Zealand company the amount of money paid out in settlement of the losses in question.

"Finally the whole matter was referred to the head office in New York and then there was another wait. Finally, after about four months of pulling and hauling, the oil company sent us their answer."

"And that was—?" "A refusal to pay the bill. That settles it. The negotiations are now dropped and we will sue for the money. We propose, once for all, to settle the question of whether or not this sort of business can be carried on with impunity.

"In nearly every state in the Union except California," resumed Mr. Craig, "there is a law providing for a fire test which all oils must meet before they can be placed on the market.

"The Paint, Oil and Drug Review says: If popular opinion is to have any hand in the overthrow of this monopolistic blight upon general business; for it really feels as if there would have to be a feeling against it created in the public mind to cause any future legislation which shall limit its career or put it in such a position that it will be compelled to obey the laws of the country it feeds upon.

"The bringing of these suits is a new feature of opposition to Standard methods, and there needs be many such features. If the first suit is won by the insurance company, the Standard will of course appeal, but if the insurance men are sustained by the highest tribunal, there will be a precedent established which may prove a healthful check upon at least this one method of Standard deceit, to the advantage of those who daily risk their lives and properties by the purchase of Standard low test oil sold under a guarantee of high test.

There certainly should be strenuous efforts made to acquaint all consumers of the unreliability of Standard brands of illuminating oil. Courts are slow in coming to decisions, and while they are considering the matter and permitting delays and obstructions of Standard attorneys the octopus keeps right on its usual way, and other lives and properties suffer. While the courts are deciding, the independent refiners, and their friends among the newspapers, must do their best to educate the public to the truth.

Another remark: The editor of the Marion Democrat, in the above excerpt, says: "The corporation has had a soft snap for years." Then why not the state have that "soft snap" awhile at the dictation of the masses of the people? If a "soft snap" was good for the corporation, it is a cardinal principle with the People's party that it would be good for the people, besides removing that incubus of leasing prison labor, —Coquille City Herald.

The Best System of Fortification is that adopted by people in precarious health who employ their systems against disease with that acceptable and effective barrier against its inroads—Hosier's Stomach Bitters. Physicians are greatly perplexed and said it was very critical with my wife, as she was more than likely to have paralysis at any time, and if so it would be very doubtful if she survived.

After Diphtheria Paralysis of the Throat—Numbness and Weakness. Perfect Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. C. S. Southwick, North Madison, Ohio. "My wife and three children were attacked with diphtheria at the same time. After serious illness the greatest danger was safely passed, but they were all left with Paralysis of the Throat, and with my wife it also affected her limbs. Her arms were numb to the shoulders, accompanied with a prickling sensation. It was so difficult for her to swallow, it seemed as if she must starve. The children were in a similar condition. Physicians were greatly perplexed and said it was very critical with my wife, as she was more than likely to have paralysis at any time, and if so it would be very doubtful if she survived.

Words are Feeble to express the gratification we all felt at the end of a week to find an improvement. When they had finished three bottles I could not see but they were as well as previous to their sickness. The numbness and paralysis entirely disappeared. There was no trouble in eating, beyond apparent inability to get enough to eat. The neighbors and physicians of this case and all think it wonderful, as do the doctors." C. S. Southwick, Grocer and Notary Public, North Madison, Ohio.
