SUGGESTED COMMENT.

The county roads are still navigable.
 That men from the Santiam let the gas out of Penney's motorial boom.
 The laborers of the Oregon Pacific want their wages, not charity.
 The Populists have quit bragging on Penney as a champion of the oppressed.
 How much does Governor Penney contribute to the Salem city board of charities?
 All suffering Santiam settlers can get a letter of charity by calling on Governor Penney.
 The defrauded Oregon Pacific laborers want protection from the state, not a pass to the poorhouse.
 Our state government can only protect people after they go crazy or commit a crime.

The two extremes of society seem to flourish under hard times, revivals and prize-fights.
 Corbett says: "I have every respect for the law." Not enough to hurt. Not enough to quit an unlawful business.

THE JOURNAL will not allow capitalistic and professional classes to oppress the people if it is in power to prevent it.
 Citizens of Oakville, Linn county, demand that the state take charge of the Oregon Pacific and build the jute mill.

The only transfer of land noted in one of our boom towns was a big chunk of river bottom that was recently washed away by flood.
 Governor Penney might have given that destitute settler from the Santiam who called on him a letter of introduction to the Salem board of trade.

Governor Penney probably thinks the Oregon Pacific laborers who want help to get their pay are all Populists and will vote for him anyhow.
 A leading virtue among many alleged newspapers is to keep judiciously still about important questions of the day.

There are no infant industries struggling into developments under the Cleveland administration. It takes a pretty healthy adult to live at all.
 Everybody who has an unpaid claim against the Oregon Pacific railroad will be given a letter of introduction to the Salem City Board of charities by calling at the governor's office.

Governor Penney should get out registration papers for his dear friend Rork who has left the state. He ought to be getting him ready to run for congress again.
 The Emperor of Germany has presented the Emperor of Japan a horse. There are thousands of men in Oregon who would be only too glad of a chance to make such a gift.

Herr Krupp, the German gun maker, is respectfully informed that Uncle Sam does not want his $700,000 gun, unless it taken to Washington, it would be warranted to go off on its own accord and save this country three more years of Cleveland administration misery. Then it would be cheap at any price.

A FIELD FOR TAXATION.

As the Democrats are looking for new things to tax we suggest they tax long speeches and editorials. Verbosity is a luxury, which does not even benefit the man who indulges. Speeches in congress over five minutes long, or out of congress over ten minutes, could be taxed to the perpetrator. There would be an enormous saving of expense of public printing and telegraphing and typesetting on the daily press.
 Writers using words of over three syllables, or over a quarter of a column for an editorial, could be taxed, at a great increase of intelligence and abolition of redundancy. Newspapers printing over eight pages, or authors taking more space for a book than Shakespeare occupied with one of his plays, ought to be taxed so much a page. The beauty of this line of taxation is that it would be a vast saving of time and money besides yielding a revenue collected entirely off human vanity.

THE PALAIS ROYAL.

Founded by a Cardinal, inhabited by Kings and a Revolutionary Mobbed.
 A building typical of Paris is the Palais Royal. This series of buildings, with its theaters, restaurants, shops, galleries and gardens, is quite an epitome of Paris. Founded by a cardinal, inhabited by kings and occupied by republicans, it has in its time played many parts.

The Palais Royal was destined to be the birthplace of more than one revolution. It was here that the great movement of 1789 and the minor one of July, 1830, began. The revolution of July seems, in the first instance, to have been intended simply as a protest, an act of resistance against arbitrary measures, and in particular against the muzzling of the press to such an extent as to render it impossible under modern conditions to publish a newspaper.

The celebrated ordinances had the immediate effect of throwing a multitude of journeyman printers out of work, and it was by these men that in one part of the city the insurrection was commenced. With them the question was not a political one in theory alone. It was a question whether they should get the hateful ordinances repealed or remain with out work—that is to say, starve. July 26 passed off very calmly in Paris as a whole. At the Palais Royal, however, some young men were seen mounting chairs, as formerly Camille Desmoulins had done.

"They read The Monitor aloud," says a witness of the scene, "appealed to the people against the infraction of the charter and endeavored by violent gesticulation and inflammatory harangues to excite in their hearers and themselves an appetite for agitation." The most active section of the bourgeoisie went to work on the 27th, and nothing was left undone to stir up the people. Three papers had submitted to the ordinances from conviction or from party spirit, but The Globe, The National and The Temps, which defiantly continued to appear, were profuse ly circulated.

The police order of the preceding day forbidding their publication only served to stimulate curiosity. Copies were disposed of by hundreds in the cafes, the reading rooms and the restaurants. Journalists hurried from manufactory to manufactory and from shop to shop to read the articles aloud and comment upon them. Individuals in the dress and with the manners and appearance of men of fashion were seen mounting on stone posts and holding forth as professors of insurrection, while students paraded the streets armed with canes, waving their hats and crying, "Vive la Charte!"—Old and New Paris.

A Witty Reply.
 Mr. Leland tells a story of Thackeray in America. There was a very beautiful lady in Boston whom the great novelist much admired and to whom he presented two magnificent bronzes. Having dined one evening at her house, he said as they entered the drawing room, "Now I suppose that, according to your American custom, we shall all put our feet up on the chimney piece?" "Certainly," replied his hostess, "and as your legs are so much longer than others, you may put your feet on top of the looking glass," which was 10 feet from the ground. Thackeray's remark looks rather like one of his sly ironical allusions to the exaggerations of Mrs. Trollope, but Mr. Leland tells us that he was offended at the retort, "and showed it."—Jenness Miller Monthly.

Zulu "Smellers Out."
 News has been received here from Zululand to the effect that 12 Zulus have been sentenced to death for the participation in a murder which was discovered by their peculiar practice of "smelling out." When the chief is ailing or cattle are sick, or any unexplained misfortune overtakes the kraal, the inhabitants are made to seat themselves in a great circle, and the sorcerers of the tribe, after the performance of certain hideous rites, discover the one who, by means of charms or the practice of black magic, has brought the evil upon them. Him or her they touch with a wand, and the touch is equivalent to a sentence of death. In this case the murderers smelled out are alleged to have put their victims to death by means of slow poison.—London Telegraph.

Sympathy Versus Flattery.
 When the heart is breaking from an old love, there is apt to be a crevice through which a new attachment enters and wholly heals the fracture. Women are prone to be sentimental and sympathetic. A man they might not ordinarily admire or esteem may arouse their profound interest by appearing to be wretched. Then their pity is in danger of becoming passion. "I am so unhappy," from a man's lips, has perhaps inflamed as many feminine hearts as the most ardent "I love you." Many persons think they need sympathy when all they want is flattery.—Junius Henri Browne in Century.

The Power of Habit.
 Take "habit" to pieces, and you will see how difficult it is to destroy it in name or nature.
 Hi—abit, still remains.
 Ha—bit, still there.
 Hab—bit, still stays.
 Habi—t, not "t" totally gone.—Ram's Horn.

HOME DYEING MADE EASY.
 Handsome Colors That Never Fade.

It's Easy to Dye with Diamond Dyes—Black for Cotton, Wool and Silk. It Does Not Crack—Makes Old Cloaks, Gowns and Silks Look Like New.
 "It is really marvelous," said a Commercial street druggist, "how the hard times have increased the sale of Diamond dyes. Ladies buy one package as an experiment, and find the dye so easy to use that they color all their old clothing, and come out with new gowns, cloaks, and suits for the whole family. The Diamond black dyes seem especially popular, I often selling a half dozen packages to one customer."

For more than ten years Diamond dyes have been the favorite family dyes in Salem, and although imitation package dyes have been offered for sale, on account of their inferiority to the Diamond in strength, fastness, and beauty, they could not get any lasting sale.
 Diamond dyes are put up in over fifty different colors for wool and silk, with special dyes for cotton. Their fast black dyes are so simple and easy to use that even a child can dye a perfect color with them, one that will not fade, crack, or wash out. There are three different kinds (for wool, for cotton, and for silk and feathers), and they all make a full, rich black equal to the handsomest shade made by the professional dyer.

NEWS NOTES.

Daniel Duty, a missing man who disappeared from Moscow, Idaho, the other day, was found alive but very ill, housed up at a neighbor's. He is likely to die, as he was nearly heartbroken over debt.

J. W. Lewis, of Crowley, Or., butchered eight hogs last week, the gross weight of which was 2552 pounds, the smallest one weighed 302 and the largest one 600 pounds. Seven of the number were just one year old, and have been kept fat enough for pork all the time, fattened on wheat. Thus demonstrating the fact that a little stock, well kept, is more profitable than large droves half starved.

Ask Your Friends.
 Who have taken Hood's Sarsapilla what they think of it, and the replies will positively be in its favor. Simply what Hood's Sarsapilla does, that tells the story of its merit. One has been cured of indigestion, or dyspepsia, another finds it indispensable for sick headache or biliousness, while others report remarkable cures of scrofula, catarrh, rheumatism, salt rheum, etc.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable.
 Corbett thinks Mitchell would like to get a chance to fight Jackson. It will add to his fame if Jackson whipped Mitchell. If he didn't it would save Corbett an ugly job.
