The labor interests of the country received a terrible blow last fall when, under the lead of hired manipulators, the labor organizations took a hand in the presidential election. There is probably more unemployed labor in the country today than for Lilienthal & Company. in ten years before. Innocent women and children suffer for the necessaries of life while labor agitators and walking delegates try to tell the crowds in the beer saloons of the big cities what has struck them. Too feeble to strike, and too numerous to live, the unemployed can study the situation.

Archbishop Dennison's Famous Toast

Here's health to all that we love, Here's health to all that love us, Here's health to all those that love them. That love those that love them That love us,"

Do you notice what a large circle this wish for health includes? and will you notice the reference is not to the winecup, but to a standard medicine, the "Golden Medical Discovery," that can bring health to the large number of friends we each love. True, it is not a "beverage" and does not inebriate, but is a health-giving medicine, a bloodpurifier, liver-invigorator and general tonic—a remedy for billiousness, indi-gestion and stomach troubles. It cures consumption, in its early stages, scrofu-la, bronchitis, and throat diseases.

Delays are dangerous. Take Simmons Liver Regulator in time for dyspepsia, billiousness, and all diseases of the liver.

For the first time in the history of Yakima hop growing English money is here and direct contracts are entered into and advances made. The firm is William Noakes, Son & Collard, of London, who are represented locally by A. C. Campbell & Son. They have made many contracts and are putting cosiderable money in circulation.

Harry Campbell and Louis Lachmund estimate the contracts for this season's hops as follows: Hanson & Co., of Milwaukee, by Charles Carpenter, 800 bales; Lilienthal & Co., of San Francisco, 700 bales; A. C. Campbell & Son, 600 bales; Horst Bros., 500 bales, and A. B. Weed, 500 bales.

> Early Rising In the Metropolis. Two women who spent a week in New York the last of June kept quiet about one of their experiences until a day or two ago, when they confessed the joke too good to keep.

They were aunt and niece and entirely unused to the city. On the morning after their arrival the niece discovered on consulting her watch that they had slept late, as it was 8:20, and waking her aunt the two dressed as fast as possible and started for breakfast.

They had rooms in West Sixteenth street near Fifth avenue and intended to breakfast at the St. Denis. They walked on placidly, struck with the quiet of a great city on a summer's morning and interestedly looking about them till it seemed as if they had accomplished distance enough to reach their destination. The neighborhood, too, had grown very common and shabby, and at last they accosted a workingman whom they met. He laughed when he heard that they

They turned, and having no idea of the actual distance walked all the way east to the hotel, wondering and commenting on the remarkable absence of bustle in the streets.

When they finally reached the restaurant, it was to find it almost deserted, and their inquiry for breakfast met with word that they would have to wait for it

"Wait!" exclaimed the aunt, "why, what time do New Yorkers breakfast?" "Not many," replied the man, "at s quarter past 6." The nearsighted niece had read the watch wrong and had got her aunt and herself up at 20 minutes to 4 o'clock .-New York Times.

The O. P. P. President.

In an article on the scarcity of money one of the leading New York journal remarked "that nothing like such a stringency in money matters had been known but once since the days of the 'O. P. F. president." A reader who "reads and re flects on these things," writes to the editor to inquire who the O. P. F. president was and how the sobriquet was bestowed. In answer to this I will say applied to James Buchanan. He bestowed the nickname upon himself in his annual message to congress in 1859, in which the following expression occurred:

"This advice proceeds from the heart of an old public functionary, one whose services commenced in the last generation, among the wise and conservative statesmen of that day, now nearly all passed away, and whose first and dearest wish is to leave his country tranquil, prosperous, united and powerful."—St. Louis Republic.

Entertaining Visitors

We Americans are proud, and justly so, of our reputation for hospitality, but there is sometimes too much of a good thing, and we are often tempted into an exaggeration of this virtue. In many well meaning hostesses there seems to exist a fear that their guests may find some stray moments during the day for which no entertainment has been provided. The unfortunate guests are kept busy every minute "being entertained" until physically and mentally they are exhausted. Not a few people object to making visits, and simply for the reason that they are never left to themselves, never have any time to occupy as they

English hostesses are much more sensible in this respect. In England a guest in a country house has a good part of the day to dispose of as he or she may fancy, and as a result, a pleasant, home like feeling much to be desired pervades the atmosphere of the house. Neither host nor hostess appears to be laboring to provide perpetual entertainment for their guests, and the latter have plenty of time to write their letters, read their books and enjoy other like peaceful amusements. In a town house a masculine visitor receives a night key as a pleasant intimation he is to go and come as he likes.-New York Tribune.
