Rose, alias Carter, who is under sentence to be hanged at Mount Vernon, Missouri, on the 14th inst. Rose was arrested in this city, on the East Side, several weeks ago by Detective Simmons and City Marchal Minto, of Salem, for being a fugitive from justice. He was identified by a visiting Missourian as being C. R. Carter, who escaped from prison in Mount Vernon, while awaiting execution. he having been convicted of the crime of murder. In order to make his escape he shot the warden, and for six years nothing was heard of him until he was arrested in this city. While here he went under the name of R. C. Rose, and married a highly respected young lady on the East Side. He was a devout church member, and was on his way to services when taken into custody by the officers. His conduct here was most exemplary, and he followed the occupation of contractor. was gone Carter confessed to being the tion. man wanted.

His sentence was set, after being renewed, for April 14, but Governor Stone was prevailed upon to extend it for a month. The peculiar cordial brewed by thing." The peculiar cordial brewed by the native women is usually the "some-thing" offered, drunk out of a cocca shell beautifully polished. At the king's pio-nics, fetes of which the monarch is very fond, it is imperative to drain your drink-ing vessel, and as the cordial is very ex-hilarating this, in the case of weak head-ed visiting women, is sometimes disas-trons.

"I went to a tea while there," said the woman in addition, "which Robert Louis Stevenson gave. He is thoroughly Samoanized, and we all sat on mats on his piazzas, he cross legged, exactly like the natives. When I returned the hospitality, I provided bamboo seats and little tables, but Mr. Stevenson would have none of them, choosing a mat instead, though his courtesy is such that he apologized for adhering to a custom in my house which I had not adopted. I saw him frequently, and he seemed well, except for an ashen appearance of the face at times that is quite startling. He is charmed with that corner of the world."
