REFORM SCHOOL COMPLETED.

The New Wing Now Ready for Use.

A VERY CREDITABLE PIECE OF WORK.

Which Will Always Be an Honor to Oregon.

On August 20th the new wings to Oregon's magnificent reform school building were turned over by Contractor Hazell and accepted by the state authorities. The state board of education, which has this work in charge, is composed of Gov. Penneyer, Supt. McElroy and Secretary McBride. They were assisted in the examination by Architect Knighton, who has furnished the plans and ably superintended the construction throughout, and also by Supervisor Bryant. As has been stated before in these columns, the board has accepted the buildings, and expresses great satisfaction over the manner in which the contracts have been executed.

The new wings have been planned by Architect Knighton to conform to the style of the original structure, and to a casual visitor it would appear to have been all one man's work, so perfectly are the old and the new joined together in style and workmanship.

In the basement of the north wing are the bath and store rooms. There are in both basements shower baths for nearly fifty boys. The second floor forms a large dining room and pantry. The third floor forms the chapel or assembly room. This will seat over 300 persons, has a good sized stage, and is an elegant room for the purpose. The fourth floor forms a fine large dormitory. The fourth floor of the south wing is also used for a similar purpose. These rooms are light and airy, have toilet facilities and are well connected with fire escapes. The second and third floors of the south wing form class rooms with fine blackboards and all modern appliances. There are also suites of rooms to be occupied by officers of the school and teachers on both of these floors.

REFORM SCHOOL BUILDING.

are all in natural wood finished in oil. They consist of ash, larch, redwood and yellow pine and present a rich appearance. The work of the painters alone represent a vast amount of labor. T. J. Kress, one of Salem's reliable painters, has had the contract for this work, and has employed from three to five good men there since last November. The outside work, which included the sanding, has been in charge of his foreman, Wm. Marsh, and is a thorough piece of workmanship. On the inside Mr. Kress has given it his personal attention. This work has been most exacting in detail. The puttying alone required a dozen different shades to match the varied hues of the wood and no less than five coats of work have been put upon the job, requiring no end of sand papering and rubbing down. The result is a high and lasting finish, which will always be a credit to the building as well as the mechanic who had charge of the work. The last work on the building was done on Saturday and the painting was completed on Monday—a prompt job indeed. The wood finishing of this building, both inside and out, includes a great variety of exacting work. The rails, balusters and newel posts are of hard wood, while the wainscoting and moldings are of native woods and redwood. Some handsome doors ornament the different parts of the building. These, as well as the windows and all the other shop work, were made right here in Salem at the Ira Erb sash and door factory. That gentleman's superior skill as a mechanic is securing his shops many important contracts, including much of the state work now being done.

THE CONTRACT. Shortly after Architect Knighton had perfected all the plans, the contract for putting up these new wings was let, nearly a year ago, to A. J. Hazell, who has supplied all the material, except brick, and has pushed the work through before his time limit. The long rains last winter delayed brick work considerably, but since then all departments have been crowded as rapidly as men could do it. To facilitate all work and make it possible for Mr. Hazell to give the contractor his closest personal attention, all hands were boarded on the grounds. He has employed from 10 to 20 mechanics on this contract nearly all the time, and he said to his credit, has paid wages above what was being paid many men during the same time. This fact alone had much to do with the satisfactory manner in which the work has been closed up ahead of time, and of course insured a better quality of work throughout.

The industrial building and water tower are still in course of construction and when completed will make an imposing edifice. The grounds about the buildings form a beautiful ensemble, and are now being graded up according to plans furnished by Prof. Coates, of the State Agricultural college. When all this work is completed the place will present a grand view.

THE HEATING APPARATUS. In the basement of the north wing is placed the low-pressure gravity hot water plant, which will furnish the heat for the magnificent new buildings. It is of such magnitude as to attract attention at once, and the fact that the entire heating system was planned and executed by a Salem firm is a source of considerable pride. The Dugan Bros. plumbing and heating company have the honor in this job of putting in the largest and best hot water heating plant in the Pacific northwest, and they have more than satisfied their own expectations. The state authorities in charge are highly pleased, and after a thorough test have pronounced it first-class in every respect.

The boilers, of which there are two, are horizontal steel boilers with a heating capacity equal to 25,000 square feet of radiation and were manufactured by the Kewanee Boiler Co., of Kewanee, Ill. They were made to order for this particular job and are a credit to the makers. Each boiler contains 68 3-inch tubes and so constructed as to give the very best service. They are located in the eastern end of the north wing and substantially set in brickwork.

The smoke instead of being taken from the front of the boiler as is customary, is carried over the top of the boilers under a brick arch and connected with the main flue at the rear. The advantage of this method of setting boilers is shown in the cohesiveness of connecting flues, the products of combustion being so taken up by the water in the apparatus that the temperature of these flues is lower than that of the flow mains. The boilers are so connected that one or both may be used as the outside temperature may demand. From a header on the tops of the boilers an 8-inch main flow pipe is carried along the length of the north wing turning to the main building, where it branches into two 6-inch mains which skirt the main building and south wing. These six-inch mains are carried to the extreme end of the south wing where they are connected into an 8-inch return main running to the boilers.

There are 82 radiators in the entire building, which will heat every part of it easily and thoroughly. The old steam heater has been taken out of the main building, and is superseded by this improved system. The old plant will be put into the industrial building and water tower now being erected. The Dugans have expanded their business to such an extent that they are making a specialty of big heating contracts, and have the confidence of all patrons.

THE FINISHING.
 The inside finishings of the building in which Paine's celery compound is held by physicians for building up the weak, the sickly and the nervous, is because all its ingredients are known to medicinal men to feed the nerves and provide pure and rich blood for all the weak parts of the body. Every trace of nervous exhaustion disappears when the nerves that govern the functions of the body are thus abundantly supplied with their appropriate food.

The disturbances of the nervous system, whether neuralgia, debility, extreme nervousness or heart trouble, are due to derangements in nutrition. Headache, a sense of weight on top of the head, a feeling of constriction about the forehead; these are very significant symptoms and should be heeded. Better and more complete nutrition is demanded for the nerves and brain. Thin, pale faces, wasted frames, unhealthy skin and low spirits tell unmistakably of blood too thin and poor to properly nourish the body.

Paine's celery compound brings an increased, natural appetite, assists the assimilation of the food and quiets and restores a healthy nervous action.

AUGUST FOR HEALTH.

It Must Be Whether You Take a Vacation or Not.

Take Time Now to Strengthen Nerves and Body.

See That Every Part of the Body Becomes Well Fed.

Eleven months for business, for money-making, for absorbing work. Take August for becoming strong and well.

Get back to your proper weight; relieve the tired nerves of their irritability; fill the body with ruddy, vigorous serviceable blood. You will work to twice the purpose with a clear head and a body undisturbed by aches and pains.

Give Paine's celery compound a fair trial in August.

Weariness and lack of strength is a matter of the nerves and brain. It is the exhaustion of the nerve centers that produce the feeling of lassitude and depression.

Digestion and assimilation are the first to become affected by diminished nerve power, and as these functions are so closely connected with every part of the body the entire system shares in their disorder. Men and women about middle age take little exercise, their blood becomes slow and impure and all their important organs sluggish, while a constantly increasing load of anxiety and care keeps their nerves from being properly nourished. Such persons will find a steady gain in health, in vigor and good spirits from Paine's celery compound taken steadily through the month of August.

The reason for the high regard in which Paine's celery compound is held by physicians for building up the weak, the sickly and the nervous, is because all its ingredients are known to medicinal men to feed the nerves and provide pure and rich blood for all the weak parts of the body. Every trace of nervous exhaustion disappears when the nerves that govern the functions of the body are thus abundantly supplied with their appropriate food.
