THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

It is very grave. The present administration has offered no solution except to show continuous hostility to the silver coinage, and no one doubts but that when it can be done, a blow shall be struck that will put silver at a discount and gold at a premium. Mr. Cleveland was never a friend to silver His whole administration is hostile to silver. In the mean time silver bullion is accumulating, its price is going down and there is no favorable outlook.

The situation is this: Under the Sherman law millions of silver are bought each month, piled up at Washington and other mints, and silver certificates redeemable in gold are issued. The silver, the certificates, all our paper money in fact is at par. The problem is to maintain this condition of affairs and yet meet the growing demands of the country.

There is a great need of silver in the country. In most smaller towns it is almost impossible to get a gold double eagle changed to silver. Of course, a hostile policy on the part of the government will increase the scarcity of the white metal even for the purposes of a subsidiary coin. To accumulate it at Washington and the sub-treasuries and suppress its circulation among the people is, undoubtedly, the policy suggested to Cleveland by Wall street interests.

But this congestive process cannot long continue. It will demonetize silver, bring on a panic, where all power over our country's commerce and prosperity will again for a time be thrown into the hands of gold manipulators. The congestive policy will force an agrarian political revolution that may carry this government far towards an era of fiat money and that would prove ruin to thousands.

A more liberal policy towards silver than that dictated by the monometallists will alone satisfy the demands of the country. In Oregon finance is the key to the political situation of the next few years. If we had John H. Mitchell to elect to the United States senate in Oregon all would be clear sailing. A legislature would be returned to elect him. But a monometallist cannot be elected. Oregon has too great an interest in a more liberal financial policy to ever do such a thing.

HORTICULTURE.

The fruit and flower growers of Marion county have just held a successful two days convention at Salem. There was a large attendance and many important facts of interest to fruit growers were brought out. The discussions and papers read will result in adding greatly to the common stock of knowledge and enhance the profits of fruit growing. There was a large attendance of ladies and it was shown that this industry is of the greatest vital importance to the whole family. It was learned that the cannery at Salem would handle the strawberry crop and probably other small fruits; that fruit would be shipped from Salem to Eastern markets more largely this year than ever before.

Mr. Shepard's paper showed that cooperation is possible if the fruit growers will only themselves take hold of it, and that they can pack the output of their orchards and get them direct to consumer's markets by carload lots at car load rates, and save all expense of middle men. This plan is all shaped up and a meeting is called for later on when the crop is better developed.

The state society of horticulture meets at Salem in July when there will be a large convention here of fruit growers from all over the coast. That will be a great gathering. The occasion should be made much of. We should show what this section is capable of in fruits and flowers. We should show the visitors our homes, our orchards, our city, and our institutions to their best advantage.

Salem people should remember the annual meeting of the Humane society called by President Bush at his bank parlors Friday this week at 2 p. m., April 21. It is a worthy society and should be made stronger. Many of our good people should lend this cause at least an hour once a year. It is a great educating influence.

FROM TURNER.

There will be a meeting called in the interest of the farmers of Marion county at Turner, April 22nd. M. V. Rork will deliver a speech on cooperative associations of the farmers touching upon milling and manufacturing their own productions. All persons interested are especially invited.

NEW CITY LAWS PENDING.

Proposed Stringent Regulations for Stock and Dogs.

A STOCK ORDINANCE.

"No horses, mules, cattle, sheep, swine, goats of domestic fowl shall be allowed to run at large or be herded in any streets, alleys, parks or public places in the City of Salem; provided, that animals being driven through the city for shipment or slaughter or other purposes excepting for pasture, shall not be regarded as running at large under this section; and provided further, that milch cows taken to and from pasture through or on any of the streets of the city but must be led whenever they are taken on any of the streets of the city.

A DOG ORDINANCE.

"It shall be the duty of the marshal and policeman to take up and impound any dog or slut that may be found running at large contrary to the provisions of this ordinance within the city limits. The marshal shall give immediate notice of the taking up and impounding of such dog or slut, and a description thereof by posting the same in a conspicuous place at the pound, and in addition thereto shall post notices with a like description in three public places within the City of Salem for at least three days. If any such dog or slut so taken up and impounded shall not be reclaimed by the owner or person entitled to the possession thereof and costs paid within two days after the posting of such notice the marshal shall sell such dog or slut at public auction to the highest bidder at the city pound, which fact shall be so stated in the notices in this section required to be given, and if no bids are made or if bids made do not equal the costs and charges of taking up and impounding said dog or slut then the marshal is hereby authorized to bid in said dog or slut for the amount of said fees and charges for the City of Salem. Should said dog or slut be sold to any other person than the City of Salem, then the marshal, after applying the proceeds to the payment of his fees in taking up, keeping and selling, shall pay the surplus, if any to city treasurer, taking duplicate receipts therefor, one of which he shall file with the recorder.

"It shall be the duty of the marshal or any policeman under the marshal's direction to kill and bury outside the city limits any dog or slut that may be bid in at the sale, herein provided, for the City of Salem."

The marshal's fees are fixed as follows: For seizing and impounding, 50c; for each day's keeping prior to sale or killing, 10c; for killing and burying, $1.50; advertising and selling, $1.50. These fees are not to be paid by the city unless it is shown that the owner or keeper cannot be found after due diligence.

One Man at the National Capital.

He was a jolly granger, and the fact that he knew a thing or two wasn't advertised by the cut of his clothes or the fit of his whiskers.

"Hello, Uncle Ben," said a man who met him just as he reached the avenue on his way from the depot. "What are you doing here?"

"Come on business," he said solemnly.

"On business?"

"Yep. I came to tell the administration that I don't want office. I've bin a Democrat ever since I was old enough ter pernounce the word. I voted for Cleveland every time I hed a chance, so I came erlong to perclaim loudly that I don't want office. An if things goes as contrairy with me as they usually do I think I'll git it before I start back home."—Washington Star.

The Oldest Church in Europe.

Canon Routledge, in his "History of St. Martin's, Canterbury," claims the proud distinction of the oldest church in Europe for that venerable edifice. He describes it as occupying the unique position of being the only existing church that was originally built as a church during the first four centuries and has remained a church till the present day. St. Martin's has a sort of rival in St. Mary-in-the Castle, Dover, which Canon Puckle believes to have been erected by British workmen some time in the fourth century.

Not Baseball Players.

An Atchison (Kan.) woman has the souvenir pitcher craze. Her house is nearly entirely filled with them, and everything she can lay her hands on she trades off for pitchers. Her family are consequently eating out of pitchers, drinking out of pitchers and doing numerous other acts with the assistance of pitchers.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A POOR GIRL'S AFFLICTION.

How She Was Cured by Electricity

SALEM, Or., April 13, 1893.

TO THE AFFLICTED: I would say, in justice to Dr. Darrin, that I went to him about 5 years since, for a loathsome discharge of the ears and deafness, and in less than one month I was cured sound and well, with electrical and medical treatment. I remained so for 2 or 3 years, when I received a severe slap from a child on the ear, which gave me a severe pain in the ear, and caused an abcess which has discharged profusely, and deafness ever since, for two years or more. I went to h'm again about 4 weeks since and he has cured me by the same treatment, for which I feel very thankful. Refer to me at 317 College street. Lena Stanfield. Conrad Snowden will vouch for the same.

The Drs. will treat the poor free—except medicines—from 9 to 10 a. m. daily and those who are able to pay, will receive medical or electrical treatment at $5 a month for each disease or in that proportion as the cases may need, surgical and special diseases excepted. Consultation free. No cases taken if not deemed curable or improvable.

Office hours from 10 to 5 daily; evenings, 7 to 8; Sundays 10 to 12. All curable chronic, acute and private diseases, catarrh and deafness are confidentially and successfully treated. Circulars and question list sent free. Most cases can receive home treatment after a visit to the doctor's office.

On the Threshold.

Standing at womanhood's door is she
Clad in her virginal purity,
A creature fair as the lilies be,
And, like the lilies, alas, how frail;
They are borne to earth when the storms prevail,
And their life goes out in the summer gale

When we see a frail and lovely creature, standing on the threshold between girlhood and womanhood, we shiver with a fear of what may be, because we have seen so many succumb at this critical period of life. What is needed at this time is a tonic and invigorant—something that will promote proper functional action of the female organs. The only remedy to be depended upon is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This unequalled medicine, which cures diseases peculiar to women, is especially valuable at the period when the girl crosses the threshold of womanhood. Used at such a time, it never fails to produce a most beneficial result, and many a fragile girl has been tided over one of life's most trying periods by it.

A Honeymoon Incident.

A well known local carpenter tells a story that is intended as a good joke on his wife. When they were married, they rented apartments in a block, the rear of which overlooked one of the rivers, and among the wife's earliest culinary efforts was a batch of bread. The young husband sampled his wife's contribution to the world's stock of the "staff of life," and arising from the table playfully remarked:

"My dear, cast your bread upon the waters."

The wife took offense at the injunction, and as her husband left the house she flung the remaining loaf out of the window into the river. It struck a passing boat, crashing through the bottom and sinking in the water's murky depths. The next she knew the boatman, dripping wet, made a tour of the block, bent on discovering who dumped the hod of brick into his craft.—Binghamton Leader.

Where Rain Isn't Wet.

A peculiarity common to rain in the Bermudas, the Windward islands, the Hawaiian group and the Alaskan waters is that it isn't very wet. In none of these regions do the natives fear the rain, and even foreigners come to know that they take no harm from being caught out in a storm. It was noted by men on the ships patrolling Behring sea that a portion of the deck, slightly protected, dried out white even in the midst of a shower, and that wet clothing hung under a slight shelter on deck dried in a atmosphere apparently saturated by a hard rain.—New York Sun.

UNCLE SETH'S ADVICE TO POETS.

The poets what write about nymps an them things,
An grinde an goddesses hain't got no sense—
As sylfs an angels what fly round 'ith wings
'Thout ever a-stoppin to light on the fence—
They hain't got no idee
Of what po'try sh'd be,
An they don't tech a feller like you an like me.

For they talk about gods the old Greeks outer sing,
An goddesses nobody b'lieves in no more,
In a kin of a classical ting-a-ling-ling,
They say the same things we have all hearn afore
In a langwidge so gran
That we can't understan,
An too stylish an swell for a workaday man.

W'y, bless ye, there's po'try in flowers an birds
An courtin an luv an young babies enough
Thet don't hev to hev long academy words
To make a man yell, "Thet's the stuff, thet's the stuff!"
Yes, thet's jest the stuff
Of which any ole duff
Like you and like me can't fill up with enough.

Jest fix up yer songs so us plain folks can hear,
An make 'em some sense fer me an my wife;
Make 'em jingle an gallup 'ith everyday cheer;
Wet 'em down 'ith the joose of the winepress of life!
Fetch 'em up from your heart,
Where all songs orter start,
Let your Pegasus go an climb into our cart!

Souvenir Spoons.

"Some people are born with silver spoons in their mouths." If it is only a plain, everyday sort of silver spoon, it doesn't count in these fin de siecle days. It must be a souvenir spoon, and no common one at that, or one had better not have been born. This is indeed a time, if not an age, of luxury, and even the poorest people are not contented with the plain usages and appointments of the past half century. It is an age of constant changes, where nothing lasts, and in which anything that is before the public more than a year is considered a matter of ancient history.

The wonder is that with such an existing state of things a fad like that of collecting souvenir spoons should have lasted more than one season, and yet the interesting fact remains that the fancy or fad or whatever you choose to call it of souvenir spoons is just as eagerly followed now as it was five years ago, when first introduced.—Once a Week.

The Death of Cleopatra.

The story that Cleopatra killed herself by allowing an asp to bite her has long been believed, but probably has no better historical basis than the fanciful imagination of a gossipy Roman historian. For some time before her death she made careful preparations for that event and tried many different kinds of poisons on her unfortunate slaves to see which would produce death with the least apparent agony. She probably died by one of these poisons, for she was as adept in such matters as any of the Borgias. No asp was found in her room, and the wound on her breast supposed to have been that of its bite probably had another origin, for her whole body was covered with bruises, where she, in Egyptian fashion, had struck herself with her fists and torn her flesh with her nails in her grief for the loss of Antony.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Golden Silence.

There are times when "silence is golden," but women have the reputation of always ignoring this fact. A minister's wife tells a good story at her own expense which illustrates man's incredulity of her ability to keep her mouth shut under any consideration. Her husband was recovering from a serious illness. The day when the worst was over the doctor smiled, with the remark that all he needed was quiet and spoke of a powder which he would leave. Rising to go, the wife reminded him of the powder "to keep her husband quiet," when to her amusement the doctor turned, and looking her in the face said: "The powder was not for your husband, but for you. He will be quiet enough if he only gets the chance."—Exchange.

The Deacon's Thoughts.

Depths of Sowing Grass Seed.

The numerous failures in obtaining good stands of the cultivated grasses induced trials on the grounds of the Iowa experiment station at Ames to ascertain what influence depth of sowing had on securing good crops. Operations, owing to the rainy spring, did not begin until April 9, 1892, when red clover, timothy, Bromus inermus and tall meadow oat grass were sowed, and the seed was covered at various depths.

The soil in which this experiment was made is a sandy loam. As has been intimated, the spring was a wet one. The months of September, October and November were, however, very dry, and the only severe drought of the season occurred during these months. Briefly stated, the results of this experiment, as reported in a recent bulletin, indicated that for such a season as a 1892 clover covered two and three inches stands fall drought better than that covered less, while lighter coverings gave better yields at first cutting. Timothy covered one inch deep gave most hay at first cutting, but that sowed two inches deep stood drought best. Tall meadow oat grass covered two inches deep gave the most hay at first cutting and showed the best fall conditions. The Bromus inermus covered one inch deep gave most hay at first cutting, and that covered two inches deep showed the best fall condition.

A Beautiful Mountain Spirit.
