An old law, which had been forgotten, requires all ships leaving the port of New York to carry a small cannon, two projectiles and 500 yards of line, so that in case the ship should be beached the crew would be able to communicate with the shore. All sailing masters have received notice to comply with the law.

Survival of the Socially Fittest. The benefits of co-operation in the development of man are too well recognized to be denied. Physically weaker than many of the animals that surrounded him, he could not long have survived in a struggle for existence against them had he been forced to continue that struggle alone. Nor could he have attained the mental development upon which so much of his success has depended without contact with his fellows. The most important, if not the necessary, condition of man's success in the struggle for existence is society. Social growth becomes possible only through the survival of the socially fit. In an advancing society this process must ever tend toward the production and preservation of the "ethically best."

Recognition of the rights of others has been equally as important in the evolution of man as self assertion. Indeed, it may be claimed that under the conditions of social life it is a necessary consequence of self assertion. Men could not live long together unless they recognized the right of each to his own and respected it. The survival of a society, like the survival of the individuals composing it, becomes possible only through adaptation to the necessary conditions of life, and it will not be denied by Professor Huxley that morality is essential to social well being.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Value of Drawing. Mr. Thomas Woolner, R. A., tells how Mr. Nasmyth of steam hammer fame once gave him an illustration from personal experience of the value of drawing. Mr. Nasmyth was traveling in Norway, and one day in a wild, out of the way place reached an inn, very hungry, but unable to make the hostess understand his wants by anything he could say. He was considerably perplexed till he happily thought of his pencil. He then carefully drew a dish in perspective, with steam rising from it. Beside this he drew a plate, with a knife and fork, and on the other side of the dish a bottle and a wineglass.

When he had completed this diagram of his wants, the face of the hostess brightened, and she at once left him to execute his design. He then went for a stroll and on returning found the picture complete. There was the bottle, with wineglass beside it; the plate, knife and fork, and the dish covered. So as soon as he sat down his hostess lifted the cover, displaying a fine hot fowl that sent forth a cloud of steam.—London Tit-Bits.

Dolph of Oregon Discusses Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The senate opened with a light attendance in the galleries and on the floor. Dolph presented a petition of the Oregon horticultural society favoring maintenance of present duty on prunes. After morning hour the senate took up Hawaii, and Dolph of Oregon spoke against the president's proposed action. The house met with a light attendance. Twenty thousand copies of the president's message were ordered printed.

THE U. P. PROBLEM.

How the Union Pacific can be Turned Over to Uncle Sam.

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—The news bureau suggests the following reorganization plan for the Union Pacific: The Union Pacific stockholders to surrender the majority control of property to the government, which can be represented by seven directors out of twelve, one director to be appointed each year or hold life positions, subject to removal for cause, to have a liberal salary and no other occupation.

The government to issue $300,000,000 three per cent bonds at par, take up all Union Pacific bonds at average market valuation of three years, ending January 1, '94, pay the government debt which the United States treasury will soon be called upon to pay in full, and leave there from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 of these bonds in the treasury of the Union Pacific, half of which could be used for raising the property to a proper standard for a government road, and half remain in the treasury for future developments, to make these bonds perpetual at 3 per cent, and permit them to be used at par as a basis for national bank circulation.

American Press Opinion. Chicago Times (Dem.) severely condemns the president's position on the Hawaiian question, and says he is to be congratulated on the astuteness with which he has laid out the lines of retreat from an unpopular and untenable position. The general tone of the comment is very unfavorable.

New York World (Dem.) The message as a whole, will not add greatly to Mr. Cleveland's fame as a writer or leader, is a sensible, sincere, patriotic document.

Portland Oregonian, Rep: "To restore the status existing at the time of our forcible intervention" may mean only to withdraw the recognition given the provisional government, or it may mean to replace and maintain the queen upon her throne by force. The first is wholly within the right of the president, the latter would exceed his constitutional power and give a severe shock to our Republican sentiments and national traditions. He would have relieved much public anxiety, shared by many who wish him well, by stating the exact nature and limits of his instructions to Willis. His failure to do so leaves the public to discover what he ordered done by the event, and himself to endure severe popular censure, if it shall transpire that he commanded American troops to make war upon a popular government in a friendly nation and set up a rejected monarchy. The reticence of the message inspires belief that Mr. Cleveland himself has reason to await news from Honolulu with anxiety.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat. (Rep.)—It is on the whole a clear, well-written and business-like document, and, except on the Hawaiian and silver questions, will prove fairly satisfactory to the country. The Hawaiian matter is destined to make trouble for the administration, and Mr. Cleveland appears to have a foreboding of this, but he proposes to adhere to the policy which he has marked out. His views on the financial question are wise.

Washington News. WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The State Department is inclined to question the accuracy of the purported interview with Mr. Willis, advisors of which were received yesterday via Port Townsend. The general drift of opinion among Democratic members of the House seems to be that the tariff bill must be passed, and as speedily as possible.

Opinions on the Message.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 5.—The views of the members of both houses, concerning the president's message, are freely expressed. Ex-Speaker Reed said: "It is exceedingly disappointing, both in matter and manner. That part of the message which relates to tariff, asseverates that house committee in charge of that subject has formulated plans and devised methods for taxation which as a member of the committee I have not even heard proposed. It is rather an unusual sensation to learn of deeds done by a committee, not in the committee room, but from the president of the United States. Has that committee ceased, in form, to be composed of both parties, and has it without even the formality of saying a word to open committee, informed the president of its determination in such a way that the president can officially communicate it to the house? How long has it been a part of our system that a committee of an independent branch and above all the ways and means committee, which controls the national purse, shall report to congress through the president? Is this a result of the rumored blending of the appointive with the legislative power? It is bad enough to have the tariff bill made up by a little coterie, but to have it communicated to the president before it reaches even the committee, and still less the house, shows a determination to be moved by no facts and modified by no arguments, which makes apparent the absurdity of appointing Republicans on the committee of ways and means at all.

Mr. Springer approved the reference to Hawaii, as the only course consistent with international honor and comity. Gear, of Iowa, says that the president gives away the ways and means committee on the income tax, that he will restore Lilloukalan, and that he agrees with Hancock that the tariff is a local issue.

Boutelle, of Maine, said that it was the first executive document which charges a United States minister with malfeasance and treason.

Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, says that portion touching on the tariff, shows no facts that will have weight with tariff reformers.

Palmer, of Illinois, says the president's impression is very wide of the mark regarding fraudulent pensions.

Morrill, of Vermont, says the president's indorsement of a tariff bill not yet acted upon in committee is unexpected and remarkable.

Mitchell, of Oregon, was surprised to learn that the restoration of Queen Lilloukalan is really contemplated.

Dubois, of Iowa claims the message is lacking in force, strength and Americanism.

Jones, of Nevada, says there is no hope for silver while the present administration is in power.

Shoup, of Idaho, was disappointed at the marked absence of any recommendation of the recognition of silver.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 4.—Ex-President Harrison declined to talk on the message. "The impropriety of an ex-president discussing publicly the president's message" said he, is very palpable and I do not care to do so. I am a Republican and President Cleveland is a Democrat, consequently we differ radically in views and opinions and his suggestions and recommendations are not in accordance with my ideas. I notice, however, he goes down the line of the departments and treats of them fully. Its length too, is greater than the average message."

BRITISH OPINION.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Daily News today says of Cleveland's message: It was well worthy of the national crisis in which it was delivered.

The Chronicle says, in reference to Brazil and the Behring sea, there is nothing but what might have been foretold by President Harrison. It is otherwise with reference to Hawaii. In regard to reform tariff the Chronicle says: While President Cleveland will have the good wishes of every sound economist in the battle he has begun, it would be premature to regard it as already won, because the biggest battalions are at present on his side.

The Telegraph says: That portion of the message which displays President Cleveland at his best is in his reference to Hawaii. Such frankness and honesty of admission of mistake, and the declaration of his intention to reverse it reflects the highest possible credit upon the president and indirectly upon the nation also.

The Times commentaries says: "Those portions of the message bearing upon foreign affairs are conceived in a highly creditable spirit, and considering the chauvinism of our American kindfolk, it is more creditable that the president has frankly admitted the wrong done to Hawaii. Mr. Cleveland would doubtless be inclined to go a good deal further than the Wilson bill, but recognized no obstacle to progress caused by and deficit in it. The Wilson bill would benefit the American workingmen and place manufacturers upon something like a level with their foreign competitors. Whether these changes in the long run will benefit British industry and trade is doubtful.
