A HUNTING ACCIDENT. Another Man Shot by Mistake and Will Probably Die.

A gentleman who came over from Summit on the Oregon Pacific Saturday, says the Albany Herald, reports the accidental shooting of Thomas Savage by Jack Post, while out hunting near Nashville Thursday. The two young men, with several others, were following a deer which was being run by hounds when they came upon a man that ran up a tree. One of the party shot it but it fatally as I young Savage decided to climb another tree near by so that he could more plainly see it and get a better shot. Just at this time young Post came from another direction and was told there was a man on a tree, and noticing the leaves shaking on the one in which Savage had stationed himself, fired with looking at what he was shooting, though, of course, he did not know that it was a man. At the report of the gun Savage called out and said he was shot. Post then went up and assisted Savage down, as he was unable to do so by himself. The party immediately started for home with the wounded man. They were three miles from the road and for two miles of the distance a trail had to be cut through the brush. On reaching the house of Savage at the Summit a doctor was summoned and it was found the ball of a 44 calibre Winchester rifle had entered the back near the kidney on the left side, ranging upward and was taken out just below the point of the right shoulder blade. No bones were struck in the course of the bullet but the muscles of the back were frightfully torn and the bullet when taken out was badly battered. It certainly seems to have been a very gross piece of carelessness.

Washington Hops.

Payroll Citizen: It is safe to say that Oregon and the Sound will lead the world on quality this season. There have been no drawbacks in these districts this season, and as the excellent old-time quality has been obtained, California and their coast counterparts—the Yakima hops—are not in it by comparison.

Hood's Cures

My little boy had had fainting spells, almost 30, followed by vomiting. We gave him three bottles of Hood's Castoria and he is now as rugged as one could wish to be. His appetite is good, his cheeks are like twin roses and he gains daily. Mrs. DAVID LAMA, Road Village, Palmer, Mass.
