THAT HOME.-It is bad enough to force the old yets of Eastern Oregon to travel clear over to Salem, but to force them to go to Roseburg in Southern Oregon is simply an outrage. No one thinks of such a thing .- JOURNAL Decidedly thin, California's soldiers me is in the very Southern limits and the expenses are paid anyway .-Democrat. That is exactly it: the people have to pay the travelling expenses and therefore the old soldiers should not have to come clear across the state and then travel to the south several hundred miles.

FUNERAL OF MRS. GOLDEN.

Services at Unity Church By Rev Copeland.

A large assemblage witnessed the funeral ceremonies over the remains of the late Mrs. T. L. Golden at the Portland and who have a tremendous recently. The auditorium and gallery were filled. Beautiful floral decorations occupied the pulpit platform, sent in by loving friends. Dr. Copeland's entire society were present to testify their loving regard for one of its most faithful members, one of the first of this newly organized church to pass into the great beyond.

The entire service was impressively conducted. A funeral march was played as the pall bearers and mourning family entered with the casket upon which rested a cluster of gleaming white callas. The choir rang "Blessed Home, Over There." Dr. Copeland read the Scripture burial service of the church beginning: "Wait upon the Lord; though weeping may endure for the night, joy cometh in the morning;" concluding with a beautiful poem from the writing of Edwin Arnold: "Come away, she is dead."

The choir sang a hymn concluding with the words:

Thanks be to God that such have been Although they are no more."

Many in the congregation were deep ly affected by the sweet, old-fashioned

After a beautiful solo by C. D. Ford, Dr. Copeland delivered the funeral address. The friends of the deceased took a last farewell look at the face of the dead, and then the remains were scaled up from human eyes forever and taken to Rural Cemetery for burial by funeral train on the Capital City railway.

A REACTION FOR RICHARDSON.

The Portland press has labored hard to conjure up a theory fixing the crime of the attempted train-wrecking upon George E. Richardson, the man who signalled the train, that a reaction has started in his favor.

It must be remembered that the Portland press is supplied with information by the railroad company's employes, attorneys, detectives and Pinkertons, who make head quarters at pecuniary interest in a conviction.

They have before this convicted more than one innocent man. No one a success as the American lady in the doubts but that money will convict "Argent d'Autrui" of M. Henrique. Richardson, if it can be done, guilty or innocent. But he should not be convicted by the lies palmed off on half witted reporters of a mercenary press
