BETWEEN THE SHOWERS.

The Salem newspapers should strike next against deadheads and free services.

Take THE JOURNAL. It is proof against the blues, dyspepsia and business failures.

Grover Cleveland and his people are still struggling with little matters like finance, tariff, etc.

Salem has a Humane society, a Woman's club and a Ministers' strike all going on at once today.

If the railroads get to quarrelling we will all stand a fair chance of going to the world's fair.

Next some one will be objecting to a Salem policeman entering a saloon or attending Sabbath school.

Cyclopes are coming so frequent from the East that we have exhausted our vocabulary of headlines.

There is a great deal of latent enthusiasm for fruit growing and all that is needed is to turn on the button.

When Salem's leading criminal lawyer gets to championing a Japanese woman's virtue he grows fairly eloquent.

Cholera does not catch any of the royal families of Europe. They must all keep themselves stocked with Kentucky bourbon.

The Salem ministers union that is on strike probably rely on the passage where it reads: If the Lord is for us who can be against us?

That Oregon Pacific extension and branch lines through this rich valley, to Salem and Astoria would mean a valuable transcontinental system.

An Albany paper graciously says for once in its life: The receipts of the Salem postoffice for the past year were $19,862.12, a fine showing for the capital city.

Albany journalism doesn't seem to have any entertainment much except to attend free church societies and experience an occasional pang of jealousy at Salem.

Superintendent Downing can handle several hundred convicts easy as rolling off a log. But when he tackles Salem's striking ministerial union he has quite a different job.

Miss Mabel Jenness says the size of women's brains who adopt crinolines will be in inverse ratio to the size of hoops. Level-headed Jenness. - Albany Democrat.

The proposed dog ordinance would simply enrich the city of Salem by enabling everybody that wanted to get rid of a dog to unload here and put all the costs on the city.

Gentlemen who have wives or daughters should not fail to attend Miss Jenness' reception tonight. It will enable them to purchase some beautiful new dresses for their dear ones.

The ladies say dogs are not half as big a nuisance as men standing in front of grocery stores fingering the fruit and raising pools of tobacco spit on the walks for them to wipe up with their dresses.

Does the city council want five hundred dogs on its hands and pay the colossal expense of capturing, feeding, advertising, selling, killing and "sterring their remains? Then pass the dog ordinance.

If Oregon district attorneys cannot find any murderers, rapists, burglars, or horse-thieves to recommend to executive clemency, an enterprising public prosecutor could interrupt the blues in the pardoning business by endorsing an application for the only woman in the state prison for cutting up an old harness.

On account of the rain Miss Jenness, the talented dress reformer, only had a small audience at Albany. An immense audience, though, went through the same rain the same evening to hear Miss Anderson, the missionary from India, tell all about the black legged blues who do not wear corsets or anything else.

the latent happiness in-dwelling in a Hawkeye bosom.

The Telegram considers Whitelaw Reid, who is to visit Portland, "a thoroughly self-made man." He got two millions for marrying old man Mills' daughter and converted the New York Tribune into a personal organ of the Goulds and Vanderbilts. Of course he is self-made. The American people should all bow down and worship.

WOODBURN NEWS.

Dr. Quick of Aurora will locate in Woodburn in the near future.

A. Welch one of our leading dry goods merchants will build a dwelling soon.

The Episcopals of this town will erect a church as all the money is subscribed.

The little four-year-old daughter of Rev. Thompson accidentally took a teaspoonful of tincture of acetone and was immediately brought to the drug-store of A. L. Cornwall where Dr. Shorey and Guss were notified and by prompt treatment managed to place the little one out of danger.

COMING TO SALEM.—One of our sergeons of the National Surgical Institute, which is established at 319 Bush street, San Francisco, will be in Wilamette hotel, Salem, Thursday and Friday, April 27th and 28th. This institute is especially devoted to the treatment of curvature of the spine, diseases of the hip and knee joint, crooked limbs, club feet and all bodily deformities. Their success in treating these troubles as well as nasal catarrh and all chronic diseases has made for the institute a national reputation. All persons who are suffering from any manner of disease or deformity, or who have children or friends so suffering, should not fail to take advantage of this opportunity for relief. Ask your postmaster for circulars. This institute received the gold medal at the world's fair for the best apparatus and methods of treatment in the world. Thousands of references will be given on application.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Halls Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Halls' Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best blood purifiers, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

An Unpardonable Offense.

A young woman condemns herself in the eyes of good society who is observed to enter alone with a young man a place for public refreshment, be the restaurant or tearoom ever so select. Bred under other conditions of a society so necessarily varying as that in our broad America, a stranger visiting New York, for instance, might readily and innocently make a mistake of this nature, and blush at finding herself condemned for it. In the same category of offenses is ranked that of maidens visiting places of public amusement under the escort of young men alone.

Many parts of the south and west allow this to be done with the smiling consent of good society, but in eastern cities it is considered a violation of the code of good form, and for the comfort, if not the convenience, of the girl considering it, had better be ranked among the lost privileges upon which social evolution may look back with fond regret.—Mrs. Burton Harrison in Ladies' Home Journal.

Mr. Emerson Knew What He Wanted.

"Those who know Mr. Emerson best," said Miss Louisa M. Alcott, "were assured that what seemed the decline of his faculties in his latter years was largely but a seeming. It was only weeds he could not command at will. His very forgetfulness of the names of things would often give occasion for a flash of his quaint, shrewd wit. I remember once he started for his usual walk, when a light shower came up, and he returned for the wit of his umbrella.

"He could not remember the word umbrella, and we, who had not noticed the shower, had no clue to what he was searching for. Another walking stick was brought him, another hat, a fresh kerchief, only to be refused with that perplexed shake of the head. 'I want,' said he at last—'I want—that thing—that your friends always borrow—and never—bring back! Could any one fail to recognize that description?'"—Boston Transcript.

A POOR GIRL'S AFFLICTION.

How She Was Cured by Electricity

SALEM, Or., April 13, 1893.

TO THE AFFLICTED: I would say, in justice to Dr. Barton, that I went to him about 5 years since, for a loathsome discharge of the ears and deafness, and in less than one month I was cured sound and well, with electrical and medical treatment. I remained so for 2 or 3 years, when I received a severe slap from a child on the ear, which gave me a severe pain in the ear, and caused an abscess which has discharged profusely, and deafness ever since, for two years or more. I went to him again about 4 weeks since and he has cured me by the same treatment, for which I feel very thankful. Refer to me at 317 College street, Lena Stanfield. Conrad Snowden will vouch for the same.

The Drs. will treat the poor free—except medicines—from 9 to 10 a. m. daily and those who are able to pay, will receive medical or electrical treatment at $5 a month for each disease or in that proportion as the cases may need, surgical and special diseases excepted. Consultation free. No cases taken if not deemed curable or improvable.

Office hours from 10 to 5 daily; evenings, 7 to 8; Sundays 10 to 12. All curable chronic, acute and private diseases, catarrh and deafness are confidentially and successfully treated. Circulars and question list sent free. Most cases can receive home treatment after a visit to the doctor's office.

Dra. office 310 Commercial street, Salem, Or., room 11.

"Love and smoke are unable to conceal themselves," and so it is with catarrh. No man suffering from this loathsome disease, can conceal the fact from the world. No matter how cultured, learned, social or brilliant he is—while his friends may be polite enough to dissemble their real feelings—his very company is loathsome. What a blessing it would be to humanity, if every person afflicted with catarrh in the head could only know that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will positively and permanently cure the worst case.

He manufactures guarantee to cure every case or forfeit $500. The remedy is pleasant to use, and costs only 50 cents.

Why the Barber Was Silent.

A distinctive feature of one of the luxurious barber shops in the dry goods district is a razor wielder who can out-talk the traditional talkative barber. His tongue is seldom idle when he is at work, and were it not for the fact that he is a barber of uncommon skill and neatness he would have been banished from the shop long ago. As it is, most of the customers put up with his chatter good naturedly, and some of them encourage him to talk out of parmesan chieft. One day last week an overworked and weary "head of a department" in a large dry goods house hurried into this particular shop for a quick shave. An involuntary shudder shook his frame when he saw that the only vacant chair belonged to the talkative barber.

He nervously for the ordeal and was greatly surprised when the barber said nothing to him as he took his seat. His astonishment increased when he found that the usually loquacious artist was actually shaving him without saying a word. The job was done quickly and neatly, and when the barber had finished the customer jumped up and exclaimed enthusiastically: "By Jove, that is the most restful shave I ever had. Here's a quarter for you. You seem to have turned over a new leaf."

The knight of the razor shook his head gloomily and muttered: "Can't talk. Burned mouth with carbolic acid. Thought it was sherry wine."—New York Times.

Be Ready For the Emergency.

Good luck is desirable even when you have done your best to succeed, but remember that the most favorable circumstances or strokes of fortune are of little value unless you have prepared yourself to take advantage of them. Of what advantage would Hayne's fiery speech have been to Daniel Webster if he had not, with the instinct of genius, long before equipped himself for the assault which he repelled with such crushing energy? Had he not previously weighed and refuted in his own mind the charges of his opponent, his reply, instead of ranking among the greatest masterpieces of oratory, might have only revealed his own weakness. Thousands of men had seen the prints of a horse's hoofs in the soil before Faust discovered by them the art of printing.—William Mathews in Harper's Young People.

An Engineering Feat at Sea.

There have been some wonderful things done by engineers at sea which have been lost sight of. One is called to mind by a friend, and the hero is still alive to attest to the particulars: Richard Peck was at one time engineer of the City of Vera Cruz. This vessel had only a single engine, and while coming up the coast south of Hatteras on one of her trips from Havana the piston broke in three pieces. This was a disaster that would have made many men consider their ship helpless, but Mr. Peck succeeded after 24 hours' work in patching up that piston so that it was strong enough and true enough to connect with the machinery and bring the ship into port at the rate of six miles an hour.—Marine Journal.

An Impertinent Bus Driver.

The driver of a royal blue bus was being censured pretty severely by an old lady for having neglected to stop his bus at the exact spot wished for.

HOW STEPHENS ESCAPED.

Success of a Daring Plot to Rescue the Leader of the Fenians.

The story of the escape of James Stephens, the head and front of the Fenian brotherhood in Ireland in 1865, from Richmond prison, Dublin, will bear retelling. Two men were chiefly concerned in the affair, one named Breslin, the hospital warden, and the other Byrne, a night watchman. Breslin procured an impression of the key which opened Stephens' cell, and which always hung on a nail in the governor's safe. He had to distract the governor's attention, steal the key, at the same time putting another in its place, get the impression and then return the key to its nail.

The time came for making the escape, and the few moments were all too short. It was a dark night, and the storm howled furiously. Most discouraging of all, the ladder provided for scaling the wall proved too short. This fact seemed to promise absolute disaster. The wall was 20 feet high, and Stephens could not possibly reach its top. Breslin, in an agony of haste, brought a table from the dining room and placed the ladder on it. It was still too short, and the prisoner had to descend again.

The rescuers, who were in as great danger as the prisoner, grew almost wild with apprehension. Another table was procured, and again Stephens made the ascent, and this time after a desperate struggle succeeded in getting outside the wall. Once there he had to jump 20 feet into the darkness, having no idea where he should land nor whether it would be with broken limbs or neck. He let go his hold of the wall and fell, fortunately striking soft ground. Meanwhile Byrne and Breslin had been obliged to return to their duties. Stephens now found himself in a garden surrounded by another wall 20 feet high.

Over this wall Breslin had told him to throw a stone as a signal to 11 armed men who were waiting outside to receive him. Now, a score of smaller difficulties beset him. He could not find the garden walls and groped about in vain for a stone. At length he reached the wall and threw over a handful of gravel, whereupon a rope with a weight attached was tossed over to him. He quickly climbed the wall and soon found himself in the arms of his joyful body guard, who conducted him to a house within sight of the jail, where he remained 14 days.

He afterward went to a fashionable boarding house in the finest part of Dublin and spent two months, and finally, when the hue and cry for his capture had somewhat subsided, took ship from Ireland.—Manchester Times.

The Legend of Killarney.

Like many other lakes those of Killarney have legendary origin—an enchanted fountain, the spring head of which, if left unclosed at certain times, would inundate the district. One of these legends we give in the words of the Halls. It "throws the responsibility of the awful event on a fair young peasant girl, who was wont to meet her lover—a stranger ignorant of the mystic spell—by the fountain side.

"One night they were lulled to sleep by the music of its flow. At daybreak the girl awoke, screaming, 'The well! the well!' It was then too late. The water was rushing forth and overtook them as they ran. They were drowned and involved in their fate the inhabitants of the district." The people still believe that the submerged houses and their inhabitants live beneath and are at times visible to those who stray along the water-side.—Our Own Country.

Some Historic Places. The walls of Kilmolman castle, built by Raleigh for Spencer, are still standing. The state drawing room in which the poet is said to have written the "Faery Queen" is used as a stable, and a cow touches the opposite walls with her horns and tail.

The castle of Chillon, commanding an important mountain pass, was for ages a favorite fortress of the dukes of Savoy. The stranger passes through the dungeons below the lake where Bonivard was chained and where other prisoners starved to death up to the unaired, damp little rooms above, and is tempted to think that the royal dukes were not much more comfortably housed than their enemies.

"But," argues the triumphant forger, "if your houses are large and luxurious, with modern appliances, think of the immortal deeds which enabled these cramped closets and narrow closets!"

Not all the courage of men is spent; not all the laurel crowns have been won. Smith, of New York, or Jones, of Tacoma, in his comfortable, commonplace home, is quite as likely to justify his right to live by lofty aims and noble acts as was any Sidney or Bourbon.—Youth's Companion.

Overexercise. Physicians are protesting against the overexercise taken by the slender, high strung people who would better be holding on to what little flesh they have, while it is next to impossible to stir up the lazy, heavy class to exert themselves enough to relieve them of their superfluous bulk. Nature does not safely guide us in this particular. Thin people are moved to be active and fleshy people to be lazy. The case calls for use of that brain power that plans and reasons and proves us higher than the monkey.—Newport News.

After Diphtheria Paralysis of the Throat—Numbness and Weakness. Perfect Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. C. S. Southwick, North Madison, Ohio.

"My wife and three children were attacked with diphtheria at the same time. After serious illness the greatest danger was safely passed, but they were all left with Paralysis of the Throat, and with my wife it also affected her limbs. Her arms were numb to the shoulders, accompanied with a prickling sensation. It was so difficult for her to swallow, it seemed as if she must starve. The children were in a similar condition. Physicians were greatly perplexed and said it was very critical with my wife, as she was more than likely to have paralysis at any time, and if so it would be very doubtful if she survived. Finally a friend suggested Hood's Sarsaparilla. Although we had not the slightest faith, we were so discouraged that we were ready to try anything. I got a bottle and began giving it to them.

Words are Feeble to express the gratification we all felt at the end of a week to find an improvement. When they had finished three bottles I could not see but they were as well as previous to their sickness. The numbness and paralysis entirely disappeared. There was no trouble.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is in feating, beyond apparent inability to get enough to eat. The neighbors all know of this case and all think it wonderful, as do the doctors." C. S. SOUTHWICK, Grocer and Notary Public, North Madison, Ohio.
