DAILY WEATHER FORECAST.

PORTLAND, May 13. - Saturday, fair, followed by rain Saturday night. Sunday occasional light rain; cooler. U. S. WEATHER BUREAU.

THE OREGON ROSTER.—The proceedings of the 12th annual encampment of the Oregon G. A. R. held at Pendleton April 12, 13, has been issued very promptly by Assistant Adjutant General D. H. Turner, of Portland. It is a very handsome book of nearly 200 pages, got up in excellent clerical and literary style as to contents and matter. The roster of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans and Ladies' Aid Society have proper positions. It is a valuable historical souvenir of the Patriotic orders in this state.

A "PERSECUTION."—When it comes to a tilt between a real estate man and a newspaper it is more than likely to result in the defeat of the manipulator of land values, especially if his moral foundation is a trifle shaky. Instance, the Shaw persecution of the Salem Journal.—Newberg Graphic. That paper puts it right. It was an attempted "persecution" of the JOURNAL. The JOURNAL could stand about forty more such "persecutions" to good advantage. In fact it would pay the highest market price for a few dozen well assorted hand-painted things of that kind if they are lying around loose.

SPRING FLOWERS.—Yellow, the color of perfection, that all children love so well, continues to predominate in the wealth of spring flowers that cover hill, valley and roadside. One of the innumerable throng of the buttercup family has just come on that is larger than the most common of all, that makes the uncultivated fields resemble the far famed golden paved streets of the New Jerusalem. It is mistaken by many people for the Escholtzia Californica, or California poppy, which is not out yet, but is due in June. It blooms all summer until late in the fall, where it does not dry out too soon.

MONTHLY MEETING.—On Monday evening next, will occur the regular monthly business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. in the parlors of the association. Selections on Mandolin and guitar by Messrs. Reinscher and Rogers will be rendered. Light refreshments served and a general profitable good time can be expected. All active members are requested to be present.

SPRINKLING.—The dust had become very oppressive to merchants, but this morning the street sprinkler came to their relief. It is doing good work, and Mr. Watt, the new proprietor is to be congratulated by all for the improvement.

KELLER & SONS' CORNER.

There is a report current on the streets that we carry the largest stock of furniture in the city and that our prices are more reasonable than other dealers. We submit to these charges with pardonable pride. The report is true. Our sales book indicates the magnitude of our business. We are thoroughly equipped to do a land office trade. Come in and leave your order. We sell a fine pillow sham holder for 50 cents. How many do you want? Our kitchen treasures give the best of satisfaction.

We control the sale of the mantle folding bed that we ask $15.00 for. Sales are booming.

You like our picture framing, don't you? They all tell us the same. Our picture framer is a good natured fellow and understands every detail of fine work. Bring in your orders.

THE OREGON SOLDIER'S HOME.

Constitution Ours No Figure as Against a Prejudiced Board.

The suit brought by Mr. Sherman to test the question of the legality of locating the Soldier's Home at Roseburg is not a fight of Salem people upon any other city of the state. The suit is brought by Mr. Sherman alone, by a citizen and Grand Army man, and not by concerted action of any element of people of this city, private or public, fraternal or otherwise. In common with other citizens he has respect for the constitution and business methods. He has no more interest than any other citizen of Oregon in the proper legal establishment of the Home. If it is to be a state institution at all there should be no cloud upon its title, as such cloud would make it a miserable object of charity and entitled to no respect. Aside from all constitutional grounds, and the court decisions upon that matter are all one way, there is a real protest arising all over the state at the manner in which the board was created and the way it has set about to locate the home at Roseburg, as against the rights of the rest of the state. These objections are stated in the Coquille City Herald very clearly as follows:

A PROTEST. "When the board was looking at the various sites for the soldiers' home they restricted their duty to Roseburg and vicinity alone; they failed to advertise for competing bids, and then rejected such as were tendered from Salem, Tillamook, Bandon and other points in the state, preferring to use up the appropriation, which was subject to the necessity for its use, to purchase a small 40-acre tract of wild land on the suburbs of Roseburg, than to accept a donation of six times that amount and the lumber to construct the home at Bandon and thus saving the appropriations for purposes of adornment and conveniences. There were other points in the state that would have donated a site, but all have been ruled out. The board has utterly failed, to our mind, to do a legitimate business transaction—do for the institution and for the public as they would do for themselves. If the land was to be paid for and the fund exhausted merely to enhance values of surrounding property at Roseburg and create a trade for the merchants there—give Roseburg "her first big plum," as the Review has frequently asserted—then, of course, the board has been efficient; but if it was for the higher and nobler obligation of patriotic duty, an act of state pride and true philanthropy, then the board would have been actuated by the same spirit and sought to serve the best interests of the donors—the people of the state—and the heroes whose sacrifices have called it forth.

"Then, too, Salem, Albany, Tillamook, Yaquina, Bandon and other communities would have been given an equal chance to manifest their patriotism and competed for the location of the charge in their midst. "The design for the building is also approved without a competition—a pet local architect furnishing the plan and estimates. And now we suppose some one local firm will be awarded the contract for construction of the building. Thus have all usages been set at naught and the public deprived of its just protection."

IT BELONGS TO THE INDIANS. The land, however, belongs to the Indians and they claim the right to otherwise do with it as they see fit. If they desire to build houses upon it they claim that they have the right to do so. If they wish to plow it they claim that they have a right. In fact, the Indians simply claim that they can use the land as they see fit, and if they wish to build a railroad upon it the government cannot stop them. The Indians are building the road for Colonel Ross, and if they are forced to quit they will, according to some lawyers, have good cause for damages against the government. No matter what the outcome may be, there will be many interesting and important legal points raised if the controversy gets into the courts.

COLONEL ROSS TALKS. When Colonel Ross was seen he said: "If the United States troops come we will find out, by law or otherwise, whether we, as American citizens, have the right to go ahead and improve the country. Times are hard, and if every man that has loose money, or who has influence in inducing outside capital to invest a few million dollars in railroad building and the improvement of the country, would assist us, they would be great benefactors to the large number of laboring men in the country now unemployed, as well as to the people in general. I am going as far as I can in trying to pull out the plug of hard times, and in setting the ball of prosperity rolling now instead of waiting for perhaps a long and uncertain time—maybe years. If all join with me we will see a change for the better, and that soon. I hope these things will set the people to thinking, so we may all act together."

THE PUYALLUP RESERVATION.

War Between Indian and Regular Troops Imminent.

Portland Telegram: Company F, Fourteenth Infantry, arrived in Portland at 8 o'clock Friday from Vancouver, Wash., on their way to Puyallup, where they are required to prevent depredations on Uncle Sam's lands.

The company consisted of 90 men under the command of Captain Carpenter. They remained at the depot until the Northern Pacific train was ready to leave, when they left for Puyallup, where they will prevent, by force, if necessary, the invasion of the Puyallup Indian reservation by a force of men under the supervision of Frank C. Ross, a railroad builder.

The sight of a warlike body of men in the streets of Portland, armed to the teeth, and ready for blood if necessary, excited no small amount of attention this morning. At the depot quite a crowd had assembled, out of curiosity to see how they looked. They appeared well prepared for service and wore their fatigue uniforms. All useless appendage had been left behind, but the men were prepared to make a long stay of it if necessary. The sight of the field uniforms, tents, baggage, leggings, cartridge-belts, haversacks and canteens, and the general rough-and-ready appearance of the men stirred the blood of an old Grand Army man who was at the depot, and he immediately regaled a small group of hearers with accounts of similar scenes in the days of '61, the troops were issued 40 rounds of ammunition, tent equipment and rations before leaving Vancouver, and are well prepared for a campaign.

Her lectures are wonderfully entertaining and instructive.

Green in that county when she was 18. Her maiden name was Drummonds. She then lived successively in Roan county, Tenn., and in Crawford county, Arkansas. In 1868 she came to Salem and lived for a time with her son-in-law, Wm. Patty, near the Little Central school house. She was married twice and had nine children by her first husband. Those living are Mrs. S. D. Brown, of North Salem, L. Green, of Long Creek, eastern Oregon, and Mrs. Sarah E. Howlen, of eastern Oregon. The funeral services were held at the residence at 10 a. m. today and the remains interred in the Lee Mission cemetery.

"I Am So Tired"

Is a common expression at this season. There is a certain bracing effect in cold air which is lost when the weather grows warmer; and when Nature is renewing her youth, her admirers feel dull, sluggish and tired. This condition is owing mainly to the impure condition of the blood, and its failure to supply healthy tissue to the various organs of the body. It is remarkable how susceptible the system is to the help to be derived from a good medicine at this season. Possessing just those purifying building-up qualities which the body craves. Hood's Sarsaparilla soon overcomes that tired feeling, restores the appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, imparts a vigorous health. Its thousands of friends as with one voice declare "It Makes the Weak Strong."
