British Admirals Who Have Drowned.

Sir George Tryon is the fourth British admiral who has lost his life by shipwreck or disaster unconnected with warfare since the beginning of the last century. In October, 1870, Sir Cloudeley Shovel shared the fate of the crew of the Association, and on Aug. 29, 1783, Admiral Kempenfelt was drowned by the "heeling over" of the Royal George...

The Forty Immortals of London.

Hooty toity! Here comes the great Lady Charles Bessford with the astounding statement that the real London society consists of only 20 or 40 families. She includes in this list those who are there by right and whom nothing can remove as long as their fortunes survive. It would almost seem that the 80 or 40 families who have this great distinction in London would feel lonesome there among the hundreds of men and women who are not entitled to class themselves in fashionable society.

For Evening Company.

Delicate sandwiches are a nice addition to any menu for an evening company. They are generally placed on some fancy dish and passed to the guests by the maid-servant. The ladies are generally provided with seats, but it is not unusual for the men to stand and even assist in serving if the affair is an informal one.

Books With Their Backs to the Wall.

The library in Wimborne Minster is today as perfect a specimen as could anywhere be seen in medieval times of the inverted order of ranging books. Near the middle of the south aisle a door opens into a vestry from which we ascend into the minister library, formerly called the treasure chamber. The volumes, said to number 240, stand on the shelves with the cut edges of their leaves toward the spectator, except some half dozen turned about in modern fashion by accident.

Brief Epitaphs.

In Worcester, England, is a stone erected over the grave of a departed auctioneer of that city, on which "Gone" is inscribed. In a Sussex graveyard, in addition to the initials of the deceased and the date of death, a stone has been inscribed in large letters the words, "He Was." Two of the strangest as well as the shortest epitaphs are "Asleep (as usual), on the tombstone of a large individual by one who knew him well, and "Left one called for" is carved on a gravestone in Cane Hill cemetery, Belfast. A photographer has this inscription over his grave, "Here I lie, taken from life." On the tomb of Charles the Great, first emperor of Germany, are two words only, "Carolo Magno."

SAVING TRUBLE.

"How will we go through this train?" asked one desperado of another. "We want to avoid noise and publicity as far as possible." "That's all right," was the answer. "I've got it fixed."

The Way They Act.

"I hear you are learning the type-writer. What kind have you?" "I think it must be Russian from the spelling I turn out on it."—Indianapolis Journal.
