THE DEAD GUARDSMAN.

[A tribute paid to Lieutenant Charles E. Nelson, of company A, First Infantry, O. N. G., by his "young recruits."]

"Where is Mr. Nelson, papa? I don't see him any more. Why do you close the shutters? Ah! there's the grape upon the door."

"I just climbed his high chair, papa. And took Hester by the hand. And he says, 'Don't bother, Monte. You're too young to understand.'"

"Why are you all so busy? That you can't attend to me? Mr. Nelson didn't act so. He always took me on his knee."

"And he'd tell me of his soldiers. All about the mummy fight. And arm me with the duster. Call me little soldier and say 'eyes right.'"

"Papa, was Mr. Nelson naughty? Didn't he hide you? I hope you haven't locked him up. As your papa did you?"

Slowly down the father's cheek A single teardrop ran, With trembling hands he clasped him, "Come here, my little soldier man."

"Nelson told you to be brave in battle. To always face the foe; Are you brave to bear great sorrow? Shall I tell you all I know?"

"Not don't hold me, papa. Let me like a soldier stand; Just as my lieutenant placed me, With the duster in my hand."

Hark! I hear the music, And the soldiers' martial tread, Why do you look so solemn? Is my good lieutenant dead?"

"Let me 'break ranks,' papa. Lift me high upon his chair; Why are all the drums so muffled? See his coffin on the casket there."

Slowly dropped the hand that pointed, Brought the duster "to salute," Drew himself up straighter, And for moments he was mute.

"Lift the shutters, papa; Take the grape from off the door; Let me keep the duster, papa, He will play at soldier man no more."

OUTING OVER.

Renewed in Body and Mind, Returning From Oregon's Famous Resorts.

People are now returning at a rapid rate from the seaside and mountain resorts.

The red face, the bronzed hands and ravenous appetites are the characteristics of many valley people who, a few weeks ago left their various occupations with sallow complexions and haggard looks to enjoy a needed rest.

There are few if any countries whose people relish summer outings more than those of the Willamette valley, or that patronize their summer resorts as freely.

Business men and clerks of the East usually take their vacation, but an outing, a real summer outing, such as enjoyed by the hundreds in Oregon, is unknown to them.

With something like 300 miles of sea coast, with its beautiful harbors and numerous attractions, and extending through the state two glorious ranges of mountains whose forests abound in game and streams teem with fish, with her gorgeous scenery and many mineral springs, the temptation is irresistible and summer outings have become a second nature to people of the Willamette valley.

The custom has become so fixed that people have their business so arranged as to take a few days or weeks annual leave without any appreciable loss.

While the summer outing is a luxury it is an actual requirement that is beneficial to all, and indispensable to the business man or woman of care. To visit a resort in Oregon is to throw dull care away, and the change of water, diet, atmosphere, the complete change of environments, the inspiration gathered from the scenic splendors of land or sea is of incalculable benefit. It gives one new life, new energies, new impulses and the business man comes back to his work with a buoyancy of spirit, and the wife and daughter with brighter smiles, and life is rendered altogether more agreeable from a summer's outing.

Then the society of these outings is highly desirable. There are no more social people to be found than Oregonians. They are not clannish and there is very little of the "exclusive" society among them and this is largely due to culture received at outings. The resorts in summer are usually thronged with people who meet on a common level for a common purpose extending acquaintances and enjoying the society of newly made friends. It is not alone the rich that enjoy the ocean breeze or camp at mineral springs in Oregon. Those who don't feel able to deplete their purse by paying out railroad fare, secure a team and the whole family can go to the mountains or seaside and live nearly as cheaply as at home.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy. NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., it hardly ever fails to do its duty. It has never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the stomach and bowels.

SUGGESTED COMMENT.

The Portland Telegram calls this a "drunken congress," and as a Democratic authority it is no doubt posted.

The Baker City Democrat puts it mildly by saying that in his recent speech Dave Hill "did not wholly agree with Cleveland."

The Dispatch says the editor of the Oregonian is one of the directors, so it is said, of the Oregon National bank, which, no doubt, in a measure, accounts for the repeated notices made of the condition of that bank, even if it had to be done at the expense of others.

Possessors of orchards should examine their apple trees now and take steps toward the extermination of the tent caterpillar. This is the proper time to do this. The eggs will be found in a black band around the twigs near the end. Each nest will hatch out next spring into a company of caterpillars that will weave webs or "tents" around the twigs and devour the leaves. Sometimes several rings can be found on a single twig, and by cutting these off now and burning them, whole armies of prospective caterpillars will be destroyed.

The Morning Oregonian says: "Copies of the Congressional Record indicate that nearly all the house speeches were made by the free-coinage men. The repealers didn't want to make speeches." The explanation is plain. The silver men had something to say; the other fellows didn't. The silver men had argument on their side and the others had none. The "repealers" had formed their conspiracy and relied on the purchasing power of gold to carry their measure. Like all conspirators, they wanted to suppress talk and publicity and proceed with their organized plan of robbery.—Telegram.

The people of Oregon who have children of school age will rejoice to learn that the late berated legislators passed one law, at least, that will save them some money. Formerly the county school superintendents held an election every four years for the purpose of deciding upon text books to be used in the public schools of the state for the ensuing four years, but at the last session this law was changed so that elections for this purpose will hereafter be held only every six years. There was to have been an election for this purpose this year but under the new law this was changed and there will be no selection of text books until 1895.—Ex.

The Business Age. Friend—Why didn't you exhibit at the World's fair? Manufacturer—Business, old boy, business. See? "Humph! I don't see." "You are away behind the age. By refusing to exhibit I got half the papers denouncing me, and the other half to defending me, until I've had about $1,000,000 worth of first class advertising, and it hasn't cost me a cent."—New York Weekly.

A Dog From Kentucky. The late Senator Beck always stood up for Kentucky, no matter what the circumstances. A western senator was telling him one day about the superiority of his pointer dog. "That's nothing to the pointers we have in Kentucky," said Beck. "Why, I had a dog that one day as I was walking along the streets of Louisville began to point at a man who was looking in at a shop window. The canine refused to move, and my curiosity being aroused I asked the man his name. 'Partridge,' he replied. I tell you Kentucky pointers can't be excelled."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Willing to Honor Her. Doctor—You say you always burn this lamp in your room all night? Woman—Always. I can't sleep without a lamp. Doctor—My dear madam, I can give you a few simple chemicals which you can easily mix before retiring. They will give off just as much blue poisoning and sleep-inducing gas as a lamp and won't be half so much trouble.—New York Weekly.

Sparring For an Opening. Guest (after struggling valiantly but unavailingly some time with fowl)—Waiter, what kind of a bird is this? "Canvasback duck, sir." "No wonder I couldn't do anything with it. Ran and got me the scissors."—Truth.

Hoots and Shoes. Boots are supposed to have been the invention of the Carlians. They were mentioned by Homer, 907 B. C. Grecian women possessed 23 kinds of footgear, which may be classed as those which cover all the foot up to the ankle and those which simply tied on the top of the foot with wide ribbons or straps. The practice of shoe and sandal wearing can be traced back for some thousands of years and is probably of eastern origin. Frequent mention is made of the shoe in the Bible, from the book of Exodus to the Acts, and there is mention made of a shoe latched as early as the time of Abraham.—Washington Star.

Indulging a Genius. Our ancestors were more indulgent and respectful to the eccentricities of men of genius than are the present generation. Byron was accepted and patiently tolerated when he chose to sit in moody silence throughout a dinner party given in his honor, scowling contemptuously at the delicious plates before him, while he sipped vinegar and munched a cracker.—Youth's Companion.

The Cheapest Form of Traction. Electric traction is cheaper than any form of steam propulsion or the use of horses, and there is little doubt that the passenger traffic of the steam roads will ultimately be largely diverted to the electric roads for short distance travel in all parts of the country.—New York Telegram.

Not a Good Plan. One Rich Father—I think it is the best plan for your son to marry my daughter, and in that way we can keep the money in the family. The Other R. F.—My dear friend, you don't know my son.—Detroit Free Press.

When Queen Victoria travels by rail, she pays the companies 7s. 6d. per mile for herself and first class fare for every one else in the royal train. This is supposed to make good the loss entailed by the temporary stoppage of traffic.

The annual agricultural product of the world is valued at $30,000,000,000. It represents a capital of $234,000,000,000 and occupies the attention of 260,000,000 men.

Hood's Cures

Mr. J. A. Wheeler

"During the War I was taken ill with spinal disease and rheumatism. When I came home my trouble was still with me, and I was confined to my bed, unable to help myself, for 23 months. After taking seven bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I was well, have not been troubled with my old complaints. My wife was in ill health, suffering with headache, dizziness and dyspepsia. She took two bottles of Hood's Pills and is now well and healthy, on the liver and bowels."
