DIDN'T WANT THE BANK'S MONEY.

An Overpayment of $5 Returned With Interest After Thirty-seven Years.

After wandering for 37 years in all parts of the world, risking his life in battle and in storms on the ocean, a conscientious man yesterday paid back to the Commercial National bank with full interest a $5 bill given him by mistake.

Cashier Graham was surprised by a visit from an elderly stranger, who quietly stated that he had called to pay the bank some money that he owed it. He then related to Mr. Graham how in 1856 he had called at the bank to get a check cashed. He was at the time in a great hurry to catch a train as he was about starting on an extended journey, and without stopping to carefully count the bills which were shoved through the paying teller's window he put them in his pocket and hurried away.

Subsequently he discovered that by one of those mistakes sometimes made in antebank banking, but since prohibited by the code (see banking rules), the teller had given him $5 too much. It was too late to return and rectify the mistake, but he promised himself to return the money the first time he was in Philadelphia.

For thirty-seven long years the stranger wandered over the face of the earth, enlisted, and served through the great war, participated in several Indian uprisings in the far west, until this week, for the first time since the mistake was made, he again found himself in Philadelphia.

"And now," he added, while Cashier Graham had not yet recovered from his surprise at the strange tale, "I want to pay back the money with interest at 6 per cent per annum for 37 years. I figure the interest at $11.10, making a total of $16.10."

And the money was laid before the astonished cashier, while the stranger bowed himself out without giving his name or any clue to his identity.

The officers of the bank are now looking for some deserving charity upon which to bestow the unexpected windfall.—Philadelphia Record.

Superstitious Fear in a Dog.

Professor Evans tells some interesting stories about dogs. One about a Skye terrier illustrates a crude religious sentiment in some animals. The dog was prone to amuse himself by tossing dry bones in the air, apparently playing that they were alive. On one occasion a fine thread was attached to one of these bones, invisible to the dog, and the bone was slowly drawn away from him. Instantly, says the narrator, his whole demeanor changed. The bone which he had previously pretended was alive began to look as if it really were alive, and his astonishment knew no bounds.

He first approached it with nervous caution, but as the slow receding motion continued and he became quite certain that the movement could not be accounted for by any residuum of force which he himself communicated his astonishment developed into dread, and he ran to conceal himself behind or under some article of furniture, there to behold at a distance the "uncanny" spectacle of a dry bone coming to life, thus manifesting close observation, judgment, reason, imagination and superstitious fear.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Eggs in the Nest.

The loon or great northern diver always deposits two eggs. They are almost perfectly elliptical in shape and lie side by side. The eggs are invariably found at over three-fifths of the distance from the front edge of the nest depression—that is, at about two-fifths of the long diameter from the rear end of the elongated hollow or nest proper. From the position of the eggs one can tell how the bird sits on the nest, as we may reason that with these long bodied birds the abdomen, which supplies the direct heat, is well back from the front of the hollow. This theory is verified by watching the incubating bird.

The turtle dove, night hawk, whippoorwill and common domestic pigeon, each of which lays two eggs at each setting, deposit the eggs side by side, although this arrangement is frequently interfered with in the case of the tame bird, not rarely with the result that one of the eggs does not hatch.—Dr. Morris Gibbs in Science.

The Popularity of the Pink.

Since 1890 the carnation has been rapidly forcing itself into an important place in the flower trade. Nearly 4,000 florists are engaged either wholly or in part in growing this plant, and it is estimated that fully 200,000,000 blooms were sold last year, yielding over $1,000,000 to the growers. It is called "the flower of the multitude." It was originally found in France, Italy, Austria and northwest India. When introduced into England, it was a single flower, having five petals of a light pink shade, or flesh color, which fact conferred the name carnation. Under the influence of English soil, climate and culture, the color deepened and the flowers were called pinks.—Exchange.

Medical Men Often Expert Witnesses.

Of expert witnesses those most frequently seen in courts of law are medical men. In a very large number of trials, both of a civil and criminal nature, their assistance is invoked to aid the jury in arriving at a true conclusion. It may be to give exact information as to the extent of injuries sustained by a patient in an accident which has given rise to an action for compensation, or it may be their evidence is necessary to throw light upon a murder case by detailing from an examination of wounds how the crime may have been committed, or in an infinite variety of other circumstances their attendance may be required.—London Tit-Bits.

The Use of Shells in Medicine.

Carbonate and phosphate of lime prepared from crab shells, and various other calcareous substances derived from the animal kingdom, such as burned egg shells and oyster shells, were long employed in medicine to remove acidity of the digestive organs.—London Tit-Bits.

The Powder of Projection.

The belief in transmutation and in the virtues of the "powder of projection" is to be found more clearly stated in the works of Zosimos of Panopolis, the earliest known writer on alchemy whose authentic works have come down to us, for in his first lesson he exclaims, "How beautiful it is to see the changes of the four metals—lead, copper, tin, silver—till they become perfect gold!" The idea had evidently been developed and the art assiduously cultivated in Egypt since the time of the spurious Democritus, for Zosimos quotes the opinions of many adepts, of whose writings, mostly apocryphal, nothing is known save from his pages.

Hermes Trismegistus and Democritus, Moses and Mary the Jewess, Agathodemon and Cleopatra, the prophet Chymes and the "divine" Sophar are quoted as authorities for the operations to be performed on various minerals, which, after being duly melted, calcined, refined and sublimated over and over, are declared to have become gold or silver.

To these more or less intelligible descriptions of chemical processes Zosimos adds his own commentaries, which he sometimes presents under the form of allegories or visions.—Edinburgh Review.

Narcotic Effects of a California Spring.

Superintendent Stout recently described a wonderful mineral spring that formerly flowed from the mountain side some miles above the Butte Creek House and near the Plumas county line.

This spring was first called to Mr. Stout's attention some years ago while camping in that vicinity by an old prospector, who called it the "chloroform spring." The water which flowed from it did not differ in appearance or taste from the water of other springs, except that it was slightly brackish. It was the effect that followed the drinking of its waters that was remarkable. A small cup would in the course of half an hour render the drinker totally insensible, and he would remain for hours as if dead. But few white men had ever tried the experiment of drinking from it, but those who have done so describe the effect as not unlike that resulting from a heavy narcotic.

To the Indians this spring has been known for generations. They call it the "heap sleep" spring, and it is said that more than one weary red man has entered the happy hunting grounds through the medium of its waters.—Oroville Mercury.

An Anecdote of Thackeray.

On the last night of the year Thackeray was with the family of George Ticknor. The daughters of the house had gone to a party, and Thackeray was sitting for the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Ticknor. About 11 o'clock he arose, and his host inquired: "You are not going to retire yet?" "No," was the answer, "for always at the birth of the new year I drink to the health and happiness of my daughters, but I do not wish to keep you up so late."

"Pray stay with us," urged the host, "and we will join you in a health to your absent ones."

When the hour arrived Thackeray took a glass of sherry in his hand, rose to his feet, and said in tremulous tones: "God bless my motherless girls. God bless them and all who are good to them."

Drinking the wine, he bade his host good night and without another word he retired from the room, leaving his friends in tears.—Chicago Tribune.

A Cat That Put Out a Fire.

Some of our friends have a cat which they esteem very highly. On a cold winter day Mr. and Mrs. B. went to church, some five miles away, and left the house in the possession of the cat, Tom, who upon their return home rushed out and buried his paws in the cold snow.

Wanting to find out the meaning of this behavior on Tom's part, they examined his paws and found them blistered and burned. They walked into the house and found to their surprise that the carpet around the grate was burned, but the fire had been extinguished. They now took in the situation. A coal had fallen out of the grate and set the carpet ablaze, which had been extinguished by Tom, who had buried his paws in the effort he made.—Cor. New York Recorder.

A Lamb's Ride on a Cowcatcher.

A rather singular incident occurred on the Savannah, Florida and Western railway the other day. It was about 40 miles from Waycross on a through train to Chattahoochee. On the track just in front of the train the engineer, Mr. DuBose, saw a sheep with a young lamb. It was too late to stop the engine, and the train passed on, leaving mutton in its wake. Arrived at Waycross, the engineer descended from his engine and saw the lamb alive and unhurt on the cowcatcher. It had been carried 40 miles without a scratch.—Brunswick (Ga.) Times.

TYLER'S HOLDOVER CABINET.

Daniel Webster's Speech and the Deputy of the Newly Chosen President.

I had quite a chat some time ago with General John Tyler, the son and private secretary of President Tyler. Said he: "When my father succeeded to the presidency, he continued President Harrison's cabinet in office until he found that they were working against him. His first cabinet meeting was held on the day succeeding the death of President Harrison, and it was perhaps the most remarkable cabinet meeting in history."

"When all the members were present and the doors were closed, Daniel Webster, the secretary of state, arose and addressed my father, saying: 'Mr. President, I suppose you intend to carry out the ideas and customs of your predecessor and that this administration inaugurated by President William Harrison will continue in the same line of policy on which it has begun. Am I right?'"

"My father, much astonished, nodded his head almost involuntarily and looked at Mr. Webster with wonder. Daniel Webster straightened himself up at this and continued:—"

"Mr. President, it was the custom in our cabinet meetings of President Harrison that the president should preside over them. All measures relating to the administration were to be brought before the cabinet, and their settlement was to be decided by the majority of votes, each member of the cabinet and the president having but one vote."

"My father was always courteous, but he was also firm. He rose to his feet and looking about the cabinet room he said: 'Gentlemen, I am very proud to have in my cabinet such able statesmen as you have proved yourselves to be. I shall be pleased to avail myself of your counsel and advice, but I can never consent to being dictated to as to what I shall or shall not do. I am the president, and I shall be held responsible for my administration. I hope I shall have your hearty co-operation in carrying out its measures. So long as you see fit to do this I shall be glad to have you with me. When you think otherwise, I will be equally glad to get your resignation.'"

"This," concluded General Tyler, "settled the question, and there was no further trouble as to who was the head of the cabinet."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Suggestion For Dancing Parties.

The wits of hostesses are becoming more strained than ever in finding gentlemen capable of dancing to attend their parties. Ladies nimble and graceful are in abundance, but on the part of men the art of dancing seems to be a vanishing quantity. A lady writes suggesting the organization of an agency similar to those existing in Paris and Berlin, where suitable dancing men could be hired for the occasion. The hired guests would appear at the time appointed armed with guarantees of respectability and fitness for their occupation, be allotted to their duties for the evening and leave at a proper hour, conscious of having done a good night's work and honestly earned a day's pay. Imagine how half a dozen to a dozen dancing men would brighten up a languishing dance! Warranted to dance every item on the programme and to give not more than three dances to any young lady, they would infuse a tremendous amount of spirit into the proceedings.—Dancing.

Fear an Element in Sickness.

That apprehension of catching epidemic diseases assists in spreading them is an old doctrine, in support of which many facts might be cited, and it is only reasonable to suppose that where the reception of contagion is assisted by depression of the system alarm would have that effect. It is, however, the common experience of medical men that especially in surgical cases sanguine have a great advantage over despondent patients, and that to abandon the expectation of recovery is about the worst thing which anybody anxious for recovery can do.

Sir Astley Cooper indeed was always reluctant to perform an operation where the subject to be submitted to it was apprehensive of a fatal result. When patients had made up their minds that they would not recover, they seemed to him to lose their recuperative power.—London World.

Blake's Canadian Oratory.

Mr. Blake is unquestionably a man of great capacity, and he is a ready debater. His utterances, however, have the merits and demerits of transatlantic oratory. He was too diffuse, and he piled word on word in his sentences with needless redundancy. And the sentences! Never yet have I heard such lengthy ones. I sat through three minutes of one; then I withdrew to smoke a cigarette. When I returned, so far as I could learn, the sentence was not yet concluded.—London Truth.

Full of Peril.

Are there diseases which, beginning with an apparently trivial inactivity of the kidneys or bladder, terminate in Bright's disease, diabetes and cystitis. The first two not only interrupt the functions of the renal organs, but destroy their structure with as much certainty as a building on corruption does that of the human body. Bright's disease is an excellent example, promoting the activity of these organs without over exciting them, thus averting the deadly malady in which their inaction is so prone to culminate. The removal from the blood of impurities which the kidneys should, but do not, when inactive, remove, is another important effect of this inoperable medicated stimulant and diuretic. The Bitters is, in all cases, too, a powerful restorative of vigor and aid to digestion, and cures malarial disease, and banishes liver complaint and constipation.
