"save his life," and no other man can save it. Moreover the working of thought and feeling in both a religion and worship will not bear the talking about them very much, because self, always self comes into the thought and speech. It is as dangerous as to begin to tell of one's humility, whilst the words are on his lips,—nay, when the thought comes into his heart, his humility no longer existed. It is one of the most interesting studies of a person watching the Christians about him, to see the varying forms of beauty in character, or the places of hindering and delay as made by the varying types of piety, or the differing methods of religious culture which have come to different men and women. But a Christianity which consists at its center of worship and loving obedience to the true God, and loving service to real men,—this will bring into any soul, at the last, the highest beauty of which it is capable. And "So shall the King desire thy beauty."

But before I close, it may be that some one would like to have me say a few words about the hindrances to the coming of beauty into the soul of a young woman.

I have just been dwelling upon one of these hindrances,—an imperfect knowledge and false practice of Christianity, which is a starting place of thought in any broad discussion of the subject. But there are other,—shall I say subsidiary or minor hindrances? A possible hindrance to the coming of real beauty of soul is the possession of the form of beauty, the outward semblance of the inner fact.

Did you ever look upon what had once been a "a pretty face," but now was a contenance all seamed by sin, or crossed and marked and puckered by envy or hatred or vanity and self conceit?

"Is beauty of face and form an evil thing?" Nay, it is a good thing, as is the money which a rich man has ready for his sons, but for how many of such sons this money stands in the way of the gaining of the manliness which came to the father in the struggles of life through which came his gains, the manliness which was a product of his life a thousand times more valuable than the wealth which he had gotten. Anything which brings a weak soul to center on itself is a hindering thing to the soul's outgoing of activity of usefulness and so is a hinderance to beauty. All good gifts of God lay their values in our hands, we use them or lose them.

And education, the higher intellectual culture, does it help or hinder the weaving of the robes of beauty for the soul? Here again is treasure handed to us. I have seen one place of the marring of character in men or women by so-called education,—one abuse of the good put at the service of every one of us, it was where the educating went too far, or not far enough, when it became superficial education, or was stopped at such point of advancement toward a given end of rounded culture as left the student with hardly a glimpse of his ignorance, and all the self conceit of the man or woman was puffed up into a bubble of vanity. I know that self conceit is a matter of individual character in part, but what I mean now is what has been so long observed in college students after being in the institution for a few months, that at the end of the first year they become "wise fools," Sophomores. Hardly a more disagreeable companion or unpleasant neighbor or unhansome person can be found than one who is condemned to be a lifelong Sophomore, whether he or she has or has not gone to college.

Shall I say anything of the influences of social life, and of the amusements and its associations of that life upon beauty of character for its hindering? I can speak only of principles here, the application of your principles must be made by each one for herself or himself in one's own life. In social life, and in all things which make the purity and sweetness and power of the home, American women are almost omnipotent; and all methods of life, all customs, all amusements which go to make against the home, its building or its keeping in its purity and power, are methods of life, customs and amusements to be discarded and discouraged by them as hindrances to beauty.

May I come to particulars and suppose some one of you to be tempted to marry some vile, unclean wretch, dressed in broadcloth, perhaps rich and feted, perhaps a member of congress! Commit suicide rather! God and nature, your own nature, will forgive it sooner.

Perhaps you may be tempted to read an unclean book, to see and hear a foul play upon the boards, to put yourself into the arms of strange men in the whirl of the waltz—I would rather have my daughter go to the pest house and come forth with face marked for life with the finger of the smallpox, than have her soul so pitted with the marks of the finger of the demon of uncleanness!

Finally—whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. "So Shall the King Desire Thy Beauty."

ISCARIOT'S KISS.

Tacoma News, Dem: David B. Hill has sacrificed everything in his insane desire to annoy and harrass President Cleveland. His name will never again be mentioned in a Democratic national convention save, perhaps, as a warning to vindictive spirits.

He could have made himself leader of the senate, for he is first in organizing and directing ability in that body, but he threw away his opportunity that he might have revenge on a personal opponent. He could, perhaps, be excused for opposing some of the President's appointments, and even for criticising his Hawaiian policy, but to refuse to stand upon the Democratic platform, a platform the people triumphantly endorsed, to repudiate the obligation of the party and at such a time as this—surely there could be no more traitorous or dastardly act.

David Bennett Hill has ruled himself out of the Democratic party—he has stepped off the tariff reform plank—he stands beside Hoar, Aldrich, and Allison.

Senator Hill can never regain prestige and power within the Democratic party. It was charged when he obtained the solid Republican vote in the senate against the confirmation of Wheeler H. Peckman, that he had sold himself to the Republicans for their votes. The Democratic party cannot but look upon Senator Hill's speech of yesterday as a fulfillment of that agreement.—Iscariot's kiss.

"Fat Doctor Bills Make Lean Wills,"

but Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy costs less than one doctor's visit. Catarrh is a loathsome, dangerous disease, and the time has come when to suffer from it is a disgrace. No person of culture and refinement cares to inflict upon his friends his offensive breath, disgusting hawking and spitting and disagreeable efforts to breathe freely and clear the throat and nose—hence the cultured and refined use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. And no wise and prudent man cares to run the risk of leaving his family without a protector by letting his "slight catarrh" run into serious or fatal throat and lung troubles, hence the wise and prudent use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The proprietors of this remedy are so confident of its curative properties, that they have made a standing offer of a reward of $500 cash for a case they cannot cure.

AMONG THE GEMS.

Pliny in the first century was the first writer to describe the diamond.

The Regent diamond, the property of the French government, weighs 136 carats and is valued at 12,000,000 francs.

The finest emerald in Europe belongs to the czar. It weighs only 30 carats, but is of perfect color and transparency.

The Mexicans carved the emerald with wonderful skill, using only siliceous powder and copper tools alloyed with tin.

The royal crown of Great Britain is composed almost entirely of diamonds, pearls and rubies, weighs 39 ounces and 5 pennyweights troy and is valued at $1,300,000.

The ruby, sapphire, oriental topaz, oriental amethyst, oriental aquamarine oriental chrysolite, hyacinth, star ruby, star sapphire, star topaz, are all corundums of different colors.

Cortez obtained in Mexico five emeralds of wonderful size and beauty. One was cut like a rose, another in the shape of a horn, a third in that of a fish with diamond eyes, a fourth like a bell with a pearl for a clapper, the fifth was a cup with a foot of gold and with four little chains, each ended with a large pearl.—St Louis Globe-Democrat.

Too Much of a Problem.

"How often," he said, with intense sarcasm, "do you expect to be engaged this summer?"

"Oh, dear!" she answered, "don't talk that way. You know I despise arithmetic."—Washington Star.

The Trouble.

Wiggsby—I hear you have been getting up a flying machine. Have you?

Biggsby—No! I have been inventing a flying machine, but I can't get it up worth a cent.—Indianapolis Journal.

Plasters.

If you are thinking of buying a plaster, remember that you will place it upon your body and cannot get a plaster that will be too good for you.

Allcock's porus plaster is the best plaster made. Your druggist may have some other plaster on his shelves which he is anxious to get rid of, or else some worthless imitation purchased at a low price for the purpose of substitution. Do not accept his "Just as good" plea, insist upon having the genuine. Allcock's porus plaster has no equal.

Brandreth's pills can always be relied upon.

Seven Surgical Operations—Good Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Chas. A. Stalker
West Walworth, N. Y.

No one who reads the experience of Mr. Stalker can fail to sympathize with him in his long illness, or to rejoice with him that by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla he is now restored to perfect health.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"In March, 1890, I injured my right leg with an axe. The wound did not heal and the bone became diseased. I was laid up a year, and in April, 1891, I was taken to the hospital at Rochester and remained another year. During that time I underwent the last taking away the limb at the hip. For six weeks after, the wound healed slowly, while the pains in my groin were almost unbearable. Then the wound ceased to heal, the surgeons gave me up as a hopeless case and I was discharged from the institution. A week after returning home, I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking the first bottle the pains left my groin and have not returned. While taking the second bottle the wound at the hip entirely healed. The third bottle made me feel building up my system so that I could eat without distress and gained 14 lbs. Hood's Sarsaparilla regulated my bowels and has cleansed my blood, in fact I cannot tell all it did for me." CHAS. A. STALKER, West Walworth, N. Y. Get HOOD'S.

Seven Surgical Operations
