PARLY MARRIAGES IN ENGUAND.

Men Have Grown Store "Prenant."
The registran general has reported The registran general has reported upon the statistics of marriage during the past year, and already the fools of philosophy are rejoicing, for it is seen that the age of marriage continues to rise; that the time of life whereat despair becomes the proper emotion of the unwedded grows annually more mature. But, above all, we are told, young memmarry later now than of old, because they are vestly more prudent than they are vestly more prudent than their fathers were. They will not marry a lump of undeveloped possi-bilities, but wait until a few years have made it possible to discern at least some faint foreshadowing of the woman that is to be. Also they are amazingly consider-

Also they are amazingly considerate. They will not take a girl out of a home rendered comfortable at least by her father's 30 years of toil to manage a little semidetached villa upon a very limited income. Many a life (they have heard say) has been altogether ruined because two young people accestemed to comfort and a reasonable extravagance have found themselves confined in a small house, with a small income and the need of rigid economy. And so our wise youths, as the statistics demonstrate, will work until they have made a position of some sort and can offer to sition of some sort and can offer to their wives at least an imitation of the comforts they had in their fa-thers' houses. Doubtless they are vastly prudent, and yet—he was a wiser man who said, "England will be happy when her people marry

It is a hard saying perhaps and likely to be pushed aside as opposed at once to the growing practice of our race and to the teaching of philosophy. Yet is it worth interpreting, for though imprudent marriages are a most fruitful source of evil, the married state is yet in many ways the best both for the individual and for the state.

The worst of the wild oats plan is that though the sower and his children must reap, the unhappy nation follows after and gleans. There would be less of that if Englishmen married young, and as to "prudence," which makes the practice increasingly the other way, we should not hear so much spoken of it if we were but granted a little more common sense. For common sense would go to the root of the matter and do away with the need for a long course of prudence by enforc ing recognition of the essential truth. And the truth is this, that work—the labor which brings houses and cattle and pays a multitude of servants—is none other than the primal curse, and that the only method whereby a man may become wealthy is by diminishing his desires and needs. young man postpones marriage be time to see the snake come forth and cause his soul is set on luxuries. These at best are capable of affording no extraordinary pleasure, and even that which might be extracted from them he never enjoys, for he has not realized that leisure is in it-self a form of wealth. He is the bond slave of his foolish ambitions and labors perpetually after that which he allows himself no time to est. - National Observer.

The Room In Ship Cabins.

In most modern ships everything seems ascrificed to big social halls—smoking and music rooms, huge saloons, etc. The modern sleeping cabin one can barely swing a kitten in, and worst of all, there is in most ships not a place to put away a thing. imagine the discomfort on a voyage to Australia of having to drag out one's trunk every time one wants a handkerchief or change of clothes. The Messageries Maritimes and the new North German bloyd boats supply wardrobe cupboard and drawers in large, airy cabins. In the English boats we are going backward, the older boats of our leading companies having better cabin accommodation than the new. We are a long suffering people, and it seems incredible the public stand this unnecessary discomfort.-London Truth.

Odd Names In Delaware.

Delaware has a curious collection of odd surnames. There is a family of Colts in Kent county. The Peppers and Mustards have long lived neighbors in Sussex, and there are Peaches in Newcastle county, inausciously settled north of the peach belt. One man named his three sons for the several counties of the state, and Delaware is an occasional Christian name. A girl whose name was Leonora Missouri Cannon provoked from a stranger the prompt declara-tion that the name was sentimental, patriotic and explosive.—New York Sun.

Some Claver Variations.

It is said that the first person to atilise a clover remark for quotation is entitled to as much credit as the is entitled to as much credit as the person who wrote it, and often a play upon a phrase is as bright as the original. Oliver Hereford, the talented illustrator and son of Rev. Brooke Hereford, is noted for his droll variations upon old fashioned proverba, and a few recent examples are worth repeating. Who that has ever been photographed, with all that it implies, could fail to appreciate this:

"You may lead a man to the photographer's, but you can't make him smile." And what heartfelt assent will be given by many a man—and perhaps some women, too. "A little perhaps some women, too. "A little widow is a dangerous thing." Somewhat in the same vein was his characterization on the last day of the week of an egg that failed to please his taste, as "a Saturday night egg," explaining when asked, "Because it has tried all the week to be good." We may praise the stage, the concert platform, the founder of colleges and professorships, but the real benefac-tor to mankind is he who goes through life with a jest on his lips.—Boston

Dangerous Amminition.

A strange war story comes from New Zealand. Some years ago Sir John Gorst lived in Waikato and ed-

John Gorst lived in Waikate and edited the Maori newspaper. To Hakioi. The paper was printed and published near the scene of the hot test fighting of the war then raging. During the struggle the Maoris ran short of ammunition, and having no ball for their 14-pound guns they loaded them with shop weights confiscated from neighboring shopkeepers. This source of supply was soon exhausted.

Then a raid was made on The Hakioi office, and their guns were charged with type and stereo blocks. This new ammunition, so the story goes, proved very effective.

One of the white invaders was injured by a patent medicine advertisement, another was invalided by a "church bazaar announcement," a third lost a leg through a solid leader on the land bill, and Sir John, who had taken refuge with the British troops, had a narrow escape from being hit with one of his own poems.— Exchange.

An Unjointed Snake. Si Hawkins, he of Oak Hall, is not given to seeing snakes and especially on the Sabbath, but on Sunday afternoon while riding home from his farm he came upon a rare curiosity in the way of a jointed snake. The reptile was lying near the road, and a sharp cut from Mr. Hawkins' whip caused it to fall in a dozen pieces some 3 inches in length each. The head, with about a foot of the Most young men could marry with body attached, ran into the bushes small delay if they were content to and escaped, while the remaining have all the necessities and most of sections lay in the road apparently the comforts of life; the modern dead. Mr. Hawkins waited some couple himself together again as ointed snakes do, but this one failing to make his appearance the sec-tions in the road were picked up and brought to town as curiosities. This is the first jointed snake that has been seen here in years, and the pieces attracted attention.—Americus Times-Recorder.

> Cost of transportation is the crying evil in California. The people feel embarrassed and cramped in their energies and are struggling for relief. The railroads across the continent were constructed at great cost, and their maintenance and operation are and always will be expensive. Com-plaints of the excessive rates of trans-portation are universal. Our grain and especially our fruits and wines are cut off from the markets of our own country by the competition of foreigners, who can produce more cheaply and are subject to less cost for transportation. The transportation problem is among the greatest which now confronts the American people.—Richard H. McDonald, Jr., in Californian.

> Pine oil and pine cones are now be-ing imported from Norway, to be sold as disinfectants against a possible cholera scare. The cone is p in the mouth of a sort of lamp, and the latter contains the oil. A wick communicates with the cone, and this is sufficiently porous to permit the odor of the oil to escape. Pine oil is much used in Italy as a disin-fectant in cases of roman fever. Its penetrating odor is unpleasant to most persons, though some learn to like it.—New York Sun.

"A little wurrum," said Carl. The teacher smiled. "Who can give me the name of another animal?" Carl's hand fairly "wiggled" with excitement. "Well, Carl?" "Another little wurrum?"—Youth's Companion.

The impleeper's daughter said, "Nothing of the kind; it is all descent and most of it steep."

Still the coachman was so much frightened that he would not go on without the man. I therefore told the stranger that he might go with us on these terms: If there proved to be an ascent, I would pay him a fixed sum; if nothing but down hill, I would not.

He went on, and all was rapid down hill. When, therefore, he took off his horses at the point where his homeward way diverged, I refused to pay him, and he became violent and

The highest minister of the realm could not have given a more prompt or better judgment or certainly a cheaper, for the good man refused to receive anything for his trouble, expressed his satisfaction in being able to prevent imposition on a stranger, and only begged that if we saw a countryman of his in similar need we would help him if we could.—Rural Life in Germany.

Judging Wholly by Appearances That things are not always what incident which actually occurred at a swell boarding house over on Broad way. Not long ago there arrived a new boarder. He was a man of striking appearance. He had the face and head of a genius. The girls were very much taken up with him, and speculations were rife as to whether he was a poet or a musician. His long locks led them to the conclusion that he must be a poet. He was of a retiring nature and said little, but they were all on tiptoe of expectation, feeling sure that when he did say something it would be a rare treat. One day they were at dinner, and no one was saying a word, when the new boarder said:

A Blow at Woman's Bights.

In our own country concealment of age is regarded as a harmless fiction, and the practice is supposed to be rather prevalent among women who are more than 25 and under 75. In Austria a more serious view is taken of this offense. By a recent decree of their courts of law a marriage was annulled on the husband showing that the bride had concealed the exact number of years that had passed over her head. She pretended to be 15 years younger than she really was.—London News.

Plates for dessert with miniatures of dear friends in medallions upon these is a late caprice with some of the persons who are for anything if it's new. This may be well enough for the beginning of the course, but the last impression of a cherished face looking through various sticky or liquid "remains" is not a pleasant one.—New York Times.

of Fremont, Mich., Permanently Cured of Swellings in the Neck

One of the most stubborn forms of Scrofula is that of gottre, which is not only a very distressing disfigurement of the face and neck, but causes great anxiety, because it is liable to develop into the painful and sickening running sore. Hood's Sarasparilla has been Wonderfully Successful in cases of this kind. Acting promptly upon the blood, it eliminates all impurity, and the swelling, thus deprived of its cause and support, soon disappears. Read this:

"To C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"I suffered terribly with swellings in my neck, or goitre, and spent an emermous amount of money for medicines, but to no purpose. I became completely discouraged. I read about Mrs. Anna Sutherland, of

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Ralamazoo, Mich., who had goitre, and who was greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I wrote to her and received an answer fully confirming the printed testimonial. I then commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla myself, and when I had taken two bottles found that my neck had been reduced in size two inches. I was so anytons in know the two inches. I was so anxious to know the effect of the medicine that I used a tape measure every day. In a few weeks I found the swelling very nuch reduced, and I could Breanthe with Perfect Base, which I had not done for years.
