The Milton Bank Robbers.

WALLA WALLA, Nov. 15 .- Six armed parties are now in pursuit of the robbers who made a raid on the bank at Milton yesterday. One is from Milton led by Deputy Sheriff Richie, one is from Athena under Deputy Sheriff Stamped, one from Weston, one from Pendleton under Sheriff Funiss, one from Wallula and one from Walla Walla under Deputy Sheriff Ellingsworth. It is now believed that the robbers passed ity last week. through this city about two hours after the robbery. Persons answering the description were seen by credible wit- visiting in the burg last week. nesses riding very warm horses about ranchers.

FIGHTING ANTICIPATED. It is reported that the robbers are surrounded by a posse at a sheep camp in the brush on Pine creek, fifteen miles west of Milton. A hard fight is anticipated, and the sheriff of Walla Walla Co. has been called upon to furnish an extra posse. Sheriff Gose dispatched a posse the mouth of Pine creek, and another was stationed at Nine Mile bridge

A ROMAN TALE.

Which Might, However, Have Happened In the Present Day. "Ho, Marco!" cried old Whiskerus, "how stack'st thou up today?"

The twain had met one summer morn back in an alleyway. Stern Marco drew his toga close and cast aside his lyre. "I'm out of whack today," he said; with rage I am afire! Oh, may the children of the street play football with my head if I don't lick old Screechius before I go to bed!" "What wrong is charged to Screechins?" old Whiskerus said then. "Methought he was a Roman bold-a man among the men. "And so did I till yesternight," quoth lieve. I went, O friend, and doubted naught-I did not think that he would seek to make a driveling young idiot of felt I'll ne'er forget.

"Methinks I hear that brutal song ring in my poor ears yet. 'Twas that old song which has been used to torture men to death, and Screechius gave it to me, nor stopped to get his breath. Down in a fright; but, Whiskerus, he kept right on and sang with all his might! My tongue was paralyzed with fear, for help I could not call, and there I lay while Screechius sang 'After the Ball!' He mocked my agony, did he. His fat sides shook with mirth. But, ho, he comes! Now he or

I shall be wiped from the earth!" They came together, these two men, and Marco made a swipe as if he meant the dusty street with Screechius to wipe. He strolled in glee upon his neck tore his hair and hide, until his foe in misery for mercy loudly cried. But Marco tied up Screechius into a double knot, and now the Roman children meet and view the fatal spot. They say of Screechius: "Here he died—a like fate will befall all those who insist that men must list unto 'After the Ball.' "-Brook lyn Life.
