KILLING THE DEER.

From a party of gentlemen who recently returned from Fish Lake, says the News-Times, it is learned that the Indians are following out their yearly program of wantonly slaughtering large numbers of deer, killing dogs and fawns indiscriminately.

The above is being copied in a great many papers and passes presumably for superlative wisdom, suggestive of the value, importance and necessity of a state game warden.

The Indian argument is the rankest rot. As long as the Indian was in the country, the country was full of deer. It is civilization that kills both deer and Indian and causes them to disappear.

Books were printed in Scotland as early as 1509, but the titles of the volumes and the names of the publishers are not certain.

At Athens, in the time of Demosthenes, the bookmakers sold a small wooden account book for recording contracts at a quarter of an obolus each—about a cent.

Many medieval bindings are so incrustated with gold and precious stones that the legitimate work of the binder seems to have been turned over to the lapidary and goldsmith.

The discoverer of bookbinders' glue was one Philatinus, an Athenian. He made the glue for fastening together sheets of parchment, and so highly was his invention appreciated that the Athenians erected a statue in his honor.

A great many errors in the ancient manuscripts were perpetuated by a rule of the monastic orders that a copy must be exactly followed by the scribe. Even when he perceived a mistake he must not correct it.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Double breasted jackets will be in favor for fall and winter. Corsets are made very loose across the chest and tightly laced around the waist and across the hips.

Always have the edge of your glove meet the edge of the sleeve, whatever the length of the latter may be. The shoulder capes made on jackets are flat and narrow, following the contours of front, back and shoulders.

A Frenchwoman thinks nothing of paying $15 or $20 for a corset, but a corset at that price lasts a couple of years. Bodices are made to lap over from one side to the other in the front, so as to make an unbroken line from sleeve to sleeve.

Exercise. One reason for the fact that the general health of the community is growing better every year is that more people take regular exercise. Exercise, however, has its difficulties. If indulged in a little too long, or so violently as to make one liable to take cold, it results in stiffness and soreness of the muscles and joints.

Alcock's Porous Plasters are invaluable in such cases. Placed on the back, the chest, on the limb, they afford instant relief and leave the muscle all free from soreness. Some athletes cut them into strips and apply them to parts of the limbs where they could not put a whole Plaster and find that they are a great relief and assistance.

measures was so constructed that the people were given to understand that it did not mean any general change at all. The people are robbed so often by the changes in school books that they would have retired to private life any legislator who voted for a direct change, hence the necessity for a roundabout course.

The legislature to meet in January will be presented with a million and a half or so of brick at the penitentiary, manufactured for the jute mill, for which the last legislature made an appropriation aggregating some $200,000. These bricks will have cost some $4,000 or $5,000.

If Oregon wants to do something to encourage the beet sugar industry let the legislature offer some inducements to capital to establish sugar factories and farmers to engage in cultivation of the beet, by exempting their investment and land used for the crop from taxes for five years.

Rubber books to record books and other large volumes were introduced in 1841. In 1862 it is said that a book, name not given, was printed from vulcanized rubber stamps.

The first book to have its leaves numbered was Zep's "Fables," printed by Caxton in 1484. Chinese printing is certainly as early as A. D. 593, books of that date being now in existence.

Books were printed in Scotland as early as 1509, but the titles of the volumes and the names of the publishers are not certain. Samples of oriental binding brought home by the crusaders gave European binders many ideas for the advancement of the art.

Of all the materials for permanent writings papyrus is one of the most unsatisfactory. All ancient manuscripts of this material are almost as brittle as dead leaves.
